THE STRANGEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK

AT THE YACHT CLUB

DEAR Madge:
The annual regatta came off last Saturday, and we all spent the day at the yacht club. Jack assisted his very good friend Billie Brown to steer his motorboat to victory.

The piazza, with its small round tables, was the most popular part of the club, for, in spite of a stiff breeze, it was hot.

One sweet young girl wore an attractive gown of pale-pink cotton voile, whose principal adornment was pink mother-of-pearl buttons.

The prevailing kimono pattern was used for the bodice, which had a flat round collar and broad folded-back cuffs with a double row of stitching at each edge.

The bodice buttoned in the center of the back with a row of closely set buttons, which were also used as trimming down the front of the skirt.

Skirt and bodice joined at the raised waist line with a cord. A jabot of princess lace was at the collar's edge with a small pump bow of black velvet. She wore a close turban-shaped hat in green silk trimmed with a band of velvet, from which a long-stemmed pink rose fell gracefully over the hat's crown.

A striking gown of corn-colored batiste, worn by a stately girl, was cut on decided empire lines, having a very short-waisted bodice joined to the skirt under a broad girdle of empire-green satin, which was caught on the side with two long sash ends finishing with bows.

A narrow flat-filling trimming the neck at the bodice, which was cut in a deep V, and extended down the front of the skirt to the hem.

A set-in yoke of lace showed a touch of embroidery at the throat.

American-beauty marquiseette combined with flowered foulard made another pretty costume.

In this the bolero jacket was the keynote of the gown. This, of marquiseette, was cut with a broad opening in the front and caught high on the chest with a flat bow of black velvet ribbon.

An underskirt of foulard had over it a tunic of marquiseette, held in about the knees with a belt of black ribbon showing a flat bow in the front.

With this was worn a broad brimmed straw boater with a narrow band of black velvet under the brim and a long-looped bow of velvet placed at the back of the crown.

I wore my linen coat suit and that adorable straw-poke hat with the rose wreath and upstanding bow of velvet for trimming.

Oh, I almost forgot to tell you that your old friend Jimmie came in second in the principal race.

It was a most exciting day, and I was too tired when night came to go to the dance.

Affectionately,
ELEANOR.

BRIGANDS OF OLD WERE AMATEURS

Rome's Taxicab Drivers Outdo Them at Every Stage of Game.

Twenty-Three-Year-Old Woman Proves Queen of Credulity.

(By CLEMENT J. BARRETT.)

ROME, Aug. 26.—The picturesque brigands of song, story and stage have been pretty well stamped out, but they have in a measure been succeeded by a new type in the persons of taxicab men. One of the greatest annoyances for travelers here is the mode in which the taximeter cabmen make a journey of one mile equal in price to two and a half, and all this through the way they manage the taximeter dials. This wholesale cheating of the public has become such a nuisance that the authorities have awakened to the necessity of having a uniform taximeter that will when opened show how it has been tampered with. The taxicab men cry out loudly against this, which curtails their powers of cheating, and the makers of taximeters bitterly complain that the selection of one sort of taximeter will cause反射 (reflections) on the makers of the others—so there is a great outcry against them.

Dr. Enrico Serafino, an Italian physician, tells us that neuroasthma results from talking too much. Thinking, making up phrases, listening to and forming arguments with hearers—all these entail a mental effort which excites the whole nervous system. The final result is a nervous breakdown.

SHE IS CREDULOUS.

Giuseppina Bisselli, aged 23, of Milan, is a remarkably credulous woman. If one may judge by the story which she told at the central police office, whether she repented to complain that she had been defrauded of her savings. She was approached by a woman dressed in black, who fixing her eyes upon the despondent Giuseppina, inquired what was the matter with her. The young woman poured out a heartload of woe. The black-robed dame was greatly sympathetic and knew precisely what the trouble was, she replied. "I have seen many cases of the kind. You have got a devil in you. Shall I get rid of him for you?"

Poor Giuseppina was too terrified to question the assertion. The wise woman thereupon told her to collect all her savings, put them in a box which her friend would give her and carry them as a present to the church. The box was soon ready, bound with a string, the knots of which were sealed, and the two women repatriated with it to the Church of San Carlo. The box was placed at the foot of the altar, a taper was lit, and Giuseppina recited the special prayers at the dictation of her kind instructor. Finally, the latter held up the box for a few moments, and returned it to her ingenuous dove. "The box is now blessed," she said; "carry it home, but do not open it for a week. You are relieved from your enemy. I will see you tomorrow." Tomorrow came; but it did not bring the unknown devil chaser. Giuseppina began to grow suspicious, but she was afraid to open the box until the week had expired. Then, with trembling fingers she broke the seals, and undid the string with which the box was tied. It contained nothing but a bundle of papers.

The box was provided with a safe bottom, which permitted the removal of its contents without breaking the seals or untangling any knots.

A Vatican dignitary recently told a friend that a factor in the Pope's deprecating state of his health is the credence he gave to the prophecy that limits his pontificate to nine years, the prophecy relating to nine having already been fulfilled with remarkable precision in earlier stages of his ecclesiastical career.

REFUSE TO PAY BRITISH 'RATES'

English Law Defied by Irish Residents of Island.

DUBLIN, Aug. 26.—The Sligo county council is much exercised in regard to an island whose inhabitants will not pay rates.

Innismurray, in the Atlantic ocean, between Sligo and Killaloe, County Donegal, is the island in question. In its report to the local government board, the rate collector stated that he could not get a boat on the mainland to take him to the island on such an errand as collecting rates, and at the last meeting of the Sligo county council it was stated that some years ago two officials of the county who tried to land on the island for the same purpose were stoned off the shore by the inhabitants.

The question as to how a landing could be effected was discussed by the council at its last meeting, and one member stated that a dredgeboat would be required for the purpose.

The island is one and a half miles long and a half mile broad, and there is no direct communication with it. About 15 families reside on the island, and they live chiefly on barley, potatoes and fish.

A special day is fixed every year for the celebration of marriages, as there are several months in the year when it is impossible for a clergyman to visit the island.

Although out of humanity's reach, and with few opportunities of reading, the newspapermen there are quick-witted and intelligent people, and are very interested in current affairs. There are several curious stones on the island called "cursing stones," for it is considered an unlucky thing for a person to turn those stones upon himself or disrupt them.

The Islanders conduct their own religious services on Sundays. At midday they all assemble in the remains of a little stone church, and recite the rosary and other prayers. Of the Islanders, an old man, acts as king, and settles any disputes that arise, but, as a rule, the greatest harmony prevails.

KING HAAKON IS DEMOCRACY ITSELF

(By ERIC GRUNDMARK)

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 26.—King Haakon of Norway, who celebrated his birthday, is one of the most democratic kings in Europe and he needs to be, as he rules over the most democratic kingdoms in the world. He is in reality, in all except name, the president of a republic.

There are no titles in Norway, the only kingdom in Europe of which this may be said. Plain Mr. is as high a title as any Norwegian may attain except he is of the royal family, and his nominal subjects, instead of using the stereotyped expression Your Majesty when addressing King Haakon, speak to him as Mister King.

King Haakon is one of the handsomest, best-dressed, and most popular monarchs in Europe. In his youth he served a severe apprenticeship, as in the Danish navy the cadets, during the first period of their service, have the same work, rations and quarters as ordinary seamen.

So the future King, during his first nine months on the training-ship Dronning Louise, had to take his turn in washing dishes after meals and in waiting on his messmates. This rough training has proved a valuable asset in his government as a source of Democracy. King Haakon, as the husband of the one-time Princess Maud of Wales, is a Knight of the Garter, and holds several British dignities. He is a good all-round sportsman. He rides well, is a keen shot and a first-rate billiard-player. Also he has scientific tastes, and is interested in mechanics and in new inventions, especially in those which are suited to the needs of the navy. And he likes gardening. Needless to say, his chief interests are centered in his only child and heir, the Crown Prince Olaf.

FRIENDSHIP TO INFLUENCE NATIONS

Fiancee of Heir to Throne Is Close Friend of Princess Louise.

Violent Scene Occurs in Lower House of Hungarian Parliament.

(By EMIL ANDRASSY.) VIENNA, Aug. 26.—The fact that Princess Zita of Parma, who is to wed Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, heir presumptive to the Austrian throne, is a very close friend of Princess Louise, the only daughter of the German Kaiser, is regarded as significant by students of the situation in Austria-Hungary, and it is believed this fact will have an important bearing on the succession should the Archduke Franz Ferdinand evince and disposition to cancel the renunciation of the throne for his son by his marginal wife, the former Countess Schatzky.

The idea is that the powerful influence of the German emperor would be exerted in favor of the husband of his daughter's dear friend.

It is announced that the wedding is to take place the last week in October in the chapel of the imperial palace in Vienna. Princess Zita is the thirteenth of the twenty children of Duke Robert of Parma nine of them being sons and eleven daughters. The villa where she is to wed took place—Portofino near Lucca—is one of the late duke's Italian possessions and greatly favored by the family as a summer residence. The widowed duchess Infanta Maria Antonia of Portugal was a great beauty. She is the youngest and handsomest of the six Braganza sisters whose brother is Don Miguel the pretender to the throne of Portugal.

VIOLENCE IN HOUSE.

A violent scene occurred in the lower house of the Hungarian parliament the other day. When M. Okolicsanyi rose to speak in favor of the defense reform bill he was frequently interrupted from the opposition benches by passionate cries. A violent altercation arose during the disturbance between M. Pozsgay of the Kosuth party and M. Pal of the government party.

M. Pozsgay rushed at M. Pal who met him half way with a staggering blow in the face with his fist. Indescribable uproar ensued and the president suspended the sitting with the direction that when it was resumed the two members should appear before the immunity committee of the house.

The two members will fight a duel with sabres.

Dr. Sylvester a German radical deputy whom the non-clerical Germans as the strongest parliament group recently caused to be elected president of the Austrian chamber delivered at Salzburg a frankly anti-English harangue. After extolling the work of Bismarck in creating the triple alliance, he said:

We (Austrian Germans) wish to bring about harmony between the Mediterranean powers. I am coining, perhaps for the first time, an idea that may be ill-received in country which is not well disposed towards the German-Germanic people. This idea is to Mediterreanize for the Mediterranean states. This is directed especially against a power which has its hands in all the affairs of the world germanische (Deutschland). We will not stand that, and we go hand in hand with the Italians and the French. We wish, also, to be recognized in the Mediterranean as fully valid Mediterraneans. When we establish unity among the Mediterranean powers, the powers in question will be solidly opposed. (Enthusiastic cheers.)

And Hungary, like other countries has been suffering from a spell of intense heat. Deaths from sunstroke have occurred daily in all parts of the monarchy. The highest shade temperature registered has been 112 degrees Fahrenheit, in southern Hungary. Vienna and Budapest suffered temperatures varying between 96 degrees and 101 degrees.

SKELETON 5000 YEARS OLD.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 26.—A stone cōrīn containing a skeleton, food, ale and implements of the stone age has been discovered in a cave in the Aland Isles. The character of the weapons and implements indicate they are of a period at least 3000 B.C. when the Aland Isles were submerged the cōrīn and its contents having been lowered in a depression in the sea bed which accounts for its wonderful preservation.

RAY OF CIVILIZATION. PEKING, Aug. 26.—A ray of Western civilization has penetrated into the Imperial Palace of China. The new Emperor is only five and a half years old, issued an edict providing for his education. In addition to the classical elements of Chinese education he is to be instructed in the causes of peace and war in China, "and elsewhere." There is great virtue in those two last words. Hitherto official China has never admitted to itself that there was any "elsewhere."

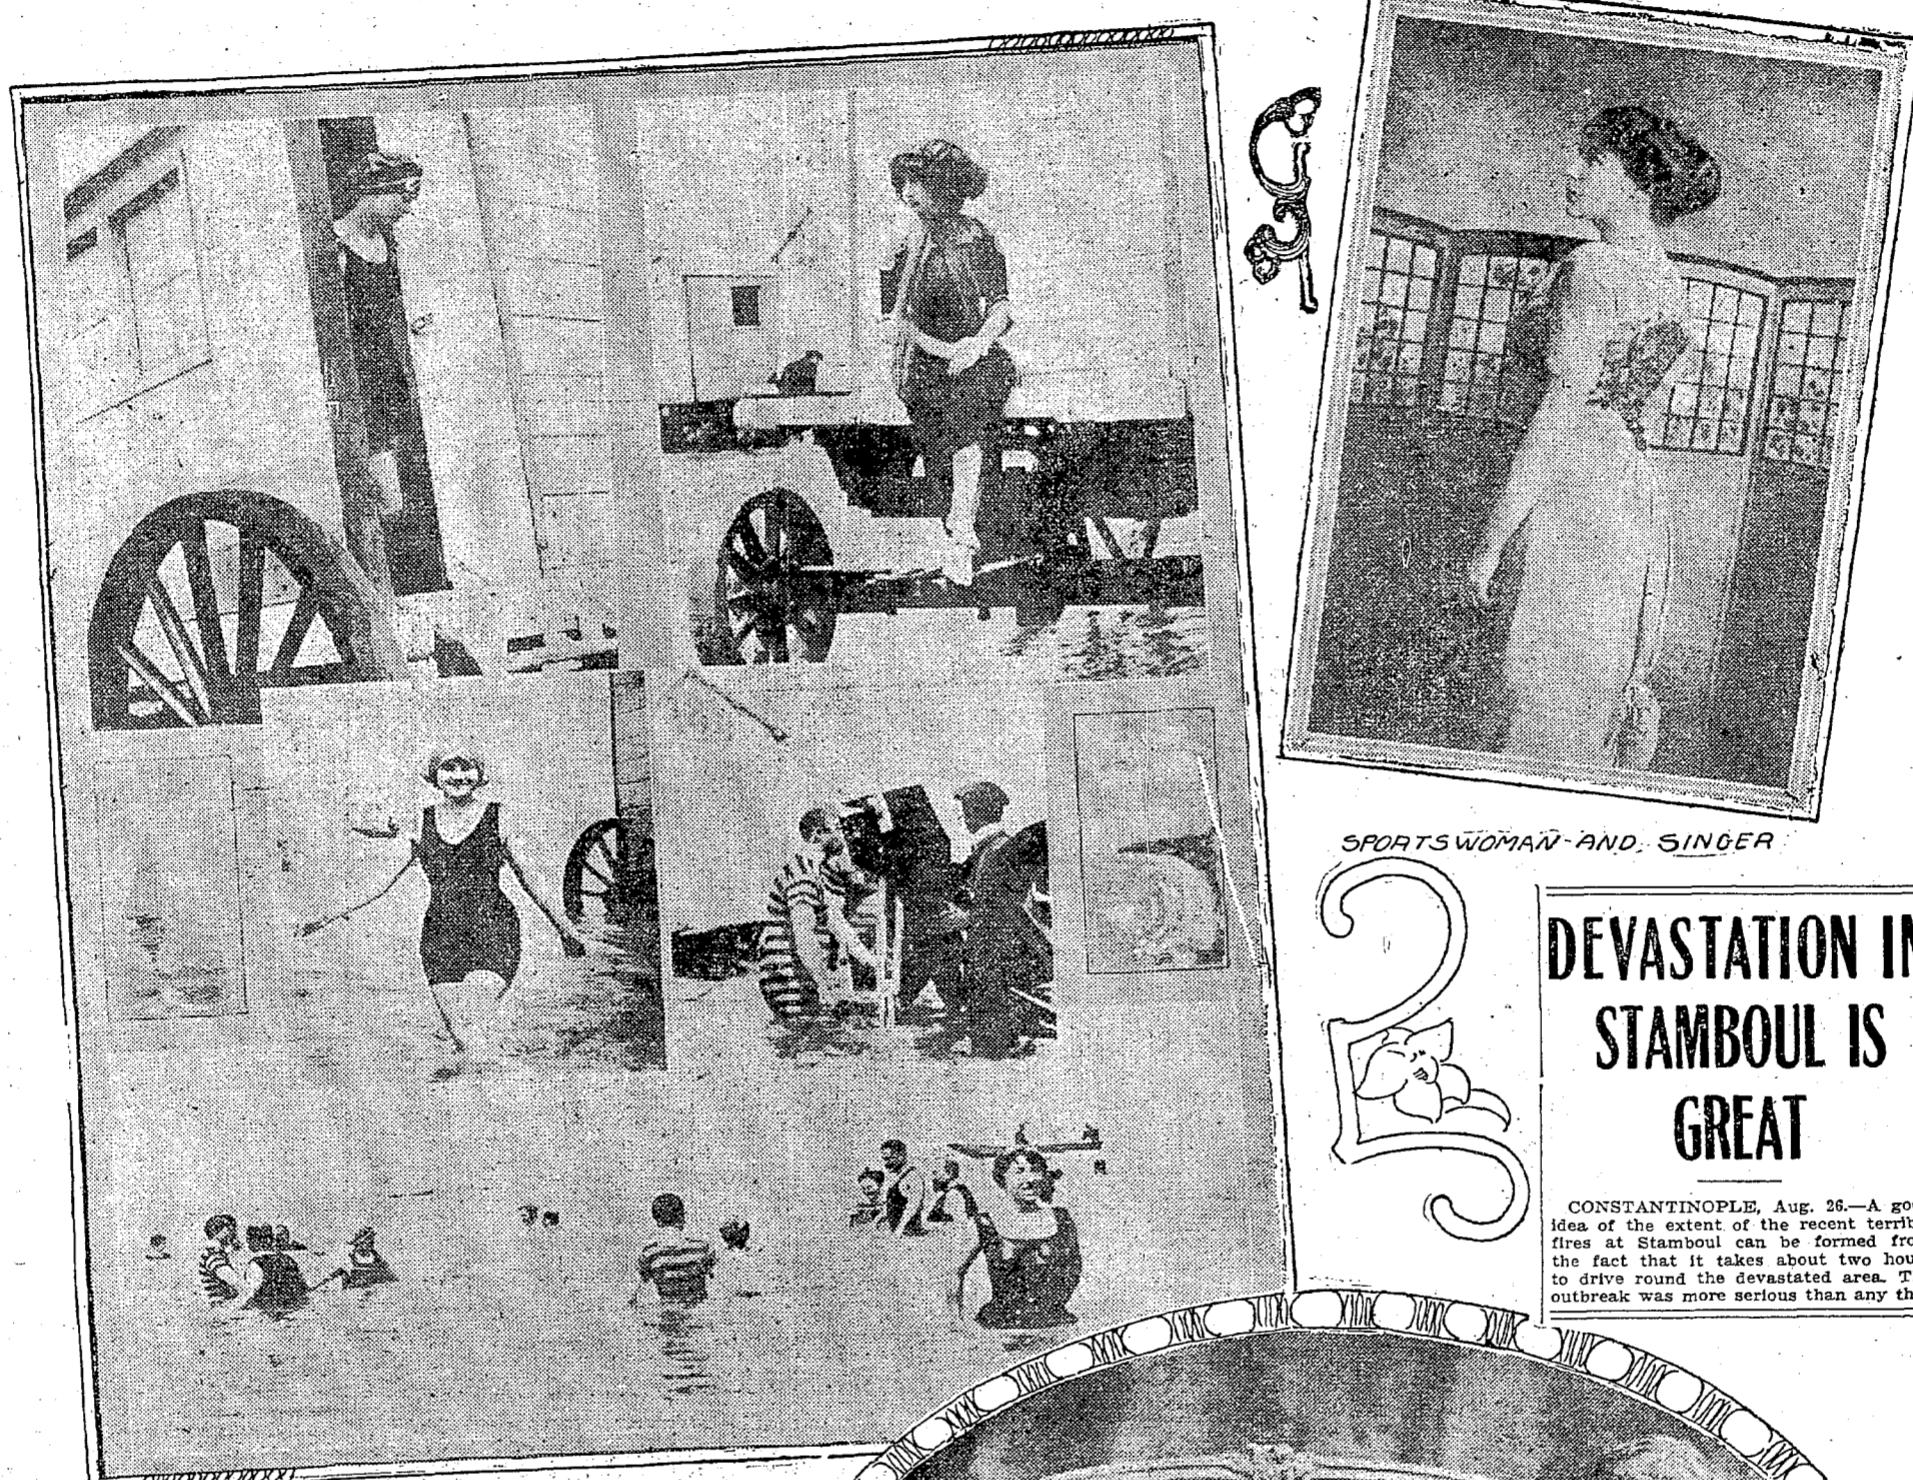

BURY HER ALIVE.

SOFIA, Aug. 26.—The only daughter of a Bulgarian family at Ustuk, after all living some time, was found inanimate recently, and her parents, thinking her dead, had her buried. In accordance with local customs, the same evening, a few hours afterwards a policeman passing the cemetery heard stifled cries from the newly-made grave. He ran to the parents' house, and a large number of townspeople attended the exhumation, only to find that the girl had died a few minutes previously from suocation.

"I am scouring the country for a clean play," said the theatrical manager. "Why don't you scour some of those you already have?" asked the dramatic critic.

"The less we have the easier we part with it," said the Wise Guy. "Yes, especially our hair," replied the Simple Mug.

British Army Will Use Trained Dogs as Scouts

(By PAUL LAMBETH.)

LONDON, Aug. 26.—After thinking the matter over for ten years, the army authorities are about to make use of dogs as auxiliaries. And now for the first time trained dogs are to be used by a British force on active service. Two big Airedales from Major Richardson's kennels are to accompany an expedition in the Indian border to punish the Abor tribe for the murder of Noel Williamson and his party.

Although nearly all the Continental countries, Japan and the United States only, count among their military units a dog corps, English military authorities have held divided views as to the value of these four-footed scouts, some officers contending that they would, by barking, disclose, not only the presence of an enemy, but also warn the enemy.

The great advantage, in my opinion," said Major Richardson, "of a dog to a sentry or outpost picket is that at once the value of his services is more than doubled. A picket accompanied by a dog will never give a false alarm, and in the case of attack the approach of an enemy is noticed by the dog owing to its keen sense of smell and sound long before the man has any definite idea of what is happening.

The prospect of an octogenarian Lord Mayor is provoking gossip here. Alderman Thomas Crosby, senior alderman who has not "passed the chair," as the formula runs, would in the ordinary course of events be selected next Lord Mayor of London, as Dr. Crosby, his son, continues in active business in Fenchurch street, while he is still a member of the firm of Crosby and Crosbie, medical practitioners. Sir Thomas having passed through the various stages of civic life—Common councillor in 1857, alderman in 1898 and sheriff in 1906—has no desire to finish his career with the highest honor the city has to offer. But he is in poor health. He recently went for a Continental holiday, at the conclusion of which he will determine whether he will offer himself for election at the Common Hall. Crosby is an ex-president of the society.

The last report of the working of the Educational (Provision of Meals) Act in England and Wales is not a disengaging one. Little attention seems to be paid to the inculcation of lessons in cleanliness, courtesy and good behavior among the children. Children in many instances use their fingers instead of spoons. There is no attempt made to restrain bolting of food or rudeness of behavior while they are at the table.

DEMAND DISMISSAL.

England's oldest inhabitant, Rebecca Clarke of Wood Green, gave remarkable proofs of her vitality a few days ago. Accompanied by one of her younger sons, a youth of 66, Mrs. Clarke, who is 105, attended an "old age" garden party given in her honor at Ye Old Five Bells, East Finchley, by the proprietor, Mr. J. Bambridge. To meet here there had assembled quite a number of youngsters still in their seventies, eighties or nineties, including Robert Andrews, the oldest salesman in the meat market at Smithfield, who is proud avowal of his 91 years. Mrs. Clarke, regarded with the tolerant smile of superiority, "We have a long way to go yet, young man," was her only comment. Mrs. Clarke was fetched from her home in a motorcar and she then walked unassisted through the house to the garden. Here she was introduced to Mr. Andrews and the oldest man and oldest woman present. "You see, I don't get a ride in a motor-car and a time like this every day," she explained, "so I can't help feeling joyful!"

Mr. Andrews was challenged to a game of croquet. The challenge was accepted, and the match, punctuated by frequent cheering, proved by far the most popular event of the evening. Mrs. Clarke claimed a victory, and there was no one, not even Mr. Andrews, who would question that.

The prospect of an octogenarian Lord Mayor is provoking gossip here. Alderman Thomas Crosby, senior alderman who has not "passed the chair," as the formula runs, would in the ordinary course of events be selected next Lord Mayor of London, as Dr. Crosby, his son, continues in active business in Fenchurch street, while he is still a member of the firm of Crosby and Crosbie, medical practitioners. Sir Thomas having passed through the various stages of civic life—Common councillor in 1857, alderman in 1898 and sheriff in 1906—has no desire to finish his career with the highest honor the city has to offer. But he is in poor health. He recently went for a Continental holiday, at the conclusion of which he will determine whether he will offer himself for election at the Common Hall. Crosby is an ex-president of the society.

It is said on what is regarded as good authority that in consequence of the speech which Lloyd George delivered at the Mansion House on the European Crisis, the German Ambassador was instructed to demand his dismissal here from the British Government.

In his speech, which has done more to preserve peace than all the pourparlers which have taken place between ambassadors, Mr. George said:

"I would make great sacrifice to preserve peace. I can conceive of nothing that could justify a disturbance of international good will except cases of the greatest national movement, but if a situation were to be forced upon us, in which peace could only be preserved by the surrenderance of the great and beneficent

FALLS INTO CREVASS; PRISONER NINE HOURS

INTERLAKEN, SWITZERLAND, Aug. 26.—One of a party of three tourists who made an ascent of the Rhonwaldhorn this week fell into a crevasse and remained there for nine hours before being rescued. Reaching the summit (more than 11,000 ft. above sea level) at midday the party began the descent, roped together after a short rest. The man in the center broke through a layer of snow which covered the opening of a large crevasse, and it was found impossible to drag him up. One by one, his ice-axe, hat, purse and other belongings clattered down into the cold blue depths.

After two hours his companions let him down some 30 ft. further on to the projecting ledge of ice, where he could stand, and one of them hurried to fetch help. The rescue party reached the scene at about half-past ten at night, and brought the tourist to the surface half-an-hour later.

The result of the interview was telephoned to Herr von Kiderlin-Wachter, Minister for Foreign Affairs in Berlin, and the more reasonable and pacific nature of the "conversations" which have since taken place between representatives of France and Switzerland may be seen to date from this period.

The information which has reached us is that Count Metternich, on waiting upon Sir Edward Grey to communicate the wishes of the Kaiser was informed that his request could not be complied with.

The speech, which was also told, embodied not only the views of Mr. George, but also of the view of the British Government.

BRIDE-TO-BE DIES.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 26.—During a fire at Berettyo-Beda, Hungary, an eighteen-year-old girl, named Miriska Turgo, lost her life in trying to save her wedding gown. The girl was to have been married on the next day and although not in the house when the fire broke out, rushed into the burning building to secure the bridal robe. She was maimed by some falling timber, and died within a few hours.

REVOLUTIONARY BODIES HAVE TRIBUNAL

Hold Suspect Prisoner for Days in Office of News-paper.

Police of Paris to Prosecute Men Who Imprisoned "Traitor."

PARIS, Aug. 26.—A search made yesterday at the offices of the revolutionary paper La Guerre Sociale was followed last evening by domiciliary visits of eleven commissioners of police at the homes of different members of the staff of the paper, who are to be prosecuted for having usurped the functions of the judicial authorities.

The accused constituted themselves a tribunal and arrested and sequestered for twenty-four hours three members of a party whom they accused of being in communication with the police. The "traitors" did not allege any complaints against their "judges," but the wife of one of them informed the police of the arbitrary conduct of the revolutionary tribunal. This latter had caused the woman's apartments to be searched for compromising documents.

One of the three "arrested traitors," Bled, related that one day he was told to call at once at the offices of the Guerre. There one of his comrades seized him and pushed him into a room where the members of the revolutionary tribunal were seated. One of the "judges" questioned him. As he protested his innocence, two of young "revolutionary guards" entered and pointed revolvers at him. His pockets were searched. During the proceedings two "guards" went to his door and searched for documents.

Bled says he was maltreated and threatened with death. In the hope that he would confess, he was guilty. For two days he was under arrest and spent the time locked in a room at the newspaper office, known as the prison of the Guerre Sociale.

MAY FORM-ALLIANCE.

While so much is being said about the Belgian and Dutch defensive alliance in the event of a European war, it is interesting to record the warm welcome extended to Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry on their arrival in Brussels, on a two days' visit to the Belgian court.

The Dutch royal party were met on the platform by King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and many officials. During their progress through the streets, the royal party was greeted most cordially by the populace. The diplomatic corps was received at the palace this afternoon, and tonight there is a state banquet.

The visit has the appearance of being more than a mere courtesy, owing to the strained state of international relations. Originally the visit was intended to return that made last year by the Belgian sovereigns, after their accession. Since then, there has been much friction regarding the Flushing defense bill, which indeed well-nigh caused the bill to be abandoned.

That friction has now been removed, Belgium and Holland feel that, despite wide differences of temperament, under the threat of a European struggle, which would unavoidably cause the violation of their frontiers, they must find a way to unite their forces, so as to act together in case of emergency. The present visit may, therefore, give new vigor to the entente scheme which the Kaiser almost vetoed when it was first mentioned.

CHASE MURDERER.

An exciting chase after a murderer, across a spur of the Mont Blanc range took place, and the fugitive was finally arrested and handcuffed at a height of 7700 feet by gendarmes and Alpinists.

Three young Italian workmen were repairing the Alpine hut at Rossafrey, near the summit of the Tournette, a mountain near Geneva, when two of them, named Dilecmino and Guelma, quarreled. The former drew a knife and stabbed his companion, who died almost immediately.

Dilecmino then fled across the mountains in the direction of the Swiss frontier, with the object of reaching Geneva. Two Alpinists, who had witnessed the murder, abandoned their excursion and hastened down to Thonon to inform the police. Two gendarmes thereupon started in pursuit of the murderer, accompanied by the Alpinists.

Meanwhile, Dilecmino had descended the Tournette, and, after crossing the valley, began the ascent of the more difficult Col de Montremont. Owing to the great heat, the Alpinists were at a disadvantage, for the fugitive proved an expert climber. Moreover, he left the ordinary paths and risked his life among precipices in order to gain on his pursuers.

Finally the murderer showed signs of exhaustion, and he sat down on a rock to rest. The gendarmes drew their revolvers when they came within range, and threatened to shoot him unless he surrendered. Thereupon Dilecmino allowed himself to be handcuffed and led to Thonon.

INVITES FRIENDS TO SEE HIS SUICIDE

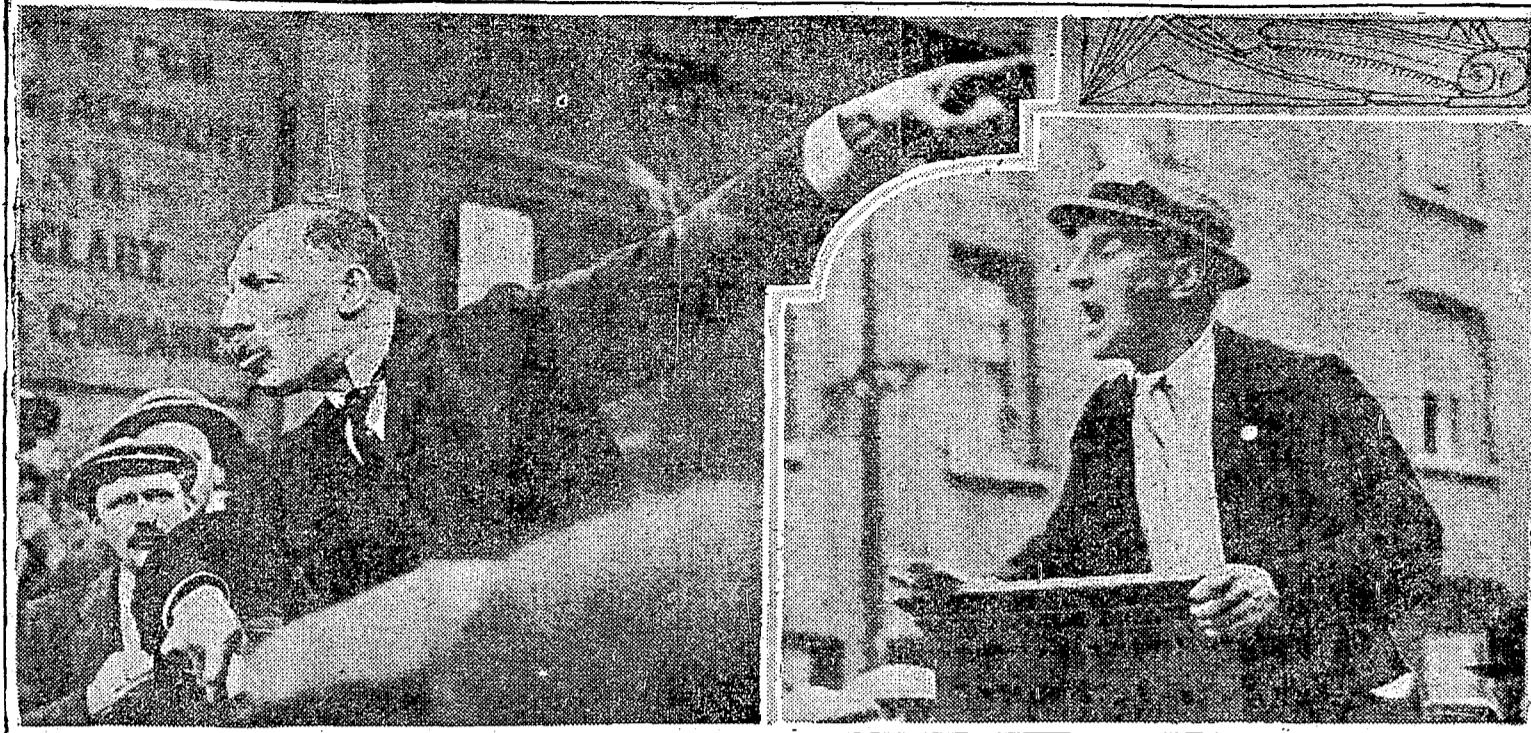

VIENNA, Aug. 26.—An army officer named Verigen, who possessed an estate in the neighborhood of Gatschlna, Austria, invited all his friends and acquaintances to a garden party by night to celebrate "an especially important event in his life." The fete was a great success, and at 11 p.m., while a display of fireworks was being given and a band playing, the host went out on a balcony, saying that he was going to make a speech. When everybody's attention had been drawn to him, he raised his hands and plunged from the balcony onto the lawn below, where he was picked up dead.

CLERGY WATCHED.

LISBON, Aug. 26.—The position of the clergy as regards the government pensions is now attracting much attention. The pope at first threatened to excommunicate any priest accepting the pension, but their destitution being represented to him, he consented to the pension being accepted as a salary, seeing that the Portuguese Republic has seized all the church revenues. The republic, however, now insists on the clergy taking the oath of fealty previous to receiving the pension, and it is said that the Vatican refuses to permit this course.

ILLUSTRATING NEWS OF CABLE

IN WORLD'S RELIGIOUS CIRCLES

(By D. V. FRANCIS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The summer season is about over and within a week or two now the churches will resume their warfare against sin in this great city of ours.

For two months now, so long about this time of the year, so far as the regular Protestant churches are concerned, New York would have to be satisfied with slim rations so far as religion is concerned.

By the activities of the evangelistic committee, shows eleven ten centers, where work has already been carried on, with meetings in English, Italian, Scandinavian, Bohemian and Finnish-Swedish; seven centers with special services for boys and nine for children; thirty-five centers, pop-up-air meetings in English, five others especially for negroes; seven conducted in Italian, four in German, one for Russians; and one out-door location for children; services for adults in three halls and for children in two; fourteen shop meetings with services in English, ten in Spanish, five in Italian and one in Greek. This means a total of 115 centers of work conducted by evangelistic committees of New York City.

Rev. Dr. Clifford, the famous English Baptist leader, has returned home from his American tour and is telling the Londoners something about this country. I seen this in a recent English paper which is worth reading. Dr. Clifford said: "Two of the great

BELIEVES ARMY AIRSHIP HAS BEEN OVERRATED

Lieut. Conneau, Famous as Aviator, sneers at "Cafe Scientists" of French Republic

(By PAUL VILLIERS.)

PARIS, Aug. 26.—Lieutenant Conneau, naval officer who is famous as an aviator, thinks airships are greatly overrated as implements of warfare. The man who talks most on the subject, he says, know very little about war or airships. In a recent interview on the subject, he said: "Much nonsense has been talked about this question. We must first get rid of the idea of the aeroplane as a weapon of offense. From the helplessness of which an aeroplane must keep in order to be out of range it is impossible to drop a bomb on the target aimed at, even if this were a battleship of the largest size. One might, perhaps, attempt night attacks, but then the great difficulty for the aeroplane, as for the submarine, is to discover the enemy."

"The only possible use for the aeroplane is that of scout. The monoplane of today can fly over the sea, where addles are rare, even in 'very fresh' winds. It is objected that it cannot take up a passenger; but for the information, inevitably very simple, which a scouting vessel has to collect—the position and number of the enemy's ships—is it really necessary to have an observer as well as a pilot? In my opinion it is quite necessary."

"The aeroplane will naturally have to be carried on board a ship specially arranged for it. There is nothing very complicated about that, and a platform can easily be fixed on the deck of a cruiser, or better still, on a liner, sufficient to allow the airman to start and alight."

CAPTIVE BALLOON.

"As for its employment, I conceive that the aeroplane should be a sort of captive balloon—or, more precisely, a periscope. There can be no question, except in case of emergency, of sending the airman a hundred miles ahead. If anything goes wrong, that is the end of the airman—a discouraging prospect and, besides, a useless risk. When it is desired to explore the horizon, the airman will simply have to rise as high as possible almost on the spot—that is to say, without going more than four or five miles from his ship. If he perceives smoke or a vessel which it is desirable to reconnoiter, the ship, after having taken the airman back on board, will resume her course in the indicated direction. When a suitable distance has been traversed a fresh ascent will be made, and fresh observations will be transmitted by wireless telegraphy. If by chance something goes wrong, if the airman falls into the water, one has merely to go and pick him up with his machine as one picks up a target. There is nothing Utopian in this; it is all perfectly simple."

Visitors to Hardelot, a new watering-place near Boulogne, are being entertained by M. Bleriot, the famous aviator, who has a chalet there, and who sails along the level sands aboard his new "aeroplane" which can carry his whole family. The "aeroplane" is a machine made up of a framework mounted on three pneumatic wheels, two of which are in front, but instead of having an engine it carries a sail similar to the mainsail of a yacht. It is guided by the rear wheel by means of similar steering gear to that heard.

M. Bleriot and his children frequently voyage over the sands, which stretch for twenty miles without any obstacles, not even a rivulet. The sands are one-third of a mile wide and form a wonderful natural flying ground, where M. Bleriot tries all his new machines. For the "aeroplane" they are ideal. When the tide recedes they become so solid that the wheels of the strange craft make scarcely any mark upon them. M. Bleriot made the machine simply to amuse himself and his wife and children, M. Caslin, a friend of his assisting him. In a high wind M. Bleriot has attained sixty miles an hour with it.

Business rivalry and small politics are said to be at the bottom of the threatened trouble between Germany and France. Mons. Schneider of Creusot is the chief Moroccan not in the chamber of Senate. I have no idea what may be the cause as to the value of the life of the iron mines that he works, as did his father and grandfather, in the saddest looking vale in France. Whether it is or is not likely to last long, I have no idea. But it is too much in the center of France to feed the works for shipbuilding that the Schneider company have set up at Havre, Cetin and Bordeaux. They can launch dreadnaughts or transatlantics in these junior Greenocks. Rouvier was the henchman of Schneider in the Senate and in the coulisses of the political and financial world. His situation in La Societe Generale (founded in 1864 by the first Schneider), brought him into frequent contact with the present man. The intention in founding that bank was "to develop French industries" and to take the monopoly of railway building in France from England. For many years the Societe Generale has made a monstrous pile by the issue of foreign loans.

POLITICAL argument waxed hot and long during the Bethnal Greenby election, to an extent that almost turned the heat wave green with jealousy. The busy newspaper photographer was on hand and caught expressions that he says equals the best ever recorded by the pencil of the world's best caricaturists.

tween Church and Church and introducing the possibility of a great and real unity."

MISSIONARIES BUSY.

Three large missionary societies which have about finished their fiscal years are the American Board, the Foreign of Congregationalists; the Foreign Christian, representing the large Disciples body, and the Protestant Episcopal. At this time, less than a month before the end in the cases of two of them, the outlook is anything but favorable.

Disciples were tempted, says a statement just issued, to make large plans this year than last, owing to the growth of the movement and the increased prosperity obtaining in the Middle West, but they desisted, although there were impudent appeals from the fields. At the end of nine months disciples find 202 fewer churches to have contributed and receipts to be $10,000 behind last year.

It was announced an effort would be made to make the total $50,000, but the society says it sees little hope of attaining it unless there is improvement.

As already reported, the Congregationalists are sounding notes of alarm with the fiscal year within three weeks of its close. The threatened deficit is not due to larger budget based on larger expectations, but to actual decline in receipts from churches and individuals. The Episcopal society is $67,000 ahead in its receipts from figures with an addition of $25,000 in a Forward Movement Fund. The gain named is no more than has averaged for the last ten years, and $125,000 not $25,000, was the forward fund goal for this year in a total of $50,000 within three years. Recent figures of contributions were for foreign missions, but home and foreign contributions are affected precisely the same with no marked advance in either to date. Such are the official reports.

The president of the University of Chicago, said he told me in the course of conversation, that some body or other was "grouchy." When I asked him what a "grouchy" person meant or was like, he replied, "An individual that is very bitter and is always grumbling." Ah, I said, the sort of man I should describe as an unripe gooseberry."

He was surprised to find a man's wife and children described as part of his "outfit," an expression which, another extension. Dr. Clifford had to have explained to him what "Yappy," signifying one who frequently made foolish and disagreeable remarks.

Dr. Clifford hopes for the unity of churches, and in this connection told the following anecdote: At Peterborough, in Ontario, he laid the foundation stone of a new Baptist church. It happened that a peal of bells had just been hung in the tower of the Anglican church, and they were to be used for ringing for the first time on Coronation Day. The rector, however, cancelled this arrangement, and as Dr. Clifford declared, the stone of the Baptist church to be "well and truly laid," the Anglican bells began to chime. "The Church's One Foundation," was the title of a poem by George Eliot, the author of "Adam Bede." The rector, however, who had been advocating the establishment of laws which will make both marriage and divorce more difficult. He is warmly seconded by Representative Morris Sheppard of Texas, who believes that such laws "are a crying need in this country."

DR. CLIFFORD HOME.

Roused by the agitation of religious denominations, members of the Senate and House of Representatives are seriously considering plans to urge the adoption of a uniform set of laws which will regulate the remarriage of divorced persons in this country. Foremost in the movement to bar from marriage men who have been condemned by the law is the next day the brooch was returned anonymously in a match box to the lost property office at Scotland Yard, by whom it was forwarded to the owner, who reported that the brooch was missing.

Many of the police who were on duty in the abbey are lone service men, and they naturally feel very incensed at any reflection cast on their character, and which could be applied to any person found to have been responsible.

SCANDAL INVOLVES SCOTLAND YARD

Brooch Picked Up at Coronation Given Detective, Who Never Reported.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Particulars have just leaked out of an extraordinary police scandal in connection with the coronation ceremonies at Westminster Abbey.

In official circles the utmost reticence is shown in regard to the matter, but it appears that immediately after the ceremony at the abbey a lady picked up a diamond brooch worth about $7500 and handed it to one of the gold sticks-in-waiting.

The latter, a well-known army officer, after an unsuccessful endeavor to find the lost property office at the abbey, handed the brooch to a police constable in uniform with a request that he would hand it over to his superiors with a view to its restoration to the owner.

Some days later, curious to know to whom the brooch belonged, he applied at Cannon Row police station, and was surprised to find that the jewel had not been handed in.

Superintendent Wells was informed of the serious nature of such a complaint, and the whole of the constables on duty—say, 2000 numbers—had been selected, not only on account of their good service, but of their stature, were requested to make out a special report on the matter.

This was done, but all denied any knowledge of the brooch in question.

In consequence all the men were paraded at Cannon Row station, and the army officer was presented. What happened is not definitely stated, but there are suggestions that on three occasions he expressed a decided opinion as to a certain constable, who happened to be on duty at the time.

The extraordinary part of the affair is that, though the real reason of the inquiry and parade was only to find the owner, who reported that the brooch was missing.

Many of the police who were on duty in the abbey are lone service men, and they naturally feel very incensed at any reflection cast on their character, and which could be applied to any person found to have been responsible.

RUMOR SPEAKS
MISS SEARS'
NAMEAthletic Young Woman May Be Bride of Harold
Vanderbilt.By MARGARET WATTS DE PEYSTER.
NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—That Miss Eleanor Sears is to become Mrs. Harold Sterling Vanderbilt is the latest piece of news to interest high society.

That young Mr. Vanderbilt was in love with Miss Sears has been for a long time an open secret. There were others who had fallen victims to the charms of Miss Sears, among them Paul J. Ramey, and it has been a very pleasant problem for society to see who finally would win the prize. It now appears that Mr. Vanderbilt is the lucky man.

Miss Sears is one of the most remarkable women in her set, and many announcements that she was engaged to this man or that man have always met with dental so firm that her friends had begun to think that she would continue to prefer arduous sports to married life.

Young Mr. Vanderbilt has been spending a good bit of his time at Newport this season, and it has been remarked that his visits have always been timed exactly with those of Miss Sears.

The announcement of this engagement will be the termination of a long and bitter battle between Harold Vanderbilt and Paul Ramey.

When Harold Vanderbilt was taken ill in California several years ago, Miss Sears hurried to his side.

When Paul Ramey started for the arctic to hunt musk oxen and polar bears a little more than a year since, Miss Sears was the last person to leave the ship, and it was understood that she gave him a sealed letter to comfort him on his way. When Mr. Ramey returned Miss Sears was the first to greet him.

Shortly after Paul Ramey's return Harold Vanderbilt appeared to be the one more favored. Then Mr. Ramey announced that he would go to Africa to shoot lions and elephants. Society wondered what could have sent him away again so quickly.

Two weeks ago word was received that Mr. Ramey would remain in Africa. Now comes the word of Miss Sears' engagement to Harold Vanderbilt.

SUES PARISIAN SPOUSE.

While international marriages are still being made, another has entered into the latter class. Mrs. Evelyn A. Napoleon, called Newport's best dressed woman, has begun her action for absolute divorce, charging non-support, against her Parisian husband, Paul E. Napoleon.

Mrs. Napoleon was married in Newport five years ago. After the honeymoon the couple sailed for Europe, living for a time on the Avenue du Bois, Paris, where Mrs. Napoleon became a social favorite.

Three years ago Mrs. Napoleon returned with her European ideals of husband shattering.

Mrs. Napoleon advises all American girls to marry American men.

"They are better, better mannered, and more charming than foreigners, as so many international marriages have proved," declared Mrs. Napoleon.

"My divorce will another chapter to the long list and history of unfortunate international marriages, all of which seem to be binged on the question of money," continued Mrs. Napoleon.

Mrs. Belmont, formerly Miss Eleanor Robson, has made a sun place for herself in society. She inherits all the charm which made her one of the leading women on the American stage, in her social intercourse and has developed into a home-maker. She has not gone in for entertaining to any great extent, but takes her place in the social functions of Newport with grace and dignity.

Vincent Astor, son of Col. John Jacob Astor, is showering a great deal of attention on the dark, slender Miss Willard, younger daughter of Col. Joseph H. Willard, and his motor is constantly before the door of her home at Newport, or else they are scurrying around the drives and avenues obvious of everything and everybody except themselves, and possibly, the little blind archer who is usually lurking somewhere in the background of such affairs.

As the children say when they are playing hot butter beans, Vincent is getting very warm, and an early announcement of an engagement would cause little surprise.

HISTORY REPEATS.

History is repeating itself in the case of the old Knickerbocker family, the Van Schalcks. Twenty-five years ago Elsie Van Schalk, sister of Eugene Van Schalk and Dr. George G. Van Schalk, was married in Florence to Count Alessandro Boultouine, a young Russian, with large estates in Russia and Italy. They have four children.

Now two of these children are to bring still more foreign blood into the old Dutch family, and they are to be married as their mother was in Florence. The eldest son, Count Dimitri Boultouine, and the eldest daughter, Linka Boultouine, were several months ago at a house-party in Halban, Germany, given by Count Hochberg. There they met their respective fates and became engaged to marry.

The son vowed his love to Valentina, an Italian of Florence, and was accepted. To the daughter, young Count Albrecht Hohenau paid his court, and was accepted in turn. The engagements have been announced in New York.

Eugene Van Schalk is a lawyer and a member of many clubs. As a young man he married Sarah Holland Payne, of Orange, N. J. The marriage was kept secret for five years, until the young girl had finished her schooling and he had started his law practice. But this romance ended in a divorce in 1902, and in 1903 Van Schalk married Miss Minnie Delamater Haulebeck at Hackensack, N. J.

The last census shows that there are

Congress Notable for All Kinds of Reform

(By RALPH M. WHITESIDE.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—This is more than 50,000,000 sheep in the United States, owned by more than 600,000 persons. These sheep are estimated to be worth $250,000,000, and the lands upon which they graze in private ownership are worth $300,000,000 more. Surely, an industry representing an investment of $500,000,000 is a matter entitled to recognition at the hands of Congress.

Last year our sheep produced 328,000,000 pounds of wool, worth $60,000,000, and 750,000,000 pounds of dressed mutton, worth $75,000,000. These two items alone show a production from the sheep industry of $135,000,000 for the year 1904.

The history of the sheep industry of the United States clearly indicates that it cannot be successfully maintained without the protection of a tariff on the average weight of a yard, then an all wool suit of clothes would weigh just 3 pounds. It requires 10 pounds of average American wool to make 3 pounds of cloth of this weight. Therefore the average suit of clothes contains about 10 pounds of unwashed wool. Our Western wool grower has sold this year's clip of wool at an average of not more than 16 cents a pound, and probably not more than 15 cents a pound. Accepting 16 cents as the average price of this wool, we find that the American wool grower is receiving the magnificent sum of $1.60 for furnishing all the wool that goes to make an all wool suit of clothes of average American weight.

Your store-keeper charges you from $2 to $30 for the suit and your tailor will charge you from $30 to $60 for it. With the present price of wool there is not a fit woman in Washington today, regardless of what it costs, that the wool grower got as much as $2.50 for furnishing all the wool that was required to make it.

If the removal of the duty from wool had the same effect on the cost of clothing that the removal of the duty from hide had on the cost of shoes, then the suit would probably cost more than the tariff off. The tariff increases the cost of wool for one suit 45 cents. The wool growers believe that if the tariff was removed from the wool this 45 cents would merely go to increase the profits of the jobber and retailer.

Army Air Plans.

I wrote recently of the work which is being done by Uncle Sam's air men and ventured the opinion that when the time came for the test of aerial warfare the United States would not be found lacking.

Mrs. Napoleon advises all American girls to marry American men.

"They are better, better mannered, and more charming than foreigners, as so many international marriages have proved," declared Mrs. Napoleon.

"My divorce will another chapter to the long list and history of unfortunate international marriages, all of which seem to be binged on the question of money," continued Mrs. Napoleon.

Mrs. Belmont, formerly Miss Eleanor Robson, has made a sun place for herself in society. She inherits all the charm which made her one of the leading women on the American stage, in her social intercourse and has developed into a home-maker. She has not gone in for entertaining to any great extent, but takes her place in the social functions of Newport with grace and dignity.

Vincent Astor, son of Col. John Jacob Astor, is showering a great deal of attention on the dark, slender Miss Willard, younger daughter of Col. Joseph H. Willard, and his motor is constantly before the door of her home at Newport, or else they are scurrying around the drives and avenues obvious of everything and everybody except themselves, and possibly, the little blind archer who is usually lurking somewhere in the background of such affairs.

As the children say when they are playing hot butter beans, Vincent is getting very warm, and an early announcement of an engagement would cause little surprise.

HISTORY REPEATS.

History is repeating itself in the case of the old Knickerbocker family, the Van Schalcks. Twenty-five years ago Elsie Van Schalk, sister of Eugene Van Schalk and Dr. George G. Van Schalk, was married in Florence to Count Alessandro Boultouine, a young Russian, with large estates in Russia and Italy. They have four children.

Now two of these children are to bring still more foreign blood into the old Dutch family, and they are to be married as their mother was in Florence. The eldest son, Count Dimitri Boultouine, and the eldest daughter, Linka Boultouine, were several months ago at a house-party in Halban, Germany, given by Count Hochberg. There they met their respective fates and became engaged to marry.

The son vowed his love to Valentina, an Italian of Florence, and was accepted. To the daughter, young Count Albrecht Hohenau paid his court, and was accepted in turn. The engagements have been announced in New York.

Eugene Van Schalk is a lawyer and a member of many clubs. As a young man he married Sarah Holland Payne, of Orange, N. J. The marriage was kept secret for five years, until the young girl had finished her schooling and he had started his law practice. But this romance ended in a divorce in 1902, and in 1903 Van Schalk married Miss Minnie Delamater Haulebeck at Hackensack, N. J.

SPECULATION GERM IS ABSENT FROM WALL STREETWall of Hard Times May Be Heard From Gotham's
Financiers:

(By PRESTON C. ADAMS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—If the approach of cool weather does not stir the speculation germ in the blood of the outside public Wall street will be the leader in a prolonged wall of hard times.

Stock sales this year have been smaller than for the corresponding period in a long range of years. They have reached only $3,000,000 shares, against 115,000,000 last year, a decrease of $2,000,000, or 45 per cent. Even during the memorable dullness of 1904 the transactions for the first seven months reached $3,000,000 shares, against less than $6,000,000 for the same months of the previous year. In July, 1904, the sales approximated 12,500,000 shares, whereas the turnover last month was only 5,600,000. Reckoning on a value of par for the shares dealt in, the turn over this year would be equivalent to $6,300,000,000, as contrasted with $11,500,000,000 last year, a shrinkage of $5,200,000.

There have been other dull periods, but not in many years has the stagnation been so prolonged as on this occasion. Wall street's expense account, it is also to be noted, is greater today than ever before with perhaps the exception of the brief boom period which preceded the collapse of 1907, at which time certain commission houses were spending money in the most reckless fashion.

Million-share days on change have become traditions and the end it not in sight.

Stock exchange commission houses have been reducing their forces and also drastically cutting salaries in order to diminish the shortage between income and expenditures. The only firms which have done even moderately well are those having important cotton departments; the speculation in cotton has been anesthetized as the trading in stocks has been stagnant. Business in the produce exchange, though not abnormal, has been good, the extreme dullness in flour having been caused by the speculating in wheat and corn.

In alarm the traders are crying, "Where are we drifting?" and there are none to answer.

The public simply will not buy stocks except for investment and there is neither sport nor profit for professionals to trade among themselves.

GROSS EARNINGS.

The gross earnings of the country from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1911, amounted to $1,244,232,115, a decrease of $26,557,747, or 2.03 per cent. Speaking of the showing the Chronicle says: "In reviewing the earnings of the United States railroads for the first six months of the present calendar year it is disclosed that the suggestion has not been met with since the business upheaval following the panic of 1907—namely, a retrograde movement carrying the total earnings below their amount in the previous year. Our tables deal entirely with statistics of gross revenue, figures as to the net on any commodity scale will not be available for another period of two or three weeks."

The fact that June is the closing month of the fiscal year makes the return slow in coming in, and even as to the gross we are obliged in our present tabulations to use figures covering in some instances only the five months to May 31 instead of the full six months, ending June 30.

The fact can be regarded, however, as established that gross earnings have fallen in the current year, while net, on the other hand, has increased.

Henry Clay Frick has resigned as a director of the Union Pacific. He also left, withdrawing from the directorate of other great corporations of which he is a member, among them United States Steel. Two months and a half ago he told friends that with advancing age he was anxious to get more time for recreation and leisure, and would seek to lighten his large business responsibilities, although not retire wholly from activity. He decided to retire from the Union Pacific, which he did at that time, although asked to reconsider by the members of that board. He is in his sixty-second year.

A story that Mr. Frick had resigned from the company because of differences with Robert S. Lovett, president of the Union Pacific, which was used as an excuse for recent decline of Union Pacific stock, and the assumption that Mr. Frick had turned his stock upon market is not believed.

Mr. Frick says that he is anxious to get more time for recreation and leisure, and would seek to lighten his large business responsibilities, although not retire wholly from activity. He decided to retire from the Union Pacific, which he did at that time, although asked to reconsider by the members of that board. He is in his sixty-second year.

"Funny, one never sees any silver dollars here," he said. "Next time I come I am going to bring all the silver money I carry, because I feel I cannot sink or break up in Denver. I am a man, perhaps, who could not get hold of paper money. Once a month, perhaps, the bank will distribute a limited amount of currency, but it is grabbed up immediately and seldom gets into general circulation. Our money is gold and silver. Occasionally you might find a bill, but except in the early part of the month it is sure to be old and ragged."

INTERESTS DRINKERS.

The New York court of special sessions made a decision which will interest all drinking men.

Wallace Weed was before the court charged with intoxication. He denied the charge, declaring he had only six high balls. Mr. Weed offered to demonstrate in court that he could drink six high balls and be sober sober, and the judge discharged him.

W. H. Harrison, postmaster of Los Angeles, is making his first visit to the East since he was appointed to his present position. "When I left Los Angeles it was so cold that I had to have a fire in my office," he commented.

"We expect to receive great benefit on the coast when the Panama canal is completed. You know we will have two big expositions out there, and we expect to draw to Los Angeles every one who goes either to San Diego or San Francisco. San Diego has broken ground for its exposition. The people there are very enthusiastic over the exposition and the prospects for growth and extension of trade after the opening of the canal. We expect to send California fruit through the canal in refrigerator ships to your very doors, and then you will get the choicest California fruits in the most perfect condition without rehandling, and at prices which will compete with the home grown article in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. When you get California fruit in its prime, there is no fruit in the world that can compare with it."

"I am looking for some of my old college mates of 1874," said Jack R. Ross, secretary of a fire insurance company of Mobile, Ala. "It was my privilege to attend the Virginia Military Institute for several years, and in 1874 I bade Charles A. Culbertson goodbye at that school and he was still conscious, and the piano was automatically playing the famous dirge. She died an hour later."

In her waist was found a picture of her sweetheart, who, it is said, had lately begun to show an indifferent attitude toward her. She was a maid in the Schoemaker home.

"I have watched Senator Culbertson's career with the interest natural to one of his old schoolmates, and no one has been prouder of him than I.

Mrs. Sage Godmother
To Squirrels of Park

(By RALPH M. JOHNSTON).

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Mrs. Russell Sage has always been known as a friend of the birds and the small animals. For years she has been a sort of godmother to the squirrels in Central Park, which are really one of the most interesting sights of this great city. Of recent years she has taken the robin especially and all the American song birds in general under her protection and is spending her money to secure for them a chance to live in peace.

She has given $5,000 a year for three years for arousing interest in the protection of the robin. Up to last season robin could be bought in the markets of southern cities at from five to ten cents a dozen, and even now, many are being slaughtered. While laws have been passed to protect them, there are still seven states where there is open hunting season.

As a result of Mrs. Sage's crusade 533 junior audubon classes were formed last year in twelve states, with a membership of 11,000.

It causes more than one grim smile among the Wall street associates of the late Russell Sage to think of the money, to which he held so tightly, going for the benefit of the robins and squirrels.

The Western and Southern visitors to New York always feel one lack, here it is explained by Henry Frick of Baton Rouge, La.

"They will be having ideal weather in Denver," says J. J. McCrory, president of a large lumber company in that city. "At nights every one is sleeping under a blanket. Sometimes one is forced to wear a sweater when he goes out on the golf links. Denver is exactly a mile above the sea level, there is no humidity, and there is always a breeze."

"Denver is a hustling town, and its population is increasing every day. During the last ten years it has increased more than 50 per cent, and it still is growing. Of course business is good in Denver, but the thing that has brought all the people there is the delightful climate."

"We are building a beautiful system of roads which will run over the mountains. All of them will run through Denver, and the traffic thus gained will doubtless prove a great advantage to the city. The roads are being built of crushed stone and sand, over a bed of solid rock.

"They will be the best roads in the country when they are completed. They will need little attention because they cannot sink or break up. The rock will prevent that. The roads could have been laid on solid rock if it were not for the fact that it would be rough riding. The crushed stone and sand were added to the surface to relieve the shock to automobile springs and tires."

"In Denver we have a system by which the residents are kept in one section of the city, the stores in another, and the offices in another. It is an excellent system and in fact, is one of the best I have seen. It is practiced with modification in many cities of the West. The cities of the extreme South are also realizing the value of this building segregation."

"Denver and the smaller towns of Colorado are fast becoming popular summer resorts. Thousands of persons from the East and South come to the state every summer and remain until fall. Especially from Texas and Southern California the people come. Both these states are hot in the summer."

BELL

With the matinee this afternoon the Bell theater is to the front again with another of those immensely popular summer vaudeville bills. No more highly lauded act has come to the west this season than that to be presented by Deiro, who is armchairing their premier in American vaudeville. Thelma is a noted specialty, a distinct variety surprise, and has a large following in the music halls of the old country. It is not putting the case too optimistically to say that this due is going to go "great guns" at the Bell and are to be figured away up among the biggest drawing cards that have come to this house this year.

"On a Side Street" is an episode of city life, witnessed and written by Homer Miles, who presents Teddy Le Duc and company in the playlet. It is said to contain an unusual amount of dramatic material and sometimes there is an octagonal dash of the highest humor, which adds that piquant zest so much desired in the vaudeville skits. Le Duc and his associates are recent recruits from the legitimate stage and their performance will develop a rare bit of acting.

Russian entertainers are the Makarenko Duo, who come from the Imperial theater, St. Petersburg. Billed as the gypsy girl and the Russian prince they will present some of their national music and dances of the type that is seldom seen or heard in this country.

Adeline Francis presents her own novelty, "The Graphophone Girl," patented. There is another big hit and surprise unless all signs fall. Vaudeville managers are ever on the alert for acts of the character of the clever one presented by Miss Francis, and it will unquestionably command its full share of attention.

A pair of grotesquely funny chaps are here included in the persons of Robinson and La Favor and what they cannot do in the fun-making line with a lot of empty barrels does not need recording. While little more than an octagon, they are at every minute they are funny, they are at all times clean and wonderfully agile and their act strikes a new note which makes it twice welcome.

Each again, like the good old summer comedy, Mr. Kelley and he has a host of friends who are always eager to hear him; for there are few like Tom. His magnificent baritone voice will be heard in some of the latest popular song numbers and leave it to Mr. Kelly to win out and win big.

The motion picture screen will show the latest novelties in this very diverting and interesting line.

ORPHEUM

More good things are coming next week to the Oakland Orpheum.

A cyclonic, tempestuous dancing performance that has caused audiences of the world to yield completely to its attractiveness in the offering of Nana, the Parisian dancer, who with the assistance of Mons. Alexis, will be a feature next week.

The woman possesses a little, shapely little figure, and a very pretty face topped by abundant blonde hair.

Her appearance is decidedly fetching, but in the wild whirls, the tornado-like rapidity and dazzling agility of the dance that is the real merit of her performance.

They work with mathematical precision, and Nana, in her reckless abandon, exhibits a strength that could not be credited to so small and supple a body.

Of this act the Chicago Daily Journal, October 11, 1910, says: "The distinctly daring young woman of this team, one of the greatest acrobatic dancers we have ever seen, gives a series of amazingly energetic dances, discounting and putting out of commission for all and all the pallid imitators of the French dancers of her kind."

Jack Connally and Margaret Webb are a bright pair of entertainers whose "The Stormy Finish" will be one of the effervescent spots on next week's bill. It is ripe with originality and cleverness. Mr. Connally is a talented pianist who has the proper idea of making the instrument his assistant andoughnade without abusing it. He dances well, as does pretty Miss Webb, his fetching little partner. They have played here previously and have won favor that will make them most welcome this time.

"Oh D-e-i-r-o but he can play," thus writes the sage of the dramatic department of an eastern daily, in reviewing Deiro, the piano-accordeonist. Great singers, great actors and great musicians have been known to fairly take an audience out of themselves and move them at will from tears to smiles and back again. This is the power of genius. It is a power held by Deiro when armed by his strange instrument. The accordeon has been the friend of beggars and old negroes, but with the piano appliance in Deiro's hands it is given the dignity due a musical instrument.

Deiro plays arias from Italian operas, selections from grand operas, bits of love songs and a "swinging rag." He plays with a skill that carries the mood of the audience with him on his variegated program. Deiro has a pleasing personality that is very evident. He plays with a telling grace and charms with the humor he evolves in the quaint little noises he brings at intervals from his piano-accordeon.

Note—Deiro has played here last season and is one of the acts that made such a hit in his initial performance that a return engagement is most welcome.

Note—He did not play the entire circuit.

The English comedian has most assuredly proved a great success in this country but very few English music hall favorite comedians have as yet been prevalent upon to leave their home successes. The most notable of these few is Morny Cash, who comes to the Orpheum next week. He is one of the most popular and funniest comic singers of England and a great favorite throughout the entire United Kingdom. He has a style that is all his own. His manner is explosive and one of the eccentric order. The one that was the favorite abroad was "The Song of the Shirt." He is most ludicrous as a tiny policeman or a "Bobby" taking care of a crying youngster several heads taller than himself.

Begue.

During the evening concert the band will play such numbers as "Militaire No. 1" by Schubert; overture "Regentes" by Mercadante; Misere from "II Trovatore" by Verdi; "Pompeii" chorus from "I Lombardi" by Verdi; grand selection from "Mamou Lessaut" by Puccini; grand selection, "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini; "Monastery Bells" by Vely; selections from the "Chocolate Soldier" by Strauss, and vocal duet from act 3 of "Rigoletto" sung by Mons. and Mme. Begue. But little more than a week remains before Ferullo's wonderfully successful engagement comes to an end.

YE LIBERTY

Isabelle Fletcher, leading the Bishop Players at Ye Liberty Theater, will appear, commencing tomorrow evening, in the production of Clyde Fitch's three-act comedy-drama, "The Cowboy and the Lady."

The story relates to Teddy North, Harvard graduate, who is living on a ranch in Colorado, and owing to his skill, courage and free frank ways, soon becomes a leader among the cowboys and is called "The Boss." Mr. and Mrs. Weston from the East also come to Colorado. Mr. Weston is a shiftless wretch whose dissipated habits create plenty of trouble for his wife and for Teddy, who falls desperately in love with Mrs. Weston. During one of her rides from camp her horse falls over a precipice

Winter Will Be Gay in Society Circles for the Debutantes, Is Suzette's Opinion

By SUZETTE

EVEN though a great deal has been said concerning the debutantes of the coming season, the relative number around the bay is comparatively small, measured by the number of young girls in our most prominent families. It is amusing the way the young girls make up their minds "to come out," and after a glimpse of the social world, withdraw in a panic, and the next thing you hear of them is that they are safely back in a boarding school or in a convent abroad.

On our side of the bay, there is, of course, the university, and our most fashionable schools, as the Horton, Head and Ransome schools lead directly there. Even Mills Seminary has been discontinued, and girls must go to school four years longer there and graduate from a college.

AGE LIMIT HAS BEEN MUCH EXTENDED.

For one thing the age limit of youth has been greatly extended, and a young girl no longer makes her debut at eighteen only to be blase at twenty-five. The girl from the university enters society life at twenty-four with a curtain of youth about her, that is lost to the girl who has danced through seven or eight seasons. So even if a girl does not care for a college education, she cares to study something—music perhaps, or art, or she goes abroad and travel does just as much if not more for her, as it does for the college girl. Everything is changed as the world progresses, and fortunately one is young a very long time now. Karen Michaels, that wonderful new writer of fiction, makes her heroine forty years old, and she is most distractingly charming, and most beautifully young.

Girls no longer wish to be referred to as "a belle of a few winters ago," "a debutante of several seasons ago." So school days look alluring, and the young girls who can afford it go back to New York, or they go to Paris, or Dresden, or Switzerland, or one finds them in Vassar, Wellesley, or Mount Holyoke. The empty-headed little debutante of the past is now the type that is an exception, the girl in society today stands for many things worth while. She has her beautiful youth, her splendid enthusiasms, and so the social world is not the only world in which she lives, and finds her many duties and her many pleasures.

THE SOCIAL ROUND IS A BUSY WHIRL.

The social round consists mainly of dances, teas, bridges, dinners, luncheons, sewing bees, and, of course, the many clubs arrange dates more or less social in purpose. The dances of the past have changed in great measure, and the old traditions are going down before the new. A few seasons ago, hostesses complained bitterly of the conduct of men at the many dances of the season. The men were exasperating to the last degree. They arrived with a special grouch, which they carefully cherished the whole evening long. If they were invited to a dinner beforehand they seriously offended their hostess afterwards by forgetting to dance with the young girl guests. Then men stood around with a bored expression that was simply exasperating.

The girls worried a good deal about "the supper dance." It was mortifying in the extreme to sit like "a maiden all, forlorn," while couple after couple filed by on their way to the supper room. And so it happened that the girls of a season or two did not care to go to the club dances. There were so many other things in life so much more worth while. There are, of course, the dances for the younger set, the young people still in the midst of formal school days, who would rather dance than do anything else in the world. There are the dances, too, like the Dernier Cri, or the D. C.'s, for the younger married people, and the older girls, who have friends among the young matrons, prefer to go to them. And again, dancing has come to be a fine art—the art it used to be in the palmy days of Greece and Rome. Only we have gone farther. Mordkin and Pavlova, of course, lead the way, and Maud Allen, Ruth St. Denis and Lotte Fuller have expressed much for use. Many of our girls dance beautifully, and few professionals on the stage can rank with charming Inez Dibblee of Santa Barbara, or with Enid Gregg of San Francisco. Mrs. Fred McNear is a dancer of exceptional grace and one always remembers with pleasure the famous Spanish dance given at the Kirmess by Mrs. Frank Jackson (Gladys Maxwell). Very graceful dances were developed in the class which met in Mrs. Wickham Havens' ballroom a season or two ago.

EUROPE HAS LEAD IN THE DANCING.

Europe, as usual with the fine arts, is leading the way in dancing. One hears of it at all the summer resorts, of the latter fashionable Dinard, on the coast of Brittany, is an example. It is very full of Americans this year, and is the gayest summer resort on the continent. Dancing is the favorite amusement and the craze this year is for the triple Boston, which has almost done away with the double Boston. An attempt was made last week to introduce the latest Paris dance, the "Tango" of South American fame. After a few experiments it was discontinued as the majority of dancers found it more appropriate for the Montmartre dancing halls than for private drawing rooms.

Dances for the young people are being arranged along different lines from those of some years ago. In many of the clubs, the chaperons of the young girls are welcome, and they may purchase a supper ticket, which saves them from being unwelcome guests. And the patrollers know what order to give the caterer. A young girl feels very protected when she has her own chaperon to introduce her if need be, or to take her to supper, if she prefers things that way. There are card tables for chaperons, also, and the hours of the dance are no longer dreary affairs passing on leaden wings. The chaperon enjoys herself quite as much as her young charge, and that is altogether as it should be.

There will be Greenway dances as usual across the bay, and on our side the Junior Assembly patronesses have already held their meetings. There will be the Dernier Cri dances, which are practically Claremont Country Club affairs, but as yet there is no series of dances to take the place of the well known "Friday Nights." It may be that somewhere down the future, the Junior Assembly will develop into a Friday Night, for its earlier members have certainly reached the "Friday Night" age. Berkeley has two clubs, each most successful along its own lines.

For the younger set of whom are still in school, a series of dances is being planned, which is to be given in their artistic Town and Gown Club. Among those who have built attractive homes in Berkeley since the earthquake are the Jere Burkes and the Frank Woodwards. Jere Burke is the well known attorney for the railroad, and he has a family of most attractive young people.

The Frank Woodwards have built a very beautiful home in the Berkeley foothills and Mrs. Woodward has made it the center of much social entertainment.

Four dances are to be given for this younger club, and the patronesses will be: Mrs. Henry Martinez, Mrs. Jere Burke, Mrs. Frank Woodward, Mrs. Benjamin Bangs, Ms. Mansfield Lowell, Mrs. Andrew Davis, Mrs. Walter Treat, Mrs. Whitney Palache, Mrs. Frederick Tuttle.

MRS. W. RICHARDSON IS HOME ONCE MORE.

The home-coming of Mrs. William Richardson, who was formerly Elizabeth Gage, is always the signal for a round of social entertainment of unusual interest. Mr. Stephen Gage is one of California's sturdy pioneers, LINGER IN THE EAST.

People are staying out of town later than usual this year, and many of the summer resorts on the Atlantic coast and abroad are winding up the season in a blaze of glory. The F. M. Smiths are still at Shelter Island, and there the season is winding up in a whirlwind finish of gaiety and social activity.

The yearly masquerade, the biggest function of the season, was held this week in the large ballroom of the Prospect house. It proved to be an unusually delightful affair. All the characters of fact and fiction, together with all the creations of noted cartoonists known to newspaper fame were reproduced with faithful regard for detail.

At Sag Harbor, also, the season is drawing to a close, though one would love to linger long there, the late autumn is so very beautiful, with the woods ablaze with gorgeous coloring.

one who has helped to build up the interests not only of our city, but of our state. And in his delightful home on Harrison street three daughters grew up to develop into young matrons of rare charm, or sweetness, of much generosity. Mrs. Pease and Mrs. Gross represent in their homes many of the lessons they learned in their father's home in Harrison street. They are among the most popular young matrons on this side of the bay, and they are always planning in their homes delightful affairs for their friends. Both Mrs. Pease and Mrs. Gross are delighted that their sister is here, if only for a few weeks. Mr. Richardson cannot come to the coast this season, so Mrs. Richardson is planning to return to her home in Texas late in September. About the middle of September Mrs. Gross will give a large "at home," in honor of her sister, Mrs. Richardson, entertaining her at her home in Boulevard Terrace. It will give Mrs. Richardson the opportunity of meeting all her old-time friends, as well as the newer friends of her sisters. The tea will be perfectly planned and as Mrs. Gross is such a bright, attractive hostess, it will be one of the leading social events of the mid-September.

Apropos of the fashions of the day, men are quite as much interested in them as their feminine relatives, and at present you may see them gazing with a certain amount of awe at shop windows. And here is a little note sent out by a bright young woman guest at the large round table were:

DELIGHTFUL LUNCHEONS AT CLAREMONT CLUB.

The luncheon given at the Claremont Country Club on Friday by Miss Elsie Ames was a very delightful affair. It was given in honor of Mrs. James Kenna, who was formerly Charlotte Hall, and who has been one of the most popular brides of the summer. Miss Ames and the Hall girls have been friends since early school days, so the compliment to the popular bride was of more than the ordinary degree of interest.

THE CALL OF CONEY ISLAND

ONE OF THE LATEST AERIAL SWINGS

What Americans have been called a nervous people. A real relaxation of the charge would seem to lie in the fact that a proportion of us, ranging anywhere from one thousand to two hundred and fifty thousand, pass daily, during the season, through the mill of Coney Island, the most famous of popular resorts, and achieve the apparent impossibility of emerging therefrom clothed and in our right mind.

Not only in our right mind but feeling young for the experience, but how can one feel old in a place where everybody is amusing himself in a youthful manner? As witness, for instance, this party of New York business men enjoying themselves like so many school boys as they frantically hurl red balls at the head of the "nigger baby" at "three throws for a nickel." Or watch the crowd of well-dressed men and women, youths and maidens, surging about a moving picture exhibition.

Coney Island—there is nothing like it on earth! Mile after mile of peerless beach; mile after mile behind of the strangest medley of human activities, the strongest commingling of noise and music, folly and clean fun, evil and good that can be imagined. Here one may still find the "confidence man," the shark who preys on the unsophisticated countryman. In the beer hall and cheap restaurant one may still find a surviving specimen of the species known as the "short change artist." If you care to do so you can spend your money "ringing" canes or whacking striking machines with huge mallets, or in ways less innocent, for the old Coney Island is not yet entirely obliterated, even though the new Coney Island has been making such phenomenal strides toward cleanliness and wholesomeness.

FRANKFURTER KING.

And of all the millions spent in transforming the erstwhile disreputable resort no amount of money, no sentiment of novelty has been able to overthrow the most distinctive feature of the island. The frankfurter still is king! Amazing mechanical devices which turn you upside down in looping the loop or which whirl you through space in an airship; the greatest outfit which is required to put on "The Great Train Robbery" on the largest stage in the world; the apalling spectacle of "The End of the World" and a hundred other shows which require a barrel of money each in the shaping—each of these is impotent before the pink power of the frankfurter. It is the symbol of the island. It has been estimated that on a crowded Sunday something like a million of these meat links are sold.

The excursionist to Coney steps from either a steamboat or an express train and finds himself in a wonderland in which are the long gone dreams of childhood realized. The great white tower looks out over the green expanse of sea and at night burns itself into the sky; the railroad tracks pass the portals of an enchanted place which glows with a million points of fire after sunset. Coney Island from afar at night makes a scene that never fades from the memory, but in nearer view is less poetic, yet withal unceasingly diverting. "The Trip to the Moon" in the wonderful airship Luna seems like the most natural of voyages, and you fall at once into friendly companionship with the little moon people. This illusion has won a great fortune for its projectors, and its drawing power, instead of decreasing, is growing every year. If one rejects aerial navigation as trying to the nerves there is tranquillity and romance in a sail through the cool canals of Venice or a refreshing trip through the snowy Alps to the cheery jingle of sleigh bells or in sinking into the aqueous silence of the ocean depths in a submarine boat. From the depths to the other extreme, up among the stars in the Ferris wheel or step up the breezy observation tower. This meeting of extremes is the real essence of enjoyment at Coney. You continually blow hot and cold. And the operation costs you money, whether you are eating frankfurters and drinking beer or with a big bungster swatting a plug to show how strong you are.

LIKE PARADISE.

To walk through Surf avenue is to be reminded in a topsy-turvy way of Dante's description of paradise. You have no sooner passed through the circle of one attraction than you enter the zone of still more marvelous one. Everywhere noise and excitement prevail. Everywhere can be heard music and laughter. Noise, noise, noise—everywhere noise!

As one traverses the crowded, screeching thoroughfare one must be impressed with the openness of everything. On the facade of the buildings there are no doors, no windows; indeed, there is no facade. The entire front of the house, whether it be music hall, lunch room or shooting gallery, is open to the gaze of the populace. One can enjoy an incalculable amount of fun without the expenditure of a single penny.

Residents of Waterside Colony Live in Houseboats

One of New York's queerest colonies dwells on the barren sand waste across the bay from Sea Gate, Coney Island. The inhabitants are sheltered from the winter winds and drifts of sand by shacks and houseboats fastened in the sand. In fact it is a daily task for them to shovel their way through hills of sand piled high in front of their doors.

For a number of years this land, off Harvey avenue, facing Gravesend Bay, and known as the Harvey estate, has been a place of interest to the passing visitor. A long beach of clean white sand stretches from Harvey avenue to the bay in a direction parallel to the Atlantic ocean. There is an oasis on this miniature desert, a green spot in the sand to the east, with here and there a tree or a clump of bushes, long grass and well furnished cool, bracing water.

In this oasis it is called Camp City and is decked with tents. The people who occupy these temporary quarters move from the crowded districts in search of outdoor life, plenty of fresh air, bathing, boating and sea food. Then men of the family work in the city and then go home to the camp in the evening.

In the fall these signs of summer gradually disappear, and when the winter winds carry the fine sand in gusts, cutting the face like so many halliards, Camp City has made such a mark, most of which are drifted over so that they are hardly visible. The sand continually leaks in through the roofs and windows and drifts against the doors like a blizzard. The inhabitants that remain through the winter are a hardy lot, well used to all weather and hardships. They make their living lobstering, crabbing, fishing and working on about boats.

This estate has been in the courts for years. It was formerly a narrow, long sandy beach washed by quite a high tide at times; then again it would become shallow and the neighbors dug for clams. A houseboat drifted in there, and those that it contained decided to stay till they were requested to move. Soon others followed the example and old, time-worn tugboats or other craft went for service were purchased and turned into homes. These old scows were half on land and half in the water. Some of the oldest leaked and were propped up above water high and dry. It was a handy place for these people to live, for their work was mostly on water. They were always ready with rowboats and motorboats for an immediate service for the Jersey coast or Staten Island.

There were others who were not quite so fortunate as to be able to procure old boats, so they built little wooden bungalows. As driftwood was plentiful on the beach, boards and beams were not lacking, and a few nails only were necessary to hitch them together. With these materials at hand some one started to build a shack, but agents of the law stopped him when it was about half done. It is not legal to build without a permit, and how could he get one when he didn't know where to go? Discouraged but not heartened he put up a large tent over the half finished structure. This was lawful, and he renewed his former operations, only under cover. He soon finished his little hut and removed to the tent that surrounded it. There to the surprise of everyone this was the first shanty built on the grounds. Thus he used as a kitchen and dining room and soon had annexed a couple of bedrooms and a parlor by the use of this same tent. Others imitated his example. In time a little colony of squatters were in command on this beach.

One morning the squatters awoke to find something unusual going on. The beach was astir with workmen who orders to fill in a part of the bay. They were building a bulkhead of timber and logs far out close to the sand bar. Surveyors were measuring off the ground.

Then a dredging machine was sighted to move. The people were highly indignant and did not heed. They considered themselves masters of the situation, having lived there so long, and ignored the order completely, while the workmen went on with their routine of filling in the bay.

In a few days it was impossible for the houseboats to get away. They were sandied in. Already the huge dredge was in operation sucking sand from the depths of the channel. This sand was forced through long pipes which stretched out in every direction within the bulkhead, and sand was heaped high where it had never been before. Very soon houseboats and huts alike were all filled in and water from this part of the bay vanished.

Most of these inhabitants were in course of time buried in the sand. When that part of the bay together with the long slanting beach had been leveled even with the top of the bulkhead, about two years ago the work ceased, the workers went away and the inhabitants were left in peace to shovel their houses out as best they knew how. Since that time the people of this little colony have lived on serenely without molestation.

Old Bob, one of the leaders of this eccentric village, lived as a hermit secluded in a great time-worn canalboat. He had a small income and was occasionally visited by his only daughter. His massive houseboat was afloat in Gravesend Bay before the dredge arrived and distributed sand far and near. A long cable secured to an old tree far up on the beach served as an anchor. The boat held fast till a storm headed its way, then the cable broke and the boat rocked and swayed, drifted out to sea and back again. Bob was on board and never knew where he would blow next.

He was helpless and when a sort of gale picked up his craft and pitched it into some property along the waterfront, doing considerable damage, Bob was pitted against the elements and finally found a muddy creek, where it remains to this day. This part of the creek has vanished from view together with the canalboat. A stranger looking out across this sand waste sights a queer object. It's Old Bob digging and sweeping, clearing the decks of the submerged boat. He lowers the hatchway overhead. He is often imprisoned and depends upon his friends to come to the rescue.

It's Old Bob digging and sweeping, clearing the decks of the submerged boat. He lowers the hatchway overhead. He is often imprisoned and depends upon his friends to come to the rescue.

He was helpless and when a sort of gale picked up his craft and pitched it into some property along the waterfront, doing considerable damage, Bob was pitted against the elements and finally found a muddy creek, where it remains to this

A FRENCH writer visiting the United States some years ago, said, in one of those pleasant little books, which foreigners love to write about after their return home, that the fine "undressed" faces of American women always came as a dreadful shock to him as all French women "greatly enhanced their natural advantages."

If this gallant sort of the great republic across seas were to pay us a visit today he would receive much fewer "shocks" upon meeting our women than formerly.

As it is undoubtedly a fact, whether it is to be deplored or commended, that make-up is now a rapidly increasing art and practiced among American women, at least in the larger cities.

It is a matter of curious record in public print that at a play recently produced in New York, a play painting human feelings and emotions especially engaged maid in the women's cloakroom helped the overwrought women in the audience to repel the ravages of tears and strong feelings upon their delicate, overwrought faces. The room was crowded at the end of each performance with women who could not have appeared upon the street with their furrowed, streaked complexions.

The original make-up was a mask. This covering, as a means of altering or disguising the human face, was conceived by primitive man long years before the use of paints and cosmetics for the same purpose were devised. By the time people masks were used, not for the sake of adding to the beauty of the wearer, but for the frightening away of demons or in religious rites. In war times they were also extensively used by warriors. Another use to which they were put was in covering the faces of the dead.

USE OF MASKS.

The use of masks in the drama of the ancients probably originated in the harvest festivities of the most ancient Greek peasantry. Subsequently they appear to have been associated with the representation of Satyr, Sillermo and the mothers of the past generation.

OF THIS AGE.

The real art of make-up, both on and off the stage, really belongs to our time and generation.

It is truly one of the wonders of the twentieth century.

Polaire, the clever French actress, uses the height of art in her make-up.

would have closed their doors on the faintest suspicion of rouge—or anything more subtle than powder. "Paint," as all these aids to beauty were termed, was anathema. A struggling would-be fair one, when grandma was a girl, might sleep with her face in a medicated plaster, she might apply herbs and lotions, and imbibe mixtures noxious or of a fairy delicacy; but the desired pink and white or cream and roses must not be frankly applied to the skin which refuse to protect them. But "make up" may well be used on the part "make up" their faces as they fling their hair or manicure their nails.

The perfection and naturalness of the make-up depend in a large measure upon choosing shades of rouge and powder to blend with the natural coloring. Many a disastrous make-up has resulted from the wholesale duplication by a blend of a dark friend's materials.

No two make-ups are exactly alike. Usually the ordinary woman who makes up her face errs rather in the selection of the proper shades than in an over-heavy application. Very rarely does one see in everyday life the appearance of startling artificiality given by too much rouge, heavily lined eyebrows and vulgarly over-colored lips, which all goes to show the high state of perfection which has been attained at the art.

Polaire, the clever French actress, uses her peculiar style and seeks to emphasize it. On the stage her swarthy skin, her overshadowing mass of short brown hair and her great made-up eyes make a perfectly consistent picture, beautifully set in the peculiar shade of blue which she affects. Her rough hewn features and large mouth are unnoticed in the vivid play of her expression and in the effect of a harmonious whole. One cannot help feeling sure, noting Polaire's genius in these matters, that the exploitation of her famous d-ince, which will be laid to the account of her press agent. The clever Polaire, if this eccentricity is natural, would certainly have preferred aside from advertising advantages, to have concealed or disguised it, rather than to flaunt it before the eyes of a supposedly admiring public.

MARY GARDEN. This mature woman in her characterization of Salome really presents the appearance of a 14-year-old girl, due to her unusually perfect picture of Thais. And her admirers, fresh from these and other turgid roles, gazed with amazement at the little Dodson.

In these days of the high art of make up the test of a good one is the appearance of naturalness. The intelligent actress uses her pigment so as to bring out her own natural advantages. She is naturally an advantage, and a distinguishingly heavy make up is often claimed exclusively by the principals in a theatrical cast, who object if minor characters make up with the same delicacy.

Chorus girls and show girls are often criticized for a want of taste and stupidity in this direction when they themselves are perfectly aware of this disadvantage.

Upon the stage the art of make up is by no means confined to the feminine element. The late Richard Mansfield was a past master of make up. It is told of J. E. Dodson, who was also clever with make up, that when he was playing the Jew in "After Dark" he was asked for after the performance by a Jewish gentleman. Upon Dodson's presenting him with a white card, he said, "You're the gentleman I called." "I was," said Mr. Dodson, the actor. "Yes, I am he," Dodson replied. "No, no," said the other placing his finger on his nose, "he is one of us."

COLD CREAM FIRST.

A theatrical make up usually consists of a coating first of cold cream. After this comes the blinding of the foundation, either grease paint of a very light shade or a mixture of cream and powder.

The cheeks are then rouged—always a hard's not, as a chamois sponge is used to streak and the eyebrows and lashes darkened.

Thinning the lips follows and this is done with some judgment in following the lines of the mouth. Often the color of the cheeks is carried beyond the corners of the mouth. Often a faint touch of rouge is added to the tips of the ears as after the nose. It is powdered over with a blending brush working from the middle of the forehead to either side down the cheeks and from the nose downward toward the chin and neck.

In addition, features are added and subtracted with a marvelous cleverly by the present day actor. Snub noses are cleverly built up into Greek or Roman shapes; a line placed just right produces or suggests hollow high cheek bones or a too broad nose, and eliminated by an expert touch of powder.

Comedians with sharp faces build up their cheeks for parts requiring a full face. This is done by layers of potted reddish cream, which is applied against the cheeks and afterward colored with grease paints. One inevitable result of this is to make any sort of expression impossible—the face is practically a mask.

A much lighter make up is used by the actress for street or restaurant—a coating first of liquid powder applied with a silk sponge. After this, rouge is applied, which is powdered and darkened touches to the eyebrows and lashes.

Chalk powder is used by the non-professional, which powder is applied to the neck and arms coated very thinly lest it crack or peel or produce a streaked appearance.

After this, powder may be applied if desired.

But after all no fixed rules can be put down on paper for make up; it is an art, pure and simple, which must be studied like painting or music.

A superb genius in her make-up is

Persia's Exile and Affairs in the Far East

The return of the exiled Shah, Mohammed Ali Mirza, to Persia brings fresh complications into the already unsettled affairs of that country. There is a fear that to indicate an extensive movement to restore old despoties, Shah, the disfaction existing almost entirely among a few northern tribes who have risen in rebellion against the government under the leadership of Salar Ed Dowleh, a brother of the exile.

Under the regency of Nasr-ul-Mulk the government has just begun to make effective some of the reforms for which the revolution of two years ago that overthrew Mohammed Ali Mirza and established a constitutional government was undertaken. A stable ministry of men of some capability has been formed, and the finances of the country, which were among the serious problems of the new government, are in process of reorganization by Americans and the American Parliament. The recent difficulty with Great Britain over the protection of the trade highways of southern Persia within the British sphere of influence has been settled by the government's promise of more effective police patrol.

The most formidable obstacle to what the government considers its independence of action, the power exercised by Russia in northern Persia, remains. Persians lay the blame of much of the disorder in the towns of the Caspian and Caucasus regions to the machinations of the Russians. They say that the Russians have risen in rebellion against the government under the leadership of Salar Ed Dowleh, a brother of the exile.

Upon his deposition, Mohammed Ali Mirza went to southern Russia. A pension was granted him by Persia, and it is said Russia agreed to restrain him from making any effort to overthrow the constitutional government and also to prevent any uprising in his favor with the sphere of influence. Much to the surprise of Europe he appeared last winter in southern France. The charge was then made that he met a party of malcontents and that a conspiracy was formed to restore him to the throne. He denied this and said that he had received permission from Russia to make the journey on account of ill health. At the various other European resorts at which he appeared there were similar charges of conspiracy. Representations were made to Russia in the matter, but unofficial reports say that Russia replied the exile was "merely a sick man" and that there was no reason to compel him to remain at home.

The Persian Government is strong enough to put down the rebellion unless it is more extended than the reports would indicate. It seems to have the loyalty of the Bakhtiari, the best organized fighting men of the country, and the Minister of War threatens a vigorous campaign.

There is less interest apparently in the rebellion itself than in the backing that made it possible. That is a matter which Great Britain, a loyal supporter in recent years of the Russian policy in Persia, may feel it incumbent upon herself to inquire into.—New York Sun.

Sheep Pasture in Manhattan :

One lone ram caused more wonder in City Hall Park last night than a Fourth of July oration. The sheep, a beautiful three-quarter-grown animal, grazed peacefully on the several-million dollar lawn as if it were his native grass in the wilds of Wyoming. He was led with a fifteen-foot rope to one of the small trees.

Little dog Spot could brook no rival in his city hall grounds. He sprang a dash at Mr. Ram. The latter lowered a head from which protruded a business-like pair of horns, gave a belligerent "baa-a-a-a" and awaited the attack. Little dog Spot changed his mind and started for Broadway.

The ram is a pedigreed animal and was sent east to a city hall reporter. It was shipped direct to his office and he called for aid from his friend, Joe Ryan, son of the custodian of city hall. Joe turned the ram out to graze at 8 o'clock and at midnight found a berth for him in the engine-room. He will be out to graze to-day, and tomorrow will go to East Setauket.—New York Sun.

sessions must be made to her before she will withdraw her troops. As these concessions are of considerable importance, the Persians declare that they will not be forced to make them in such a manner, and that, moreover, the request for concessions was irrelevant and that Russia should abide by the spirit of her undertaking. The Persians say that this unsettled condition is continued in order that Russia may have the semblance of grievance. They declare, too, that Russian agents have been spreading discontent among the people of the north and that most of the trouble of the new government is due to their actions.

Vacations That Pay for Themselves

LONDON.—The man whose purse is not long enough to provide him with a holiday of the conventional kind need not stay disconsolately at home on that account, for there are literally dozens of ways open to any man of enterprise of taking a healthy and happy holiday which will pay for itself, even if it does not leave a nice little balance to take home.

Dozens of young city clerks, for instance, have a most enjoyable fortnight or three weeks by the sea every summer without parting with a penny of their savings. They all have some musical ability—can sing a good song, play an instrument, or give comic recitation (such men are numbered in thousands). By clubbing together and giving a couple of performances a day on the sand they reap a sufficient harvest of copper and silver to have a remarkably good time at no cost to themselves.

Others contrive to spend their holidays in some farmer's hay-fields, where, in return for excellent board and lodging and nominal wages, they spend their days in the healthiest of occupations, strengthening their muscles, basking in the sun, and drinking beer as steward or cook's assistant at a nominal shilling a month, and can enjoy his holiday, if he does not mind roughing it a little, under ideally healthy conditions.

The boarding houses at our seaside resorts offer hundreds of these facilities for a "holiday that pays for itself." Many a poor person, for instance, is welcomed every summer as a non-paying guest by the proprietors of boarding houses which like to have a clergyman in the house to give a "tune" and note of respectability to it. A parson, especially if he is young and good looking, is a valuable lure, especially, it is said, to lady guests, and is a creep attraction at the small cost of his keep.

But the most enviable of these free holiday-makers is undoubtedly the man (and there are hundreds of him) who is invited to hotels and boarding and country houses for his gifts of entertainment. These gifts cover a wide range. He may be a clever conversationalist and raconteur, a genius at getting up dances and entertainments generally, a good amateur actor, an expert at games, etc.

In any of these, and in many other the life of the house, a man who makes things go and keeps his fellow-guests alive and happy. To charge such a man for his board and lodgings would be iniquitous. He is worth them and more. He has the best of good times (earns it); and when he returns home, his holiday over, he usually carries back a nice little cheque with him and a cordial invitation to "be sure to come next year."

AN EXTRAORDINARY example of the way in which mountain men afford a vacation is the "mountain life rings" of the "MOUNTAIN LIFE RINGS" in which mountain men afford a vacation for the mountain men themselves. Between the mountains and the sea, the life rings are encircled with zones of vegetation, which run almost like contour lines around them. Between 6500 and 6600 feet the yellow pine is the dominant tree. From 5500 to 5800 feet the Douglas fir, the silver fir, the cork fir and the aspen share the available ground. Between 10,300 and 11,500 feet English spruce stands in the forest line. English spruce stands in the tree limit.—Scientific American.

This Umbrella Cost $15,000

NEW YORK.—It is strange the fascination that gambling is for some men," said a retired roulette dealer. "I know of one instance in my time in which an umbrella worth about 75 cents caused a lawyer to lose over $15,000."

"This evening about one o'clock he entered the room and sat down to play cards or made a bet at the roulette table. He did not resist the temptation to frequent the roulette table. He was a man of considerable means and had been on duty the night before. He had been to the Pennsylvania club, where he played for several hours every night at the table where I spun the wheel. He played for several hours every night at the table where I spun the wheel. When he could not be found in either of the rooms he was seen carrying on most of the time a conversation with friends who stood watching the play. Luck favored him from the start. When the ball came up black he bet half of his money on it and won, taking my word for just how much it was.

One night, when it was raining very hard, he left the club and was carrying me dripping umbrella asked me to keep it for him. He laughed as he passed it to me, remarking that he had been beaten in roulette and was about to give up, taking my word for just how much it was.

On another occasion, he was sitting on the veranda waiting for the stage to take up to the track when we noted him and the lawyer's station wagon with the family. He was walking along the main entrance and letting him out proceed on his way to the station. We were surprised to see him, for he never came near the station during the day and was not the kind who would be likely to call about his check.

Women Farm Laborers :

One of the early morning sights in Boston is the small army of women farm laborers starting out for their day's work on the truck farms or gardens in the suburbs. They start early, they return late, but their season is short.

The sight of women working in the garden farming districts as to attract no special attention. Almost all of these women are Italians, the very picture of health, short and sturdy, straight backed and straight limbed, and they can handle a hoe or even a fork or spade with as much dexterity and effectiveness as the average man.

But when it comes to weeding these women seem to be in a class all by themselves. It is a picturesque sight to watch at a distance a group of these weavers at work. One thing the Italian women do not do. She won't lay aside her bright colored finery. It seems to be necessary to her happiness when she is on her knees weeding onions or breaking her back crushing potato bugs as it is when she is gossiping on her house stoop or celebrating a holiday.—Boston Globe.

She Wouldn't Wed in Tunnel for $1000

FORT COLLINS, Colo.—After traveling from New York to Colorado to be married in the Laramie-Fouche tunnel, 5000 feet under ground, and for so doing receive a gift of $1000, Miss Della Stevenson of New York City, took one look into the dark tunnel chasm and promptly decided that she preferred her ceremony to be in Denver.

Gossip About Makers of Books and Their Work

Three new books of the season are attracting general attention. They are "The Harvester" (Doubleday, Page & Co.), by Gene Porter; "The Ne'er Do Well" (Harper), by Rex Beach; "Day Unto Day" (Bobbs, Merrill Co.), by Louis Howland.

Rex Beach has written a remarkable book in "The Harvester," and she has realized for her readers the hopes raised by such books as "Freckles" and "The Girl of the Limberlost."

"Freckles" was an infinitely pathetic story, and "The Girl of the Limberlost" one of the finest books of the year for young people. It told the story of the brave girl who, out in the "Limberlost," gathered butterflies and sold her specimens in order to send herself to school.

"The Harvester" is another ambitious book. A hint of the contents of the book may be found in the dedication:

"A high portion of the life of a man of today is centered in the hope that in cleanliness, poetic temperament and mental force a likeness will be seen to Henry David Thoreau." And it may be easily seen that "The Harvester" is modeled along the lines of Thoreau's love for nature—his appreciation of its simplest forms.

HEART OF THE WOODS.

The Harvester lives alone in the heart of the woods. The name is given him because he finds here many many medicines. He is a comparatively rich man, because he has transplanted herbs to his own garden, and raises in large quantities plants very valuable in medicine. California can very thoroughly understand "The Harvester" for our people know the heart of the woods, and we have our own type of the Harvester in Luther Burbank of Santa Rosa. The Harvester lives alone with Belshazzar, his dog, whom he calls "Bel" for short. He has named him Belshazzar because it means protection, and the sympathy between the dog and the man is wonderfully portrayed. In the very first chapter we are allowed to hear the conversation between the Harvester and Bel.

In fact, the Harvester talks so much out loud to himself and to Bel that we are made to know the inmost secrets of the Harvester says anxiously to the dog: "Do I go courting this year, Bel? Do I rig up in uncomfortable store clothes and parade up before the country and city girls and try to persuade the one I can get, probably—not the one I would want—to marry me, and come here and spoil all our good times? Do we want a woman around scolding if we are away from home, whining because she is lonesome, fretting for luxuries we cannot afford to give her? Are you going to let us in for a scrape like that, Bel?"

THE HUMAN ELEMENT.

The Harvester decides he will have none of it, and the intensely human element is set in the heart of a wonderful description of evening in the forest.

The Harvester has a dream. There was a path of gold over the lake.

"Seems as if I could walk it," muttered the Harvester, and as he looked a white object stepped upon the bridge of gold and lightly advanced in his direction. He could see that it was a very tall slender woman, wrapped in soft robes of white. A wall of light outlined and rimmed her in a setting of gold. As she neared the shore the Harvester's blood began to run in his veins. First she was like a slender birch trunk. Then she resembled a wild gull. And soon she was close enough to prove that she was young and very lovely. Her eyes were wide open, wells of darkness, her rounded cheeks faintly pink, and her red lips smiling invitation. Her throat was long, very white, and the hands that caught up the fleecy robe around her were rose-colored and slender.

In a panic the Harvester saw that the trailing robe swept the undulant cold water, but was not wet; the feet were not purple with cold, but warm with a pink glow. The girl walked to him, and smiled into his eyes. He could scent the flower-like odor of her body and her hair. He struggled frantically to conceal it as she leaned closer, and softly but firmly laid her soft, pulsing sweetness on his in a deliberate kiss.

GLORIOUS ENVIRONMENT.

How interested one grows in the daily life of the Harvester—with its wild environment, with the lovely words making such a glorious environment. The Harvester is so very sure of finding the sweet woman of his dream that he does not always want to see it pictured.

Is the wonderful that might happen, that we love. So a beautiful story is woven for us in the quest of the Harvester for his dream girl. And the story of his quest of the lovely woman of his dream is the heart of the beautiful love story.

men; it would be presumption to reckon myself stronger. So I live alone. As for money, I've watched the cross cuts and the quick and easy ways to accumulate it; but I've had something in me that held me to the slow, sure, clean work of my own hands, and it's yielded enough for one, for two even, in a reasonable degree. So I've worked and read. If I couldn't wear myself down enough to sleep by any other method, I went into the lake and swam across and back; and that is guaranteed to put any man to rest, clean and unashamed."

It is a very beautiful tale in which we read the story of the winning and wooring of the Dream Girl. It is a fine, strong story; in it is the fragrance of the woods, the life of the forest, and the beautiful strength in the soul of a man. "The Harvester" is a book to be reckoned with, one of the best books along uplifting lines, that has appeared this year.

"DAY UNTO DAY."

"Day Unto Day" (Bobbs-Merrill Company), is a series of essays by Louis Howland. It derives its name from the line in the Psalms, "Day unto day uttered speech." The essays are extremely well written, and they were originally printed from week to week in the "Indianapolis News" under the title of "Case and Comment."

Such a wonderful garden as he made around the new home—a riot of magnificient color.

In a trip to the near-by city he caught a glimpse of the girl, only to lose her, and there goes all over again the quest of the dream girl.

Suddenly the dream came true. The girl's aunt died, the uncle was cruel, the Harvester found her and married her "then and there." And in the last half of the book we have the story of how he won her love.

The clothes he buys for her trouousse are quite wonderful, and then he takes her to a home in the woods that he likes very much.

The color tones in the book remind one of the best work of William Black, in his wonderful sketches of the far land of the Hebrews. A perfect plot of color runs through the book, and one picture illustrates many others in the book. It describes the garden of her new home as the bride first sees it:

THE WONDERFUL GARDEN.

"Everywhere flamed foxfire and cardinal flower, thousands of wild tiger lilies lifted gorgeous orange-red trumpets, beside pearl white turtle head and moon daisies, while all the creek bank was a coral lime with the first opening bloom of big pink mallows. Rank jewel flower poured gold from dainty cornucopias and lavender beard tongue offered honey to million bumbling bees; water smart weed spread a glowing pink background, and twining amber dodder topped the marsh in lace mist with its delicate white bloom. Straight before them a staid road climbed to the bridge and in a moment hid between the young hedge of small trees and bushes, where again flowers and bright color bloomed and led to the cabin still invisible."

STORY BY BEACH.

"The Ne'er-Do-Well" (Harper) by Rex Beach is a book to absorb the attention of the reading public. One could wish for a better name, for the title gives no clue to the real importance of the book. Rex Beach named his other books much more happily, in such titles as "The Spoilers," "The Silver Horde," and "The Barrier." However, one forgets the absorbing interest of the story.

Very able essays are written under such suggestive heads as "Effect of Power," "Industry" and "Humility," "Moderation," and "The Future Life."

The book is very beautifully bound in red and gold, and would make a charming gift to friend. It is also one of the most helpful of books for one's library.

THE OTHER SIDE.

There is another side to the Panama question, which gives the reader much food for thought. It concerns our relations with Latin Central America. Runnels says to Anthony:

"You know we Americans occupy a peculiar position here, set down as we are in the midst of an alien people who hate us. Oh, they hate us, all right—all except a few of the better class."

WHY?

"There are a good many reasons. For one thing, there's a sort of racial antipathy. You don't like them, do you? Well, they don't like you either, and the same feeling exists from Mexico to Patagonia, although it is strongest in these regions. It is partly that resentment of an inferior race, I suppose. Then, too, when we stole Panama we made the Colombians sore, and all Central America besides, for they realized that once we Yankees got a foothold here we'd hang on and not only dominate this country but all the neighboring republics as well. That's just what we're beginning to do; that's why the Cortlanders are here. The stage is clearing for a big political drama. Mr. Anthony, which may mean the end of Latin Central America."

"I had gathered something of the sort—but I had no idea there was so much in it."

"United States must protect its canal, and to that end is building stone quarries on Ancon Hill which are really fortifications. American capital is coming in here, too, and in order to protect the whole thing we must dominate Panama itself. Once that is done, all the countries between here and the Texas border will begin to feel our influence. Why, Costa Rica is almost nothing but a fruit farm owned by a Boston corporation. Of course nobody can forecast the final result, but the Mexicans, the Honduras, the Guatemalans, and the others have begun to feel it, and that's why the anti-American sentiment is constantly growing. You don't read much about it in the papers, but just live here for a while and you'll find out."

"But we don't want the jungle countries."

"That's where you're wrong. By and by we'll need room to expand; and when that time comes we'll move south, not north or west. Tropical America is richer than all our great Northwest, and we'll grab it sooner or later."

"It is of wonderful interest. Out there in the Canal zone men are working like mad. Here in our beloved California men are working, too. Out there, they are looking towards the end. We too, are looking towards an end, which shall be for us, a beginning—and our state is pushing steadily forward, under the slogan of '1912.'

The love story in the book is charming. One meets Mrs. Cortland, the American woman, who dominates the political situation in Panama, and who controls the Spanish "Panamanians" as they are called. Anthony falls in love with the sweetest Spanish maiden in all the world: "Chiquita Gravel," and in the last chapter, Anthony Senior arrives, and the book closes to the music of happy wedding bells.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

In the matter of literary gossip it is interesting to know where visitors are from.

Margaret Deland has gone to her beautiful summer home, Kennebunkport, Maine, for rest and change after her four years work on "The Iron Woman." She expects to spend part of the summer in a camp in the woods and will not return to her Boston home until after "The Iron Woman" is published.

Rex Beach has bought a house with motor-boat and automobile accessories at Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey, and finds it a convenient distance for motoring to and from New York. He has just finished correcting proofs of his new novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," a story of Panama, which will be published this month.

W. N. Harben has taken a furnished house for the summer in Georgia, his native State. Mr. Harben has succeeded in reproducing in his books the special peculiarities of the dialect spoken by the Georgia negroes, which differs from those in other sections of the South. The scene of his last novel, "Dixie Hart," was laid in that State.

Irving Bacheller is spending his summer in the Adirondacks, Robinson Hill, principal occupation at present is working on the dramatization of his last book, "Keeping Up With Lizzie." Nevertheless, he finds time for some riding and fishing.

thing except this ditch, while we realize that there is such a place as home. Everything runs too smoothly. The weather is too damned nice. We are so sanitary we can't even get sick. It's even harder on the women folks, for they can't find anything to kick about, so they fuss with one another, and with us. They have clubs, you know, to improve things, but there's nothing to improve. We had a social war recently over a button. One clique wanted a club emblem that would cost a dollar and a half, while the other faction were in favor of a dollar button. You can tell a man's salary by the number of rocking chairs in his house."

Society as he sketched it was vastly amusing, and one would like to quote from it extensively.

DOWN INTO THE CUT.

But the canal is so big a proposition that it crowds social matters out. One reads:

"Down into the Cut the little car went and at last Anthony saw the active pulsating heart of this stupendous undertaking. The low range was severed by a gorge blasted out by human hands. It was a mountain valley in the making. High up on its sides were dirt and rock trains, dozens of compressed-air drills, their spars resembling the masts of a fleet of catboats at anchor—behind these grimy, powerful steam shovels which rooted and grunted like iron hogs. Along the tracks at various levels flowed a constant current of traffic; long lines of empty cars crept past the shovels, then filled past overflowing, sped away northward up the valley, to return again and again. Nowhere was there any idleness, nowhere a cold machine or a man at rest. On every hand was smoke and steam, and sweat. The drills chugged steadily, the hungry iron pigs gnawed out the track, the drills had loosened, the train rolled past at intervals of a moment or so. Lines of electric wire, carried upon low wooden 'shears,' paralleled the tracks, bearing the white-hot sparks that rent the mountain. At every switch a negro flagman crouched beneath a slanting sheet of corrugated iron seeking shelter alike from flying fragments and the blazing sun. From beneath the drills came occasional subterranean explosions; then geysers of muddy water rose in the air. Under the snouts of the steam shovels 'doh' shots went off as boulders were driven into smaller fragments. Now and then an excited tooting of whistles gave warning of a bigger blast as the flagmen checked the flow of traffic, indicating with arms upraised that the ground was 'coming up.' Thereupon a brief lull occurred; men hid themselves, the work held its breath, as it were. But while the detonations still echoed, and before the flying missiles had ceased to shower, the humans were racing at their hills once more, the wheels were turning again, the jaws of the iron hogs were clanking."

Owing to the whist tournament given by Greater Oakland camp on last Monday night for the benefit of the baseball team their regular meeting was dispensed with. After the tournament a lucky ticket holder.

Greater Oakland baseball team defeated Golden Gate last Sunday morning, by a score of 13 to 10. The game was characterized by hard hitting on the part of both teams. Gordon leading with five hits and one error, and the Blue team, Alameda won from Fraternity by the same time of a one-sided score of 14 to 3.

Next Sunday morning, Golden Gate assembly will post-waiting until a later date.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS.

Royal Neighbors of America, Golden Gate camp, No. 3228, initiated five candidates last Thursday evening in Porter Hall. The feature of the evening was boxing, there being two four-round-gos. The members will be invited to the new hospital project and will inspect the importance of the building on this side of the bay.

Toasts were responded to and the fraternal game was played.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD.

Oakland Camp, No. 94, W. O. W., held a very enjoyable evening in their lodges rooms, Carpenters' hall, last Thursday night. The feature of the evening was boxing, there being two four-round-gos. The members will be invited to the new hospital project and will inspect the importance of the building on this side of the bay.

Interpersed with the pugilistic contests were several musical numbers by the Southern Trio, and monologues by Dr. Chapman and others gave several selections. Interesting stories were told by the athletic clubs of this city.

The afternoons and evenings of August 30 and 31 there will be a theater party at the Golden Gate.

The evenings will be devoted to dancing. The ladies will be the guests of the evening.

Mrs. Eleanor Martin is planning to give a large tea early in September complimentary to Miss Bertha Dailey, whose engagement to Lieutenant Nichols was announced this week. Miss Dailey is the daughter of a leading silk merchant in Shanghai and she is very popular in American and English social sets there.

SUZETTE.

SOCIETY

NE of the most interesting of the fall wedding among the younger set in Alameda will be that of Miss Mae Bevan, daughter of E. J. Bevan of 2130 San Jose avenue, and Charles M. Cadman. The wedding will take place the latter part of next month and will be one of the features of the social season. Miss Bevan is a petite blonde of marked personal beauty, who has a wide circle of friends in the cities about the bay. She is a graduate of the Alameda schools and of the University of California, class of June, 1910.

Mr. Cadman is also well known in this vicinity, having received her education in Alameda, where his family are prominent. He is one of the rising young business men of this city, where for the past five years he has been secretary of the De Fremery interests on this side of the bay. He is also secretary of the Oakland Harbor Association.

Many social compliments will be given, Miss Bevan. Following the wedding the young couple will make their home on this side of the bay, where Mr. Cadman is building a residence for his bride.

TO RETURN IN OCTOBER.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butters will open their Claremont home, "Rose Lawn," late in October.

DANCING CLUB.

About 100 of the younger set have received invitations to the Informal Dancing Club for their series of dances. The Town and Gown Club clubbers. The hostesses will be: Mrs. Harry Martinez, Mrs. Jero Burke, Mrs. F. Brooks, Mrs. Andrew Davis, Mrs. Walter Treat, Mrs. Whitney Palache, Mrs. Benjamin Bangs, Mrs. Mansfield Lowell, Mrs. Frederick Tuttle, Mrs. F. J. Woodward.

HILL DWELLERS TO DANCE.

Saturday, September 2, is the date of the first dance and card party given by a number of the smart set of Berkeley, who are planning a series of affairs for the winter in the Hillside Clubhouse. The informal social organization will number almost 100 members. Six functions are announced during the season. In the past the club has alternated a dance and an evening at cards, but this year the two divisions will be combined. Miss Gordon Bradley has been named the presiding hostess for the initial occasion.

PRETTY ALAMEDA TEA.

Mrs. Charles Adams and Miss Anna E. Foster of Alameda were joint hostesses at a pretty appointed informal tea of the week, entertaining in delightful fashion a large number of friends.

Among the guests were Miss Virginia De Fremery, Miss De Fremery, Miss Ames, Mrs. Horace Henderson, Miss Fletcher, Mrs. Rodd of San Francisco, Mrs. George Robb, Miss Miller, Mrs. C. I. Kinney, Mrs. D. H. Foster, Misses Mary Chappell, Miss Charlotte French, Miss Hope Cortelyou, Mrs. Duncan, Miss Cheyenne, Miss Mildred Adams, Miss Gladys Bradley and Miss Isobel Kerrick.

WEDDING DATE SET.

Miss Gladys Cameron has chosen Tuesday, September 19, as the date for her wedding to William Mountrop. The wedding will be solemnized in the West Side Christian church in San Francisco in the presence of a large number of guests, and will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cameron, on Second avenue.

ORD BEACONSFIELD is credited with the saying that a beautiful hand is more enduring than a beautiful face. If this be true, Lord Beaconsfield could not have been the keen observer of people that he was of national politics, for beautiful hands show the effect of age much more quickly than beautiful faces.

"The beauty of a youthful hand," says Winckelmann, "consists in a moderate degree of plumpness, resembling a soft shadow over the articulations of the fingers, where if the hand is plump there is a dimple. The fingers taper gently toward their extremities like finely shaped columns, and Balzac has pointed out that women of superior intellect almost always have beautiful hands, the perfection of which is the distinctive indication of a high destination."

A fine hand, indeed, is a sign of superior intelligence in a much more comprehensive state than Balzac had in mind, for the progress from the simian to the human face is not greater than the progress from the ape's hand to man's in the beauty of outline, smoothness of surface, grace of gesture, and general utility. It is no wonder that the hands have been called "man's second face," for they are almost as good an index of his character, habits, and profession as is his face—and the fact that man's feet have become exclusively adapted to walking, leaving the hands free to serve as tools to carry out the ideas engendered in the brain, shows man's chief superiority over animals.

Hand Bath of Olive Oil.

Just as the face has its physiognomists and phrenologists, so have the hands its chiromancers, who insist that they can read character by their lines and foretell one's fate. Whether this is true or not is not for me to say, but I believe most thoroughly with Shakespeare when he said, "there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in our philosophy," and I do know that in your hand you find indication of certain characteristics. Often it is just the things that we do not do rather than the things which we do that make or mar a hand. All women can not have artistically beautiful hands and arms; indeed, when we look upon some of the extremities that are bared by the fashionable sleeve of today, we almost feel that not only were the beautiful arms of the Venus de Milo lost to the world forever, but no woman since has ever found even their beauty in her own.

A well kept hand, regardless of its size or shape, is always so fascinating that one should not hesitate to devote to the hands the little care that is required each day. One must remember that the hand has more expression than any other member of the body except the face, and that it has expression in repose as well as action; nothing so readily stamps the gentlewoman as the sight of her well kept hands.

A pretty hand is not necessarily an idle one. That early Victorian idea of the inert, helpless, roseleaf type happily has gone out of fashion, and the capable looking hand with its well groomed beauty now seems to be the preferred one, in accordance with our newer ideas of the fitness of things.

Comely Hands of Japanese Women.

It is said that the Japanese women have model hands, and that they are their chief pride. Their fingers are always well rounded and tapering and their nails cut in the most exquisite almond shape. They are great believers in the idea that high breeding brings a legacy of good hands, though the unceasing care they bestow upon them probably has much to do with their comeliness.

In the perfect hand one finds the palm plump but not cushiony. It should be soft and pink, the fingers long and tapering, slender but not sprawly in shape, rounding but not thick at the base; the nails should be transparent, small and oval, with a decided half moon at the base; knuckles inconspicuous, and the line of the fingers almost straight without prominent joints, and each finger separated from the other, the of your hands—and there are some skins that it does not agree with—try using the following meal in its place: Bitter almond meal, six ounces; Orris root powder, four ounces; oatmeal flour, four ounces; white castile soap, powdered, two ounces; borax, powdered, one-half ounce; oil of verbena, two drams; oil of bitter almonds, ten drops. Sift the oatmeal until you get a fine powdery flour, mix the powders thoroughly and sift together before adding the perfume. Stir them in and sift again. Keep in tightly covered bottle; it is convenient to have a small quantity on the washstand in a jar with a perforated top, so that the powder may be shaken on the hands when required.

After going without gloves the whole summer, you usually will need a paste to restore the hands quickly to their original soft condition. A good cream for the purpose is made of myrrh, one ounce; honey, four ounces; yellow wax, two ounces, and rose water, six ounces. Melt the wax in a double boiler over a slow fire; do not let it boil, just melt. Now add the myrrh, which must be in powdered form. Beat these two ingredients together thoroughly, then stir in the honey, which has been strained and slightly warmed, and the rosewater. Finally, drop by drop, add enough glycerine to make a spreadable paste, beating the mixture constantly.

Prevention Easier than the Cure.

You must remember that tan, sunburn, and freckles are much easier to prevent than to cure. If the skin of your hands is sensitive, rub cold cream on them before you start on your day's work or shopping expedition, wiping off all superfluous grease before donning your gloves. Washing the hands in buttermilk is also good for the skin, and for hands that have become hard and dark colored with harsh looking skin, an inexpensive remedy is oatmeal paste.

Bolt the oatmeal until soft and smooth and of rather stiff consistency; then work it to a creamy paste with sweet olive oil. Spread this paste on a pair of old kid gloves that are two or three sizes too large for you. Wear these gloves at night or two or three hours at a time, until the paste begins to harden; afterwards wash off with warm water.

Imperfect rinsing of the hands and careless drying are frequent causes of roughness and chapping, especially in cold water. Before you put the hands into water, remove all stains from them with lemon juice or a bit of pumice stone, then wash in warm water, using a pure mild soap or almond meal and a good soft nail brush to cleanse the pores thoroughly. Rinse in tepid and again in cooler water, then dry thoroughly with a soft cloth. Finally apply a good cold cream, olive oil or a preparation composed of glycerine, boric acid, and rosewater. This regime will keep the hands white and flexible despite household duties.

The friend who has the most beautiful hands I have ever known keeps them so by immersing them in warm olive oil for a few minutes every night before she goes to bed. During the time that her hands are in the bowl of oil they are gently rubbed and manipulated, particular attention being given to the joints and articulation of the fingers. This woman is many years past Balzac's woman of 30, but she still retains hands of a girl of 16.

Any bit of wearing apparel which impedes circulation, such as tight corsets, closely fitting sleeves, or small gloves, tends to distend the veins of the hands and imparts to them a red, puffy appearance. The cause first must be removed, but if this does not remedy the evil the hands should be held up above the head and shaken limply from the wrists many times a day. This will not only keep your hands white, but will act as a great aid in overcoming nervousness.

Helps to Whiten the Hands.

It is not an easy matter to have hands that are always soft and white and nails neatly trimmed and polished, especially for the housekeeper who is obliged to do most of her own work. This woman should apply cold cream nightly, particularly about the cuticle around the nails, to prevent hardening and drying and ultimately producing hangnails.

When washing the hands, one should never fail to press back gently the delicate selvage-like edge around the roots of the nails; by doing so the lunule or little whitish half moon at their bases is brought into prominence. Sometimes the edge of the cuticle will have to be cut a little with a nail scissor if it has become ragged. But do not do this unless it is positively necessary, for if the cuticle is pressed back while the hands are wet, it grows symmetrically and makes a delicate setting for the nails; if the skin is left to grow around the nails, it leaves an unsightly appearance.

After applying the cold cream and massaging the hands gently at night you can wear chamois gloves with the paste in them. An occasional sponging with peroxide of hydrogen also helps to whiten the skin.

Those who have the obnoxious habit of nibbling at their nails are advised to paint them with benzoin. Nails should never be cut, but filed off when perfectly dry. Never clean your nails nor attempt to push back the cuticle with metal. This has been repeated so many times in newspapers and magazines and by attendants in beauty shops that one would think the whole nail cleaning population would know it, and yet how many people we see using the blade of a pocket knife, the sharp end of a scissors or file, to clean their nails; indeed, many women consider the sharp end of a hairpin quite the most useful implement for this work. The nail brush and orange wood stick are all that should be used in this connection. I keep a small bottle of soap in which I dip my orange wood stick which has a little bit or absorbent cotton around its end, and always clean my nails and push back the cuticle with this.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

A CONSTANT READER: If you will send me a self-addressed envelope I shall gladly send you some simple methods for removing superfluous hair that will help to solve your problem.

A.P.: If your hair is inclined to be excessively oily you should let the hair hang loose down the back and sit in the sunshine. This allows the sunshine to get at the scalp and helps to dry up the excess of oil. Once a week use the following lotion, which is really more of a cleanser than a stimulant: One-fourth ounce bicarbonate of soda, one-fourth ounce of borax, two ounces of cologne, one ounce rectified spirits, one-half ounce tincture of cochineal, and sixteen ounces of distilled water. Mix the ingredients and shake thoroughly. Rub it into the scalp freely, using as you would a tonic, only applying plenty of it, and then let the hair dry in the sunlight. I am sending you by mail the methods by which a number of my friends developed their busts and a recipe for a simple, inexpensive bleach for freckles.

N.M.: I do not advise you to wash your hair in gasoline. It dries the hair and will cause it to break and fall out. Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for recipes for a simple, inexpensive soap jelly that is an effective shampoo, and for the cold cream that I use in the theater. The cream is nourishing and cleansing and will not cause a growth of superfluous hair on the face.

Choice of Soap Requires Care.

One should exercise a great deal of care in the kind of soap one uses for one's hands and face. When you find a soap that agrees with you, use it. In nine cases out of ten, highly scented soaps, unless they are the expensive kind, eat up the natural oil of the skin and leave it rough. If the water is hard, add a few drops of benzoin or a little borax. If the hands are stained, use lemon juice or peroxide of hydrogen.

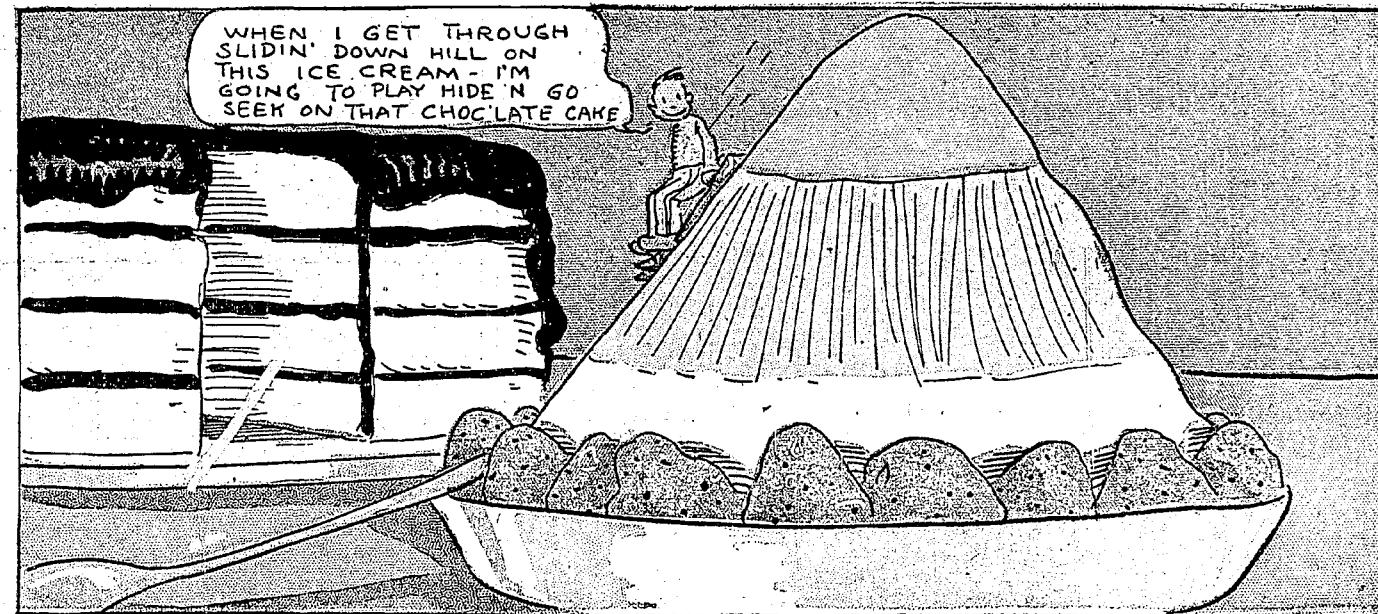

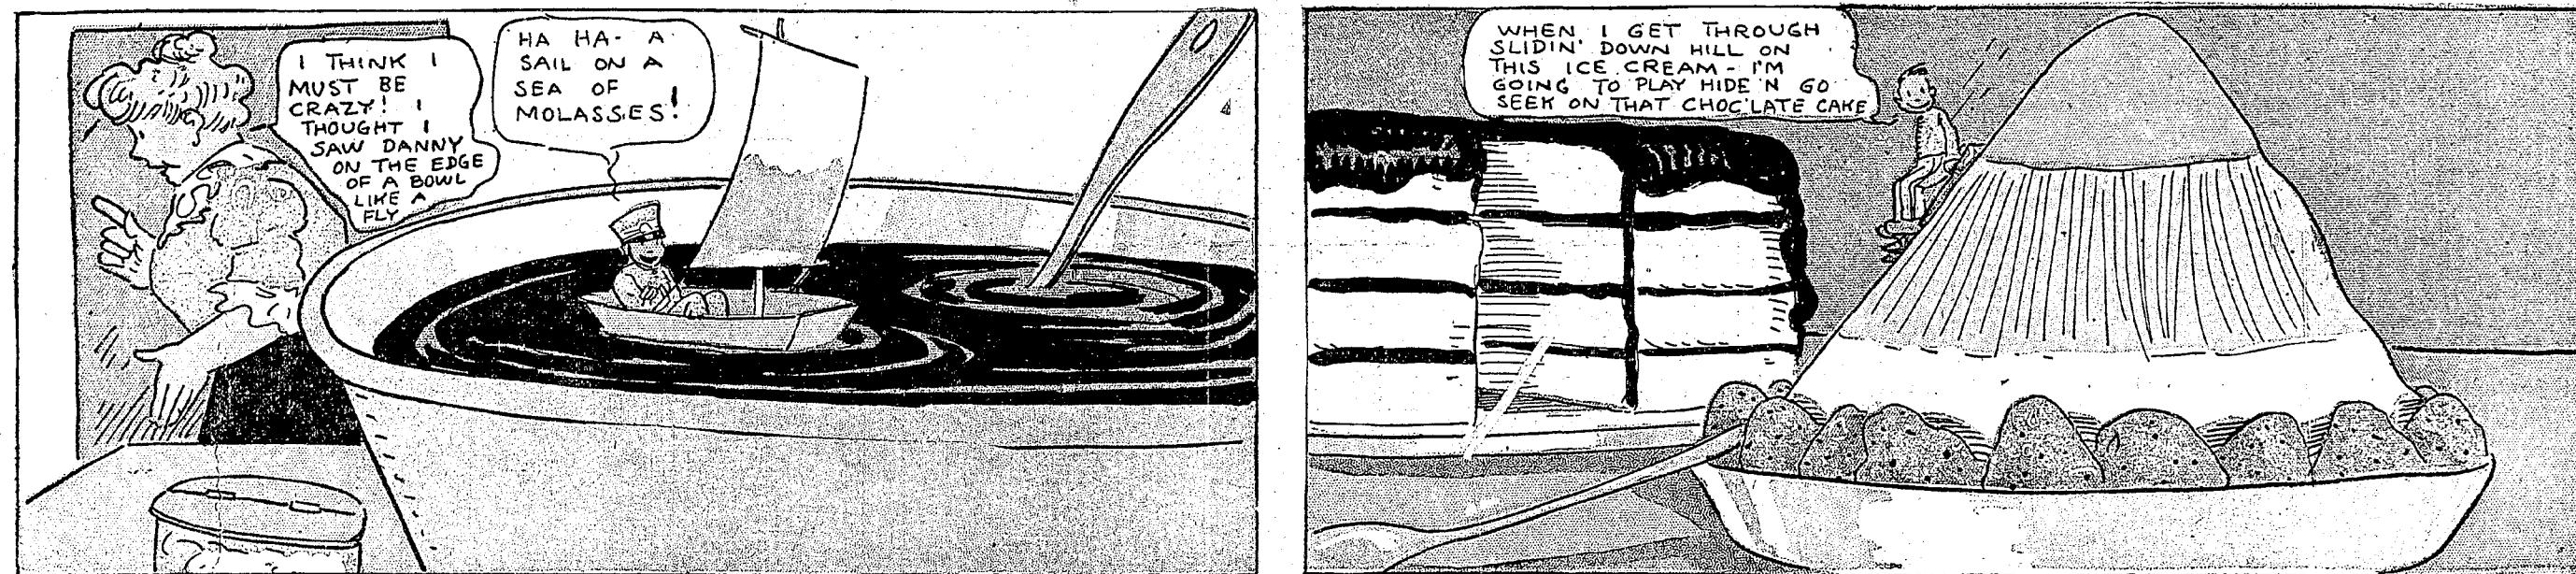

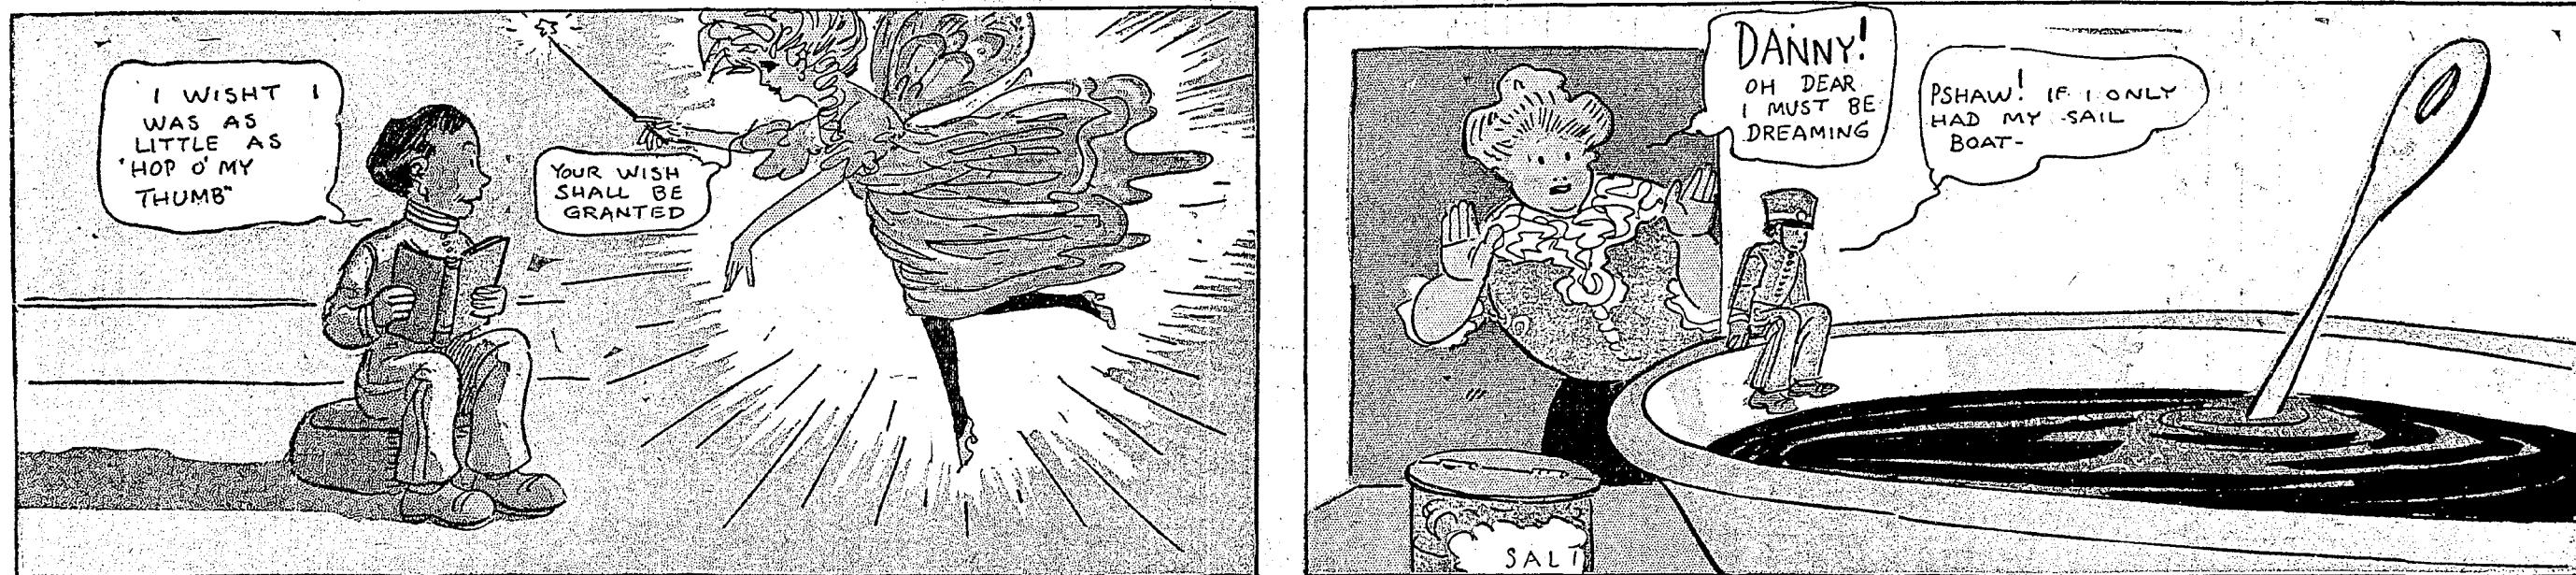

If you find that soap does not agree with the skin

Quite a large ship, that, eh, children? But how diminutive compared with the one on which I was once forced to show a crowd of seasoned sailors just what could be done on a full-rigged ocean-going vessel. You see, these sailors had to be taught—my word was not good enough for them—and so it was up to me to prove to them that they knew absolutely nothing whatever about a ship. Incidentally, I tried to teach them some things which would have proved serviceable to them, no doubt, had they lingered and paid strict attention. But they didn't, which proves the adage that it's hard work to teach old dogs (especially sea dogs) new tricks.

OLD OPIE DILDOCK'S STORIES

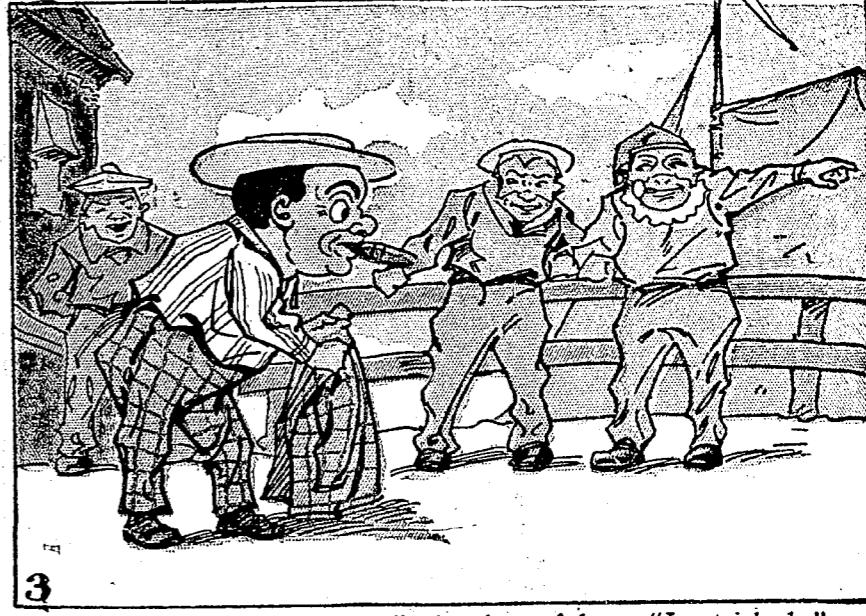

(Copyright: 1911; by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

1 I was sauntering along the docks one bright morning, dressed, as I always was in those days, immaculately. I noticed a few old salts perched on a railing as I approached, but paid little attention to them, although they stared very hard at me, broad grins upon their tanned and weather-beaten countenances.

2 I was walking past them, my mind on much weightier problems than loafing sailors, when one of them passed a remark about my natty attire. No man ever poked fun at me without being shown up in his proper light, so I boastingly told them they never could afford clothes like mine for they didn't know enough about a ship.

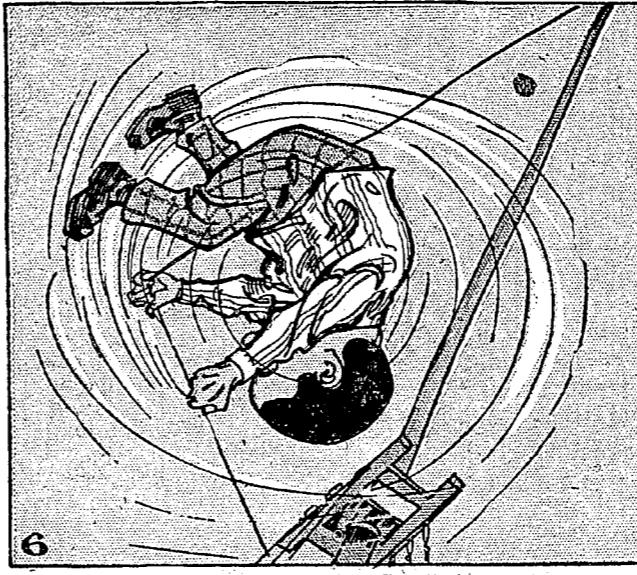

3 "Maybe you do, old cove," grinned one of them. "I certainly do," said I, with no little heat, "and if you'll come with me, the whole outfit of you, to yonder ship I'll show you some things you never dreamed of." They laughingly agreed, so I removed my coat and ran lightly down the gangplank onto the ship.

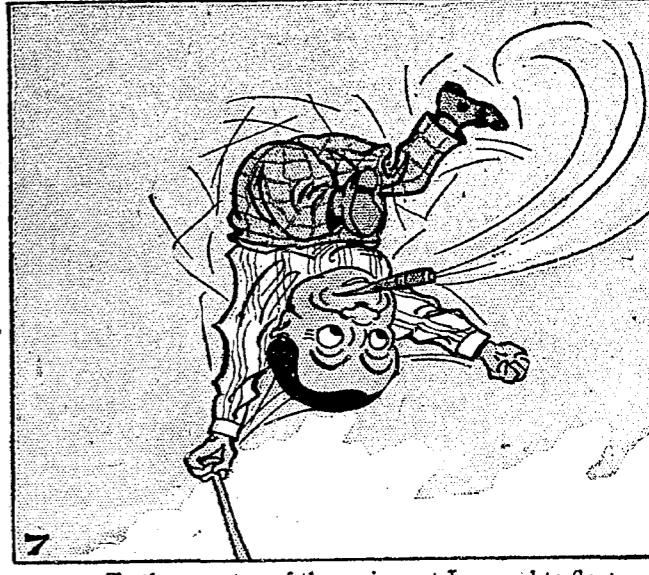

4 Hand over hand, with the greatest display of ease, I climbed lightly up to the maintop mast-stay of the mainmast, pausing momentarily for a second or so to wave my hand at the sailors as they stood gaping at this exhibition of latent strength.

5 Reaching the cross-trees I climbed over them and neared the top of the mainmast. Here, with one hand gripping the maststay and my foot pressed against the mast, I neatly balanced myself while I lighted a fresh cigar with great coolness.

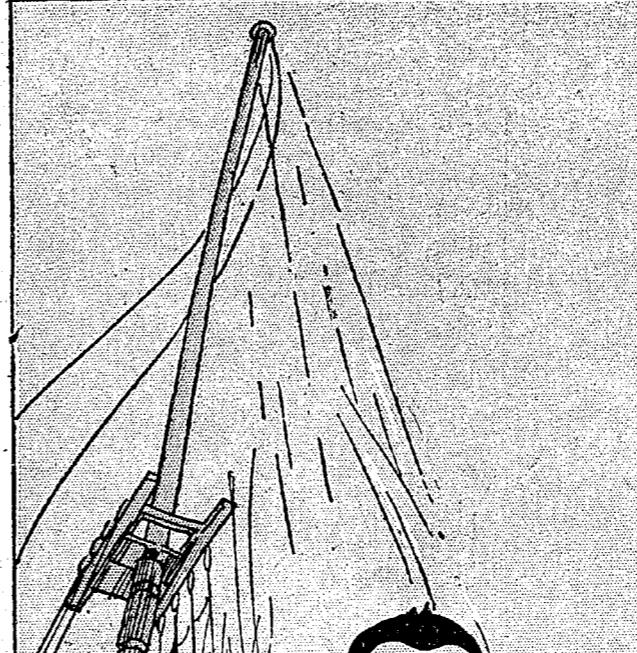

6 My cigar between my teeth, I pulled my foot away from the mast and clutched the mainstay with both hands. Then I went through a series of evolutions, including three or four giant swings, releasing the stay and shooting upward.

7 To the very top of the mainmast I seemed to float. As I flew up I grabbed the little knob which surmounted the top of the mast and balanced myself on one hand while it swayed dizzily, my feet thrown high in the air. Luckily it didn't break.

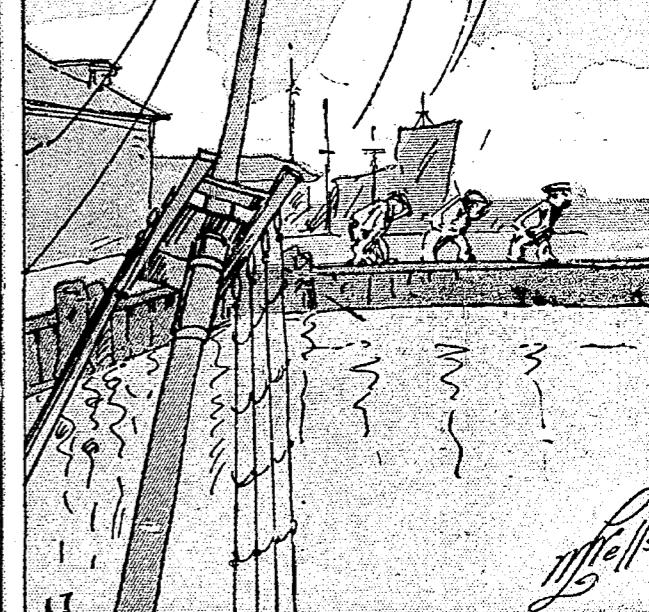

8 By this time the sailors' cries of derision had changed to screeches of consternation and admiration. Then, standing on my hands straight up in the air, I made ready to dive from the top of the mast down into the placid waters below.

9 As I jumped, however, the sailors yelled at me. "You'll be killed instantly, for those waters are infested with thousands of man-eating sharks!" This warning, of course, changed my plans so I had to think faster than I ever had to before.

10 Halfway down (not having come prepared to fight thousands of sharks) I checked my course and came to an abrupt standstill in midair. Then I swiftly turned my body, equalizing the momentum, and shot back up, slower, however, than I had come down.

11 Up, up I rushed through the air, finally reaching the tip of the mast and standing there on one foot. The sailors, thoroughly disgusted with themselves over having laughed at me, waved a farewell and ambled down the docks, disappearing forever.

BIG LABOR WAR PORTENDED

TAFT TO HAVE LIVELY BATTLE

Political Enemies in Both the Parties Wage War

Clark and Dr. Wilson Are Both Eager to Enter the Fray

By EDWARD MARSHALL, Noted War Correspondent and Author.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—With the adjournment of Congress, the first real attempt to line up for the great political battle of 1912 begins and the prospect of an extremely interesting political occasion in November, 1912, and in the months preceding it, seem fine.

Among the Democrats, for the first time very evidently, will be one long sweat battle—a real wonder of a battle, and while there seems to be no likelihood of any really close fighting among the Republicans, still, one or two small details of that situation are quite warlike. The shadow (or the glory, as you please, I have no choice) of the plump man in the White House seems now to rest upon most members of the party. Prophets say that all Taft has to do is to swing his club and send the ball, with one stroke, straight into the nine hole. He is about to make a detailed study of the national links, in his impending journey, which will include most of those portions of the course which threaten difficulties.

PLenty of Caddies.

And he will find no lack of caddies. There is no doubt that a large part of his party is content with him. He announced today at the summer capital at Beverly that he would take the people into his confidence on the tariff, reciprocity, the recall of judges, and other points at issue and that he will carry the war into the districts of those who are fighting him. His friends are confident that he will carry the people with him, still there are many who believe his nomination will veritably be a hole-in-one from which escape and the long drive to the goal of another White House term will be a task requiring six strokes.

I returned recently from the Southwest and brought this information back with me. The Southwest weeps with disappointment over Roosevelt. It cannot understand how anyone can criticize its idol. There are many others that feel likewise, but none is bold enough to hope that he will be a candidate.

That Taft is, however stronger than he was a few months ago, with many, is undoubtedly. Just what effects the tariff complications and the Canadian reciprocity affair will have upon his prospects it is, really, too soon even to guess. Even the wise prophets in New York refuse to make predictions. Farmers are proverbially slow in making their announcements.

EAT TO THE GROUND.

New York opinion sees to a certainty either Educator Wilson or Judge Harmon as the Democrat standard-bearer. The frankness with which both men are striving for the honor is refreshing. Harmon's ear is pressed tight to the ground with dogged earnestness. There is no doubt that it is catching rumbplings now and then which it finds satisfactory, but it must ring unpleasantly at some of Champ Clark's rumbplings which it hears and shudders as the load rear reaches it from New Jersey.

It is the first time, is it not, that two ex-college presidents have been opposed for the Democratic nomination? Where, by the way, were two such ex-college presidents ever round before? Woodrow Wilson and Champ Clark—two widely differing types of men. That Champ Clark ever was a college president there are thousands who are ignorant. An interesting tendency obtains among the newspapers, even those of his own party, to make of him a rough and ready person, a backwoodsman, a genius of the wilds. Some papers have printed interviews with him which quote him from the first word to the last as if he spoke a woosy Ozark dialect. But, really, he has given much of his extremely busy life to definite scholastic work, beginning it in the same Kentucky schools in which he got the Young French Aviator Holds Honor in Competition for Michelin Cup.

MOURMELON, France, Aug. 26.—Helles, a young French aviator, has broken Jules Védrines' long flight record in competition for the Michelin cup. Up to an early hour this afternoon he had covered 534 miles and was still flying.

Previous to the flight made today by Helles, the record for the Michelin cup was held by Jules Védrines, who, on August 9, last, covered 800 kilometers (496.8 miles) on a French course in 7 hours 56 minutes and 36 seconds. The winner of the Michelin cup for 1911 will be the pilot who before November 1st, next, covers the greatest distance on a one circuit. The prize is the sum of $4,000 and a bronze medal costing $2,000. The contest began in 1908 when it was won by Wilbur Wright with a flight of 16.5 miles.

John W. Gates Left Will of Late Date

By Its Terms Bequests Amounting to $700,000 Are to Be Distributed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—John W. Gates made a will of much later date than the one drawn a year ago last spring by Justice Goldsleeve, the details of which have been given to the public. The information was given out yesterday in a typewritten statement by Gates' lawyers, which says:

"The last will contains a number of bequests to relatives and friends amounting all told to about $700,000. It provides for the payment of a balance of a donation made by Gates to the Methodist Episcopal Board of Education, and $100,000 is left to the Mary Gates Hospital of Fort Arthur, Texas."

The will contains a bequest to Charles G. Gates of $1,000,000 and also creates for his benefit a trust, the principal of which will amount to about $2,000,000. This trust is to continue during his life.

Mrs. Gates is named as residuary legatee. Mrs. Gates, however, in pursuance of the wish of her husband, expressed to her during his illness, has agreed to turn over to her a part of the portion of the estate bequeathed to her sufficiently large to make their shares approximately equal.

"Mrs. Gates and Charles G. Gates only are named as executors and executors of the will, which will shortly be presented for probate in Jefferson county, Texas, where Mr. Gates resided."

The facts disclosed in respect to the bequests under the new will indicate that it was said that the Gates fortune is far below the $30,000,000 at which it was estimated by certain of his friends. In Wall street it was said it would be surprising if it were finally appraised at more than $10,000,000.

The order of the court, however, will not release Entright as he still faces the charge of having shot and killed William Gentleman last May in the O'Malley saloon.

FILM FIRE KILLS 26; 80 HURT

Men, Women and Children Are Trampled to Death in Panic Following Explosion

Cry of 'Fire' Starts Awful Rush for Theater Exit That Deals Death and Destruction

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 26.—Twenty-six persons were crushed and burned to death and more than fourscore injured, many fatally, following the explosion of a moving picture film in a nickelodeon at Cannonsburg near here tonight.

Panic followed the explosion and the exits soon became jammed, men trampling women and children under foot, some being so badly crushed that identification is practically impossible.

Every doctor in Cannonsburg and Washington was rushed to the scene and aid was asked from Pittsburgh. The theater room was situated on the third story of a frame building, which was practically entirely destroyed by fire following the explosion.

FLAMES DEAL DEATH.

During the laughter of the many women and children at an exhibition of a comic opera on the canvas, there was a flash of flame, followed by a cry of "fire."

There were 114 persons in the house for the first show and a crowd of 150 waiting to get into the second show.

While the two crowds were passing on the narrow stairway the fuse exploded and the cry of fire followed. The rush to get out of the building was awful. Men and women trampled each other in their anxiety to escape.

The dead are now being taken out of the theater and are being identified as fast as possible. The injured were taken to homes and halls in the vicinity of the theater and no definite estimate of the total number is available, but is at least eighty.

It is reported that Sidney Rager and a young woman who accompanied him are dead. Another victim is a young son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kay. Arthur McPeake is also known to be among the dead. According to the chief of police, the dead may reach thirty-five.

SCENE IS PITIFUL.

In the mad rush to escape from the little moving picture house as the cry of fire rent the air, men, women and children were thrown

Was Accidentally Exploded with Pick After Being Buried Nearly 20 Years.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Aug. 26.—A stick of dynamite left in the old Chipman silver mine in Newbury, 15 or 20 years ago, suddenly exploded late yesterday, instantly killing two workmen and fatally injuring two others. One of the workmen struck the dynamite with his pick. Work was resumed at the mine recently after operations had been suspended for a number of years.

COREY MAY SUE FOR DIVORCE WOULD RE-MARRY FIRST WIFE

MRS. W. E. COREY, who was Maybelle Gilman, a singer in comic opera, and from whom, it is reported, Corey now wants a divorce in order that he may remarry his first wife. Society, it is said, did not take up the former chorus girl and both she and Corey, according to reports, are equally tired of the game.

She tried philanthropy and then took lessons in singing with the idea of returning to the stage. It is reported that both she and Corey are tired of the game. It is even said that Corey wants his first wife back again.

Maybelle's sister, Mrs. Pearl Gilman Alksley, is just getting into the divorce court. Her husband was the son of a wealthy theatrical man of California. Pearl says he has deserted her and she is now suing him for a divorce, and his parents for damages for an alleged alienation of his affections.

Corey obtained his divorce and married Miss Gilman, but life with the actress has not been one long, sweet song, according to report. Maybelle had ambitions to be a grande dame, but with a very vague idea of what that comprehended. She bought a chateau in France and

Cattle Raisers to Fight Meat Packers

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 26.—The great meat packers of the country have good cause to tremble in their boots. The power of the Texas Cattle Raisers Association succeeds with its plans there will be either a big drop in the price of meat products or a considerable rise in the price of cattle. It is no grandstand play which this association is preparing to start. Its members own approximately 6,000,000 head of cattle.

"When they voted the other day," said Missner, "it was principally on the subject of a strike in the event the railroad officials would not grant a conference. The result of the ballot was greatly in favor of the strike. But since the conference is assured the men begin to feel much less apprehension of a walk out."

Missner said that almost all of the CRISIS AT HAND IN UNION WORLD, SAYS J. W. KLINE

Discontent General Among Men on Big Railway Systems of Whole Country

Coming Conference With Kruttschnitt Expected to Avert Danger of Serious Disturbance

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—That a strike affecting more people than were involved in the recent English industrial warfare and, tying up the entire railroad system of the United States, would be the result of a walkout of shopmen employed on the Harriman lines, if it were ordered, was the prediction made in Chicago today by J. W. Kline, general president of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers.

The strike of the five federated crafts of the Harriman lines, Mr. Kline said, would prove only a forerunner to the greatest industrial calamity that this country has ever seen.

"There is a widespread discontent, a spirit of desperation, among workingmen on all railroads in this country," declared the union official. "The general managers and those who control the capital, while not reducing wages, are squeezing the work out of the men. It would not be surprising if, within a short time there would be a general upheaval on all roads in the country. The Burlington, Santa Fe, Harriman Lines, Pennsylvania, Louisville & Nashville and other roads; while hiring-union men are antagonistic to union labor and as a result there is discontent. The strike of shopmen, should it be called, would be followed by sympathetic strikes on roads all over the country and would result in an industrial calamity."

MEN DELIVERED ULTIMATUM.

Mr. Kline virtually was ordered to obtain a conference with Vice-President Kruttschnitt of the Union Pacific or issue a strike ultimatum. The demand came from blacksmiths employed on the Harriman lines along the coast.

"We have voted to strike; now it is up to you to maintain our union," declared one communication from the largest shop on the Harriman lines. While preparing to reply to the demand Mr. Kline received a telegram from Vice-President Kruttschnitt of the Union Pacific in which the latter asserted he would be in San Francisco up to September 2 and would meet with the officers of the federated crafts up to that time. Upon receipt of this communication Kline wired the various international presidents. The conference of the union officials scheduled for Kansas City Monday was then called off and the representatives of the unions will leave for San Francisco Monday. Mr. Kline intimated that he had no hope of effecting any settlement with the vice-president of the Union Pacific.

Lawson Accused of Promoting Lottery

Noted Financier Must Tell Judge How He Happened to Sell Tickets.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—Thomas Lawson, noted financier, author and sportsman, was again forced into the limelight today when he was served with a summons requesting him to appear on Monday before Judge Davis of the Plymouth court to answer to a charge of promoting a lottery.

The complaint is filed by J. Frank Chase of the Watch and Ward Society who alleges that the selling of tickets at the Marshfield Fair, in connection with the giving away of a horse and phaeton to the holder of the winning ticket, drawn from the duplicates of the admission tickets, constituted a lottery and is a violation of the criminal statutes of this state. The action against the financier caused a great sensation in society circles of the south shore.

Discussing the matter at a meeting of the board of directors of the Harriman system, Mr. Kruttschnitt said:

"For some time we have been hopeful that we would not be forced to do so, but business conditions became such that we were obliged to make retrenchments. This reduction was not directed altogether toward shopmen but applied to all departments. In the general offices there was a proportionately greater reduction than elsewhere."

CONFIDENT OF SETTLEMENT.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 26.—The union employees of the Southern Pacific shops who voted on the question of a strike several days ago expressed deep gratification today when informed that a conference had been arranged between Julius Kruttschnitt and the heads of the various unions. The mere fact that the Harriman firm foundation of his own wide education, before he entered Bethany College, and the Cincinnati law school, and ending it as president of Marshall College. There are even those who think American education lost an important force when Clark entered politics.

JERSEY MAN IS BUSY.

Both Clark and Wilson promise to provide an interesting battle for the nomination, with, perhaps, a shade more of energy apparent in the New Jersey than the Missouri man's tactics.

And should Dr. Wilson finally be named there may be novelties in his campaign.

Gradually the country is arousing to the fact that there is little academic calm about this famous educator.

He is doubtless a great educator, but he is a whirlwind. No cyclone quite so highly educated has ever risen, funnel shaped on our political horizon in the past century.

Now here's the question: What damage can a cyclone do to gold mules?

Another: Could a Jersey twister possibly scare Champ Clark's Missouri mules?

That trip down through the far Southwest impelled me to believe that they would not be stampeded by any Eastern wind.

An interesting detail of this situation is that both Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson are among those wise men who choose helpmates for their life companions. Mrs. Champ Clark is a very brilliant woman, versed in all political affairs, prominent in club work and quick witted. In Washington, last winter, she made divers forecasts of political events to me which have since proved to have been sensationaly accurate. It is possible that she may raise the women do not wear gauntlets, so we'll make it elbow kid—it is possible that she will raise the elbow kid which Mrs. Wilson is alleged to have thrown down, and be an active open worker for her husband's glory.

MRS. WILSON IN CAMPAIGN.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson may prove to be a factor of importance also in American political life. Her announcement that she and her daughter were to tour the institutions of the state had been accepted as a statement that she would enter actively in campaign work. Well, why not? English women have been active as zealous in campaigning as men possibly could be for many years.

Mrs. Wilson may be sure of one thing—she will find American crowds to listen to her if she speaks during the campaign, who will treat her with far more consideration and far less brutal rowdiness than English crowds show English women, some times.

It would be a new and interesting note to a Democratic presidential convention if both those beautiful women should appear there, fighting for their champions.

PROGRESSIVE CANDIDATE.

Another interesting development in the Democratic camp comes with the organization of the Democratic federation of precinct clubs. The avowed object of this organization, which was born in the Democratic conference room of the Senate at Washington, is the control of the convention and the nomination of a progressive candidate.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma is what an Irishman might call "chief parent" of the federation and is believed to be in favor of Governor Wilson's nomination.

Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, next in importance of the federation's organizers, has not so openly expressed his preference. He demands only that the candidate shall be progressive and that the convention platform shall be satisfactory to the progressive element in the party.

The one very definite surety in the matter seems to be that the organization will be very strongly anti-Harmon.

Thus the Ohio governor's strongest opposition early in the fight will come from the Ohio Germans—and Ohio is a German state. A strong anti-Harmon-German movement will begin, it is reported in Cincinnati, almost simultaneously with the explosion of the Harmon boom first really frank guns.

ARE FIGHTING TAFT.

To consider Republican elements, aside of Mr. Taft, seems to the minds of some absurd, but Bourne, La Follette, and Cummings are all very hard at work against him. During the winter in Washington there were predictions that Bourne might be extremely active in the autumn. His more recent announcement that he should not even make a campaign for re-election, but leave the matter to the unurged people, may or may not have utterly eliminated him as an active factor in the coming battle.

The two other strongest opponents of President Taft—La Follette and Cummings—are probably more vital.

La Follette, of course, is really active in his candidacy for the nomination although the story that he might bolt the party and try an independent ticket seems to have completely died away. Cummings, with his hundred or so constituents, is probably Taft's most serious peril. His constant warning of the farmers that the President has urged, through reciprocity, what he declares will harm them and has vetoed, in the tariff bills, what he believes would have assisted them, may have some serious effects, but the prophet who predicts upon that subject is a rash, rash prophet.

Apparently, no one knows exactly where Col. Roosevelt stands. His letter to his close friend, Alex P. Moore of the Pittsburgh Leader, finally dispenses of the faint hope among his admirers that he might, by any possible chance be a candidate himself. "I should esteem it a general calamity," he wrote to Mr. Moore, "if such a movement were undertaken."

And, of course, that settles that.

And Mr. Bryan: where is he? Has he left politics? I have not heard but the story was told when he returned from South America that he was considering the Christian ministry as a profession. Nothing whatever came of it. A more persistent rumor now connects his name with temperance work. It may not be more accurate. At any rate no recent tale has pointed to his probable re-entrance into politics in 1912, but, still, who knows?

HEARST WAGES FIGHT.

Wm. R. Hearst is in the field with customary promptness and characteristic energy. The attack he already has begun upon President Taft promises to be one of the most bitter of the many bitter fights he has conducted.

It is not sure that he's really again a candidate for nomination, but many think he is and wild speculations are not infrequent as to what plan he has in mind for capturing it. He has been Champ Clark's champion for months, however, and many believe he will stick to him and that only in the event of Clark's failure to get the nomination would he give the word to start a strong Hearst movement.

If Clark is nominated he will probably support him. If he is not one knows what may occur.

CONBOY DEFENSE CLOSES MONDAY

One of Slayer's Witnesses Contradicts the Testimony of Three Physicians.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—Michael J. Conboy's witnesses today gave their side of the shooting of Bernard Lagan by Conboy two years ago. Every effort was made by Attorneys Dunne and Ferrell for the defense to strengthen their plea of self-defense for the former police captain. R. H. Blumberg, who conducted a cigar stand near the scene of the shooting, declared he distinctly heard Conboy order Lagan to halt before he fired. He said he could not give a good account of the position of the two men because Lagan was between him and Conboy when the shots were fired.

Much the same story was told by J. H. Shaw, proprietor of the Hotel Congress, in front of which the shooting took place.

It was announced by the defense that they will close their case on Monday.

The case will be in the hands of a jury for the fourth time early Tuesday afternoon.

Sinclair to Make Fight for His Son

Without Hope of Reconciliation With Wife Author Plans to Go Abroad.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Having given up all hope of a reconciliation with his wife, Upton Sinclair is going abroad. The real fight in the divorce suit, it is said, will come for the possession of the son of the couple. Sinclair has an idea that he will get charge of the boy without a fight, but others say that the mother will make every effort to see that he does not obtain him.

HILLSBOROUGH HAS WHITE MOSQUITOES

HILLSBOROUGH, Aug. 26.—Such social peers as Joseph D. Grant, George A. Pope, Osgood Hooker, H. C. Breeden and Robert Hooker, all residents of Hillsborough and members of the Bellingham Club, are at odds over the discovery of a white mosquito, which claims much venom that he "saw it first."

It was Joseph Grant who brought the attention of the Hillsborough officials to the white mosquito.

PIONEER WOMEN MEET AT ANNUAL BREAKFAST

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The eleventh anniversary of the Association of California was celebrated by 150 members of that organization at an elaborate breakfast at the Hotel Argonaut today.

The association had as its guests the presidents of the various women's clubs, including Mrs. Lovell White of the California Club, Mrs. G. H. Fairchild of the New England Colony of Women, and Mrs. Jessing of the Corona club, and the past and present presidents and vice-presidents of the Society of California Pioneers.

Mrs. A. M. Gardner, president of the association, delivered the address of welcome and after an induction by Mrs. S. C. Gorham, past president, Mrs. Anna McIntyre, senior past-president, assumed the role of toastmistress. Toasts were responded to as follows:

"The Pioneers," Mrs. M. P. Pendleton, past-president; "Hospitality," Mrs. Anna Gonat Reed, past-president; "Pioneer Child," Mrs. E. M. North Whitcomb, past-president; "Our State," Mrs. Agnes McDonald, past-president; "Prosperity," Mrs. Louisa Berryman, past-president.

COLLEGE GIRLS TO HAVE BASEBALL NINE

BERKELEY, Aug. 26.—The University of California is to have a girls' baseball team. The movement is now under consideration, and steps have already been taken to organize the girls' nine. The young college girls have shown a decided interest in the game, and it bids fair to rank foremost in the feminine sports.

The California field, which has hitherto been monopolized by the men students with football and baseball, is soon to be the setting for games in which college women, as well as men, will participate.

The University of California is to be the first college in the United States to have a girls' baseball team.

The girls' baseball team is to be a live, enthusiastic and classy diamond aggregation. And the members of the team will wear bloomers—for skirts are decidedly out of place when two teams are struggling for the top rung in a pennant race.

OUT OF PRISON AFTER SERVING THREE YEARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Captain William H. Van Schack, who was in command of the General Slocum when that excursion boat burst into flames in East River on June 15, 1904, with the loss of 1,031 lives, today was paroled by the Federal authorities from Sing Sing and returned to his home shortly after noon.

The captain, who is in his seventieth year, was found guilty three years and seven months ago of neglect of duty and was sentenced to ten years at hard labor.

CAMERON SEEKS SEAT IN SENATE FROM ARIZONA

RALPH HENRY CAMERON, who aspires to be United States Senator from Arizona.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 26.—Ralph Henry Cameron, who is now a delegate in Congress from Arizona, aspires to be one of the Senators from this state. He is a Republican and has long been one of the most active politicians of this community.

Although born in Maine, Cameron has identified himself for eighteen years with Arizona business interests, and for more than two years has represented the territory in Congress.

2000 men employed in the Southern Pacific shops in this district were members of unions.

In spite of denials by local officials that no employees had been dismissed from the Southern Pacific yards in West Oakland when the machine shops closed Friday evening 2000 machinists had been let out and afterwards notices were posted inside the enclosure which consists of a high board fence, notifying employees that beginning Monday, the old schedule of 9 hours a day and six days a week would be in force.

During the last month more than 100 men from the various departments have been temporarily laid off and it is said that the shops are now on a basis where further reductions would seriously cripple their efficiency.

The building of the high board fence has irritated employees who live in the vicinity of the yards. It is taken as an indication that trouble is brewing and that the company is preparing for a long siege to enforce the laborers to desist from the stand they have taken in regard to reforms asked by the Federated Employees.

Last night men who had closed down boilermakers and machinists to the number of half a dozen were laid off and it is expected that Monday morning will see the force further thinned out. The manner in which the men are being let out is puzzling to the union for the reason that the demands have been made at a time when it was felt that men were most needed.

It was announced by the defense that they will close their case on Monday.

The case will be in the hands of a jury for the fourth time early Tuesday afternoon.

Uda Waldrop to Play at Mills College

MILLS COLLEGE, Aug. 26.—After an absence of two years Uda Waldrop will again appear at Mills College presiding over the annual summer session.

Waldrop was formerly instructor in organ music at Mills, leaving the position two years ago to study abroad.

"It's very pretty," said he, "but very annoying."

Now Pope, Breeden and the Hookers each claims that he was one that

Yet there is a variance between the white mosquito as described by Grant and by Pope. Grant insists that his insect has white wings only, but the latter declares that the entire insect is milky white.

City Trustee Henry T. Scott has requested Entomologist J. S. Hunter to investigate and make a lengthy report on the white mosquito.

A READING TAFT.

To consider Republican elements, aside of Mr. Taft, seems to the minds of some absurd, but Bourne, La Follette, and Cummings are all very hard at work against him. During the winter in Washington there were predictions that Bourne might be extremely active in the autumn. His more recent announcement that he should not even make a campaign for re-election, but leave the matter to the unurged people, may or may not have utterly eliminated him as an active factor in the coming battle.

The two other strongest opponents of President Taft—La Follette and Cummings—are probably more vital.

La Follette, of course, is really active in his candidacy for the nomination although the story that he might bolt the party and try an independent ticket seems to have completely died away.

Cummings, with his hundred or so constituents, is probably Taft's most serious peril.

His constant warning of the farmers that the President has urged, through reciprocity, what he declares will harm them and has vetoed, in the tariff bills, what he believes would have assisted them, may have some serious effects, but the prophet who predicts upon that subject is a rash, rash prophet.

Every available space is being used to house the dead bodies, churches and school houses being pressed into service as temporary morgues.

'LOVE IS A FAKE,' SAYS BRIDE OF 16

Married 21 Days, Wife of 19-Year-Old Husband Now Applies for Divorce.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—There isn't such a thing as love.

Mrs. Helen Stanley, a sixteen-year-old bride of twenty-one days, who has filed suit for divorce against her young husband, spoke these words to her former girl chums who gathered at her home, 1225 Grace street.

The girls, most of them 14 and 15 years old, pressed eagerly around their playmate to learn from her the terrible experience of matrimony.

"Are you really going to get divorced?" one of the children asked in awe.

Mrs. Stanley nodded her head slowly, the weight of her late adventures adding dignity to her reply.

I am going to get a divorce because there is no such thing as love," she replied. Her youthful audience gasped.

"No love?" they asked, their eyes opened wide in surprise.

"No love!" the bride repeated calmly and with emphasis.

BATTERY B, NATIONAL GUARD, FORMALLY OPENS ITS NEW ARMORY

BRILLIANT GATHERING SEES CHRISTENING OF FIELDPIECES

Elaborate Program, Including Addresses, Is Feature of the Evening

Battery B, National Guard of California, made its first public appearance last night when it held "open house" at the new armory on Franklin street, near Seventeenth, at which time a large number of guests were present. Entertainment in the form of addresses, boxing and music by the famous Fifth Infantry Band, together with elaborate refreshments, occupied the evening. The hall was gaily decorated with flags and bunting and strings of red lights festooned the whole interior, which reflected a military camp by the presence of tents and the two field pieces that go with the equipment of the battery.

GUNS CHRISTENED.

Both pieces were christened last night, the ceremonies being a feature of the evening. One was named "General Forbes" and the other "Colonel Gier." Miss Loraine Faneuf, 6-year-old daughter of Captain R. J. Faneuf of the battery, dashed the champagne bottle upon the muzzles, pronouncing the names of Captain George V. Petersen, formerly captain of Company A, National Guard, with appropriate remarks led up to the dedication of "General Forbes." He expressed his hope that the piece would never be used in actual warfare but that if it were used, it would perform an honorable duty and that the young men present would respect the positions they occupy.

"This organization represents the power of the law," he said. "It means the glory of the country and the integrity of the nation, and it stands for all that is best of manhood and patriotism. I trust that this piece of artillery will never serve for any unmanly purpose but ever to uphold the right and the dignity of our beloved United States."

OTHER ADDRESSES.

Superior Judge F. B. Ogden made the preliminary speech in the dedication of "Colonel Gier," touching upon the same ideas that had been set forth by Captain Petersen.

The officers in whose honor the guns were named made brief replies, referring to matters affecting the National Guard and its chief purpose. General Forbes, who is Adjutant General of the state troops, pointed out that the National Guard was the chief military asset of the nation on land and that it should be developed along the lines followed by the United States would practically have a standing army that would be a formidable force in the event of war.

Private J. S. Riley of Battery B recited two war poems by Kipling, "Gunga Din" and "The Young British Soldier," both of which won hearty applause. During the intermission the band played numerous military airs. Boxing and wrestling were also numbers on the program which was under the direction of Captain Herman.

OFFICERS AS GUESTS.

Among the visiting officers present were Captain D. Curran, U. S. A., officer of instruction for the National Guard; Captain Casey of the Coast Artillery; Lieutenant Mathewson, Coast Artillery; Lieutenant Colonel Hunt of the Fifth Infantry; Colonel D. A. Smith of the Fifth, acting as brigade commander; Colonel F. F. Canon, Assistant Adjutant General; Adjutant Fred W. Petersen of the Fifth, commanding the band; Captain F. Sullivan of Company A, Signal Corps, besides many others.

The officers of the battery are as follows: Captain R. J. Faneuf, First Lieutenant C. H. Gandy and H. Huber, Second Lieutenants A. Wickey and O. Kent, the latter not yet qualified.

SECOND IN COMMISSION.

Battery B is the second to be commissioned in this State. Battery A is located in Los Angeles. The battery has been installed in an elaborate response to the Government of $100,000. Through the efforts of a number of Oakland citizens and the Chamber of Commerce, the armory on Franklin street was secured pending the building of a new armory by the state.

WHIST PARTY AND PICNIC PLANNED

MUST USE NEW TRIGGER FINGER

Mrs. Hugh Hogan Arranges Monster Turney in St. Anthony's Hall.

Mr. Hugh Hogan Sr. will give a delightful card party Monday evening, August 28. Whist will be the order of the evening. The affair is one of large proportions and is expected to fill St. Anthony's hall, Sixteenth avenue and East Sixteenth street, where it is to be held. This turnout is being given in conjunction with St. Anthony's parish annual picnic, which takes place every year on Admission day, September 8. This season's outing will hold forth in the now abandoned Emeryville race track and promises to be a gala day for those attending.

Miss Mrs. Hogan as hostess, assisted by Miss Loretta Knapp, Miss Nelle Peters, Miss Teheran Schmitt and a coterie of other young ladies of East Oakland, the whist party is attracting considerable attention.

Many elegant prizes will be offered. At the conclusion of the playing the remainder of the evening will be devoted to an impromptu dancing party.

OCEAN LINERS EAT UP TONS OF COAL ON TRIP

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Nowhere in the world is coal consumed so rapidly as on the great modern ocean liners. Fully 1000 tons of coal are consumed every 24 hours during the run of the Mauretania, for instance. Aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm Second the daily consumption is 740 tons, while on the Adriatic it is more than 600 tons a day. The Kaiserin Auguste Victoria of the Hamburg-American Line burns only 250 tons and the America of the same line, 265 tons. The carrying capacity of the two latter ships is fully as great as any of the others, the difference being due to the type of engines used.

TWICE A DAY TAKES PIGS OUT FOR WALK

MONDORF-LES-BAINS, Luxembourg, Aug. 26.—One of the strangest of the municipal officers in the realm of the pretensions of Governmental functionaries is that of the officer who takes the pigs for a walk twice a day.

He is no vulgar swineherd, but a municipal officer, receives a salary from the city, and is obliged to live in the town every year which he calls his uniform, and is entitled to a share of every pig he takes for a walk. His duties consist in passing the village streets at daylight and sounding his bell. But though every pig in his sty, recognizing that he begins squealing like mad, and housewives can hardly run fast enough to let them out.

The members of the party had lunch on the ten-foot ledge after the completion of the climb. Mrs. Cardwell Davis was chaperone of the party, but she did not venture into the lower depths of the cave.

MAN AND WIFE USE SAME SET FALSE TEETH

ELGINWOOD, Ind., Aug. 25.—It is soon virtuals now for Mary Myrly and John Myrly, her aged husband, neither being able to eat solid food since their own set of false teeth, which they used in common, was broken in a fight between the two. Called before the mayor for an account of her helpmate, Mrs. Myrly said that her husband was using the teeth when it came her time to eat supper and refused to give them up to her. She said she then hit him over the head with a rolling pin and knocked the much-used molars from the old man's mouth, breaking the plate.

BAT-INFESTED CAVE EXPLORED BY GIRLS

St. Louis Maids Don Bathing Suits and Slide Down 60 Feet of Rope.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—The distinction of being the first girls to brave the bats of Brainerd's cave, near Grafton, belongs to Misses Anice Davis, Geneva Remick and Nellie Caughan, who are spending the summer at Plaza Chautauqua. Clad in bathing suits, they slid down 60 feet of rope to satisfy their curiosity and win 12 pounds of candy, which had been wagered to test their knowledge of the value of money.

Accompanied by Edward Remieg of St. Louis and Ralph Caughan and Leon Tilton of East St. Louis and J. E. Hobson of Alton, the girls left the resort at 9 a. m. and made the six-mile trip to the cave in a launch. The outfit consisted of two ropes, 75 feet long, and lanterns.

From a ten-foot ledge at the entrance to the cave is a 60-foot descent, which is so steep that a rope is needed. After the rope was fastened Miss Davis, in her anxiety to be the first to reach the bottom, started the descent too rapidly, lost her foothold against the rocky side of the cave and dropped 20 feet before she regained her footing. Her hands were lacerated by the rope.

Miss Caughan explored on her hands and knees a passage that had not been entered before. An old army canteen was found by the party. The girls were two hours in making the ascent of the precipitous side of the cave, with the aid of the ropes and the help of the young men.

The members of the party had lunch on the ten-foot ledge after the completion of the climb. Mrs. Cardwell Davis was chaperone of the party, but she did not venture into the lower depths of the cave.

10 BILLIONS YEAR GOES IN SHOPPING

Nine-Tenths of It Spent by Women Who Know Nothing of Values.

The household economics department of the University of Wisconsin has issued a bulletin which will create universal astonishment, and nowhere more than in the dry goods stores. The bulletin recites that $10,000,000,000 a year is spent in general shopping, ninetenths of it by women, and the greater part of these know nothing of the value of money.

The University of California has long been famous for its enterprise in meeting the practical needs of the people. It will teach Greek to persons who wish to know Greek, but it will also teach butter making to the far greater number of persons who wish to know how to make gilt-edged butter. Hence its department of household economics, which more nearly concerns the community than astronomy, geology and the higher mathematics. If this department will devote itself to teaching dressmaking, millinery and cooking it will add greatly to the happiness of the state of Wisconsin and the state of matrimony.

These are things which most women have to know, but nature does not endow them with skill in these arts, and they must learn them.

But when it comes to shopping and the value of money, the department of household economics in Madison is intruding into the realm of nature. Women are born shoppers. The vast difference between $8 and $2.98 is part of their inheritance; they need no benevolent university to teach it to them. Women have been hunting bargains ever since fig leaves went out of style and costumes had to be bought instead of picked off the trees. Do not the dry goods dealers know that women are by nature efficient shoppers, and do not their published announcements appeal especially to the instinct of woman for getting the best that there is at the lowest possible price?

Can the University of Wisconsin teach bargain hunting? Do the women of Senator La Follette's state need any instruction in the gentle art of shopping?

No man can get anything like as much for $1.98 as his wife can. If the university would only undertake to teach men how to spend money judiciously it would be something well worth while.

UNCLE SAM ASKED TO AID IN DEVELOPING VAST DELTA LANDS OF SACRAMENTO RIVER BY ASSOCIATION OF OWNERS

Enthusiasm Marks Conference of Promoters, Who Organize for Protection and Will Request Government to Take Hand in Project of Making Property Rich Farming District

Owners of delta lands along the Sacramento river, whose holdings aggregate in the neighborhood of 25,000 acres, met in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, Thirteenth and Harrison streets, yesterday afternoon for the purpose of forming an organization among themselves for their mutual protection and benefit. The meeting followed a preliminary one held at Stockton August 9, when a circular letter was sent out to landholders in the district in question asking them to be present at the meeting in Oakland for the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, and the election of a board of directors.

The meeting of yesterday was called to order by Colonel John P. Irish, acting as temporary chairman and as one of the promoters of the movement, and the following owners and representatives of owners of land in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys reported present: F. A. Fletcher, T. J. Leyden, Judge E. A. Bridgeford, C. C. Cook, O. Y. Woodward, A. J. Gliddings and P. W. Treat.

The chairman stated the purpose of the gathering as a desire for co-operation among the landowners, and declared that the movement was one which would bring great benefits to all its participants, who would secure action by the federal government for the improvement of the land, which would be impossible to get by individuals working alone.

FIRST THING TO DO.

The speaker then elaborated upon the objects of the association as proposed, declaring that one of the first things for which members of such a body might work as a body would be the establishment by the government of an experimental station under the auspices of the Agricultural Department, which would furnish data to the farmers in the district upon the character of the soil and similar matters to enable them to get the greatest returns from their holdings.

Colonel Irish declared that there was more money invested in the delta lands of the Sacramento than in the far-famed Imperial Valley district of Southern California, where the government had established a station which has proved of great benefit to the agricultural industry. The association last year, he asserted, had a cotton crop valued at $1,000,000, and the growing of cotton there was due solely to the advice of the government experts at the station. The speaker declared his belief that the government could be induced to take action on the placing of such a station in the delta district through the influence which could be brought to bear by an association, where little attention would be paid to the request if emanating from an individual or individuals.

The association would also be useful in acting as a protective body to its individual members in their relations to tenants who might have proved unreliable, and could also serve as a protection to the trustworthy tenants in their relations with commission men and the producers. Similar mutual benefits could be gained in the matter of securing some benefits from the road taxes which the landowners now bear in large part, and from which they gain almost no benefit, and in many other important ways.

CONSTITUTION ADOPTED.

A constitution and by-laws for such an organization as proposed was then submitted to the meeting for approval, and after some discussion the following instruments were adopted and ten names appended as the first members of the association:

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

ARTICLE I. The name of this association shall be the "Delta Association" of California.

ARTICLE II.

Purposes and Objects. Section 1. The purposes of the association are: to counsel together and cooperate in all matters of common interest, such as the acreage of crops, the method of protection, the lands from floods, building and maintaining levees; draining, irrigating, planting, cultivating and fertilizing the land; destroying crop pests; curing plant diseases; procuring and railroads; and by land and water delivery would sustain and other commercial uses. Also: to protect each other from bad tenants and irresponsible dealers; to make experiments to determine the best crops adapted to the soil; to maintain telephone and telegraph communication; to represent the association from all important points; to co-operate in the grading of products, the marketing and transportation of crops and the procuring of pure seed; to promote the introduction of improved machinery, implements, live stock, seeds and plants, and in the purchase of such articles and other supplies; to foster allied industries, such as canneries, factories, etc., and generally to work together for mutual benefit.

ARTICLE III.

Place of Business. Section 1. The principal office and place of business of the association shall be in Oakland.

ARTICLE IV.

Management and Control. Section 1. The business and affairs of the association shall be under the direction, management and control of a Board of Directors, consisting of nine members to be elected at the first meeting of the association and thereafter to be elected annually by the members of the association and to hold office for the term of three years from the date of their election and until their successors shall have been elected and shall have accepted office.

Section 2. Notwithstanding the foregoing clause, the president shall call a special election to elect directors at any time upon a written request from at least twenty-five (25) members of the association.

Written notice must be mailed by the association to each member at least two weeks before the proposed meeting, and the notice of the proposed meeting shall also be advertised for at least one week prior to the proposed meeting, in one paper in each of the following places—San Francisco, Sacramento, Stockton and Oakland.

Section 3. Five directors shall constitute a quorum.

ARTICLE V.

Membership. Section 1. Any owner of reclaimed swamp lands in California, whether an individual, partnership, corporation or a reclamation district, may become a member of this association, who shall subscribe to the constitution and by-laws of the association.

Section 2. Any agent, manager or representative of a partnership, corporation or reclamation district may become a member for the purpose of representing his principal, provided the principal is a member of this association.

ARTICLE VI.

Elections. Section 1. Elections shall be held in accordance with the by-laws, and at every election each member shall be entitled to vote or proxy, to cast one vote for every acre owned or represented by the member.

ARTICLE VII.

Indebtedness. Section 1. No indebtedness shall be incurred at any time by the association or the Board of Trustees, to exceed the amount of funds then in their actual possession.

BY-LAWS.

ARTICLE I.

Meetings of Members. Sec. 1. A regular meeting of the members of the association shall be held annually at OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, on the Saturday of August of each year. Notice of such meeting shall be given by publication in one leading paper in San Francisco, Sacramento, Oakland and Stockton, and by notice mailed to each member, at least ten days before such meeting.

Peter Cook, John P. Irish, W. D. Meek, E. L. Wilholt, George A. Atherton, C. C. Cook, E. A. Bridgeford, A. T. J. Reynolds, W. D. Buckley, J. C. Franks, Isidor Schad, L. D. Green, R. J. Coggeshall, O. Y. Woodward and James McNab. This list of directors contained some names of landholders not yet members of the association, but it was the opinion of those present at the meeting that these men would all be enrolled on the list, some already having expressed their intention of joining but were not able to be present. While only 25,000 acres of the delta lands were represented in the meeting of yesterday, it was asserted by the chairman that he believed at least 200,000 acres of the land in question would ultimately be represented in the association, which would mean the owners of the greater part of such lands in the river district.

Sec. 3. At all such meetings twenty-five shall be present in person or by proxy to constitute a quorum, and a majority of the members constituting such quorum shall have full power to act.

Sec. 4. Meetings shall be held at all meetings either in person or by proxy appointed by an instrument subscribed by the member or his duly authorized agent. Before any such proxy is voted upon, it shall be filed with the secretary.

ARTICLE II.

Qualification of Directors. Sec. 1. Every member of the association is eligible to the office of director.

ARTICLE III.

Officers. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors shall have exclusive management and control of the affairs and business of the association.

Sec. 2. They shall keep an office in the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, state of California, and the books, papers, records and other documents pertaining to the affairs of the association shall be kept, stored and kept open to the inspection of every member.

Sec. 3. The Board of Directors at the first meeting shall elect one of its members president, another vice-president and another treasurer of the association.

Sec. 4. The president, vice-president and treasurer shall be elected annually by the Board of Directors and shall hold office until their successors shall be elected and shall have accepted office.

ARTICLE IV.

Compensation of Officers. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors and its officers, except the secretary, shall serve without compensation.

The secretary shall be paid such compensation as the Board of Directors may from time to time fix and direct.

ARTICLE V.

Term of Office. Sec. 1. Whenever a director has failed to attend three (3) consecutive meetings of the board of his office may be declared incompetent to hold office at their discretion, and his office may be so declared by the president or by a majority vote to choose or appoint a successor or successors to such office or offices for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE VI.

Vacancies. Sec. 1. If the office of one or more directors or other officers of the company shall become vacant by reason of death, resignation, disqualification or otherwise, a remaining director may, by a majority vote choose or appoint a successor or successors to such office or offices for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE VII.

Committees. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors may appoint such committees or committees from their members or from the members of the association as they may deem proper; and may prescribe the duties thereof.

ARTICLE VIII.

Funds. Sec. 1. All funds of the association shall be deposited in a commercial bank or banks in the name of the association and shall be withdrawn by check signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the treasurer or secretary.

ARTICLE IX.

Dues. Sec. 1. The dues of members of this association shall be ONE CENT PER ACRE for every acre owned or represented, and shall be payable annually in advance and shall be considered in arrears if not paid within six months from the date of payment.

Sec. 2. Any member more than one year in arrears may be suspended or deprived of membership at the pleasure of the directors.

ARTICLE X.

Annual Reports. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors shall present at each annual meeting a written report which shall contain a full account of all the business affairs and transactions of the association for the preceding year.

DIRECTORS APPOINTED.

Following the adoption of the constitution and by-laws a nominating committee, consisting of C. C. Cook, Judge E. A. Bridgeford and A. T. J. Reynolds, was appointed by the chair to prepare a list of names for directors. That committee brought in its list and after some discussion and addition of names by the chairman and members of the body present the temporary secretary of the meeting, C. C. Cook, was instructed to cast a ballot for the following fifteen directors of the association:

Peter Cook, John P. Irish, W. D. Meek,

E. L. Wilholt, George A. Atherton, C. C. Cook, E. A. Bridgeford, A. T. J. Reynolds, W. D. Buckley, J. C. Franks, Isidor Schad, L. D. Green, R. J. Coggeshall, O. Y. Woodward and James McNab.

This list of directors contained some names of landholders not yet members of the association, but it was the opinion of those present at the meeting that these men would all be enrolled on the list, some already having expressed their intention of joining but were not able to be present.

While only 25,000 acres of the delta lands were represented in the meeting of yesterday, it was asserted by the chairman that he believed at least 200,000 acres of the land in question would ultimately be represented in the association, which would mean the owners of the greater part of such lands in the river district.

Sec. 3. At all such meetings twenty-five shall be present in person or by proxy to constitute a quorum, and a majority of the members constituting such quorum shall have full power to act.

Sec. 4. Meetings shall be held at all meetings either in person or by proxy appointed by an instrument subscribed by the member or his duly authorized agent. Before any such proxy is voted upon, it shall be filed with the secretary.

ARTICLE XI.

MEETING SUCCESSFUL.

As but four of the newly-elected directors were present at the meeting, and five were required to constitute a quorum, no meeting of the directors for the election of president and lesser officers could be held at the time. It was then determined to hold the meeting for this election a date within the next month, in Oakland, and that Col. Irish and C. C. Cook should act as temporary president and secretary, respectively, of the association, until the calling of that meeting.

Sec. 2. Special meetings shall be called at any time at the request of a majority of the Board of Trustees upon the written request of twenty-five (25) members of the association. Written notice of such meeting must be given by the secretary mailing it same to the last known address of each member. Such meetings may be held at such place or places as the Board of Trustees may direct.

Sec. 3. At all such meetings twenty-five shall be present in person or by proxy to constitute a quorum, and a majority of the members constituting such quorum shall have full power to act.

Sec. 4. Meetings shall be held at all meetings either in person or by proxy appointed by an instrument subscribed by the member or his duly authorized agent. Before any such proxy is voted upon, it shall be filed with the secretary.

ARTICLE XII.

Meetings of Directors. Sec. 1. Every member of the association is eligible to the office of director.

ARTICLE XIII.

Officers. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors and its officers, except the secretary, shall serve without compensation.

ARTICLE XIV.

Compensation of Officers. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors shall have exclusive management and control of the affairs and business of the association.

ARTICLE XV.

Term of Office. Sec. 1. Whenever a director has failed to attend three (3) consecutive meetings of the board of his office may be declared incompetent to hold office at their discretion, and his office may be so declared by the president or by a majority vote to choose or appoint a successor or successors to such office or offices for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE XVI.

Vacancies. Sec. 1. If the office of one or more directors or other officers of the company shall become vacant by reason of death, resignation, disqualification or otherwise, a remaining director may, by a majority vote choose or appoint a successor or successors to such office or offices for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE XVII.

Committees. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors may appoint such committees or committees from their members or from the members of the association as they may deem proper; and may prescribe the duties thereof.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Funds. Sec. 1. All funds of the association shall be deposited in a commercial bank or banks in the name of the association and shall be withdrawn by check signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the treasurer or secretary.

ARTICLE XIX.

Dues. Sec. 1. The dues of members of this association shall be ONE CENT PER ACRE for every acre owned or represented, and shall be payable annually in advance and shall be considered in arrears if not paid within six months from the date of payment.

Sec. 2. Any member more than one year in arrears may be suspended or deprived of membership at the pleasure of the directors.

ARTICLE XX.

Annual Reports. Sec. 1. The Board of Directors shall present at each annual meeting a written report which shall contain a full account of all the business affairs and transactions of the association for the preceding year.

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that we are in agreement with the foregoing articles of association and by-laws of the Delta Association and hereby agree to abide and be bound by all the provisions thereof, in consideration of being admitted to membership in said association.

CONSUMPTION OF LIQUOR INCREASES

Eight Million Gallons More of Whisky Used in 1911 Than in 1910.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 26.—In the last 12 months the consumption of liquors broke all records, and the people of the United States consumed over eight million gallons more of whisky and over 112 million gallons more of beer in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, than they did in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, is the announcement of the National Model License League, which has just received the official figures from R. E. Cabell, U. S. commissioner of internal revenue.

The total consumption of distilled spirits for the year just closed was 134,600,193 gallons, as compared with a consumption of 126,834,726 gallons in the previous year.

BEER CONSUMPTION.

The total consumption of beer for the fiscal year of 1911 was 63,216,851 barrels or 1,959,722,381 gallons as compared with 59,544,775 barrels or 1,845,888,025 gallons for 1910.

The combined increase is 121,049,823 gallons which represents an increase of 1.3 gallons per capita, using census figures. The total per capita consumption is now 22.29 gallons.

The previous consumption of distilled spirits was for the year 1907. The slump that followed that year continued until 1909 and then took an upward turn to the present apex.

TEXAS RAIN LEGEND IS KNOCKED GALLEY WEST

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 26.—Years ago there was a saying that rain never falls at night in Southwest Texas in the month of July. This year, that old legend was knocked galley-west by several drenching downpours at night in July, and these have been followed by falls in almost every section during the present month. Old cattlemen however claim that conditions have changed and that more and more rain has been falling during each summer here for a number of years.

OUTLOOK IS VERY PROMISING

The neighborhood of Rock Ridge has presented a scene of wonderful activity for the past few weeks. The completion of Broadway, 100 feet wide, directly by the entrance of Rock Ridge to Lawton, is almost accomplished. The rock is on the street for rolling, and as soon as the 6-inch pipes, which are now on the ground, are laid, the rolling of Broadway will be begun.

The gas mains have been extended along Ocean View into Rock Ridge Place and Rock Ridge Park. Telephone wires are now being strung and the electric light service being brought to the property. The water system is completed.

Sales continue strong. During the last week Mr. Albert K. Harford of Alameda purchased a beautiful 80-foot lot on Ocean View Drive for his home site. C. L. Lewis, also of Alameda, purchased a lot on Rock Ridge, and is now building a house on it.

The committee reports the patronage of many leading citizens has been secured, and that the management of the St. Francis Hotel has granted the use of its halls on two evenings during the October festival. Several speakers will outline the plans for the festival at the meeting Monday evening.

Newport Says Engagement But Miss Sears Says 'No'

HAROLD VANDERBILT and ELEANOR SEARS. Rumor is persistent to the effect that Miss Sears is the fiancee of the young man.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Notwithstanding the denials of the principals and their families, rumor persists that Eleanor Sears is to marry Harold Vanderbilt. They are equally interested in sports and they may be just "good comrades," as the French say, but Newport will not have it so. Newport insists that the entertainment of Miss Sears by young Vanderbilt's mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, is preliminary to the announcement of an engagement.

This picture of Miss Sears and Vanderbilt was made during an automobile race not long ago.

CONVENT ALUMNAE WILL HOLD FESTIVAL

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—Preliminary preparations for the big fall festival of the Presentation Sisters alumnae will be concluded on Monday evening in an important meeting of the committee in charge at Presentation Convent, Eddy and Franklin streets.

"FAITH IN MANKIND." SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The quarterly meeting of the Chevra Hachnosoth Orechim ("The Shelter") will be held at the B'nai Brith hall, 149 Eddy street, tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Attorney George M. Lipman will address the meeting, his subject being "Faith in Mankind."

SLIDES RAPIDS IN 14-FOOT CATBOAT

Arnold Owen Demonstrates Spokane River Navigable Despite Tight Places.

SPOKANE, Aug. 26.—Arnold Owen, a resident of Wallace, Idaho, who is making a trip from the heart of the Coeur d'Alene mining district to the Pacific ocean in a 14-foot catboat, has accomplished what no other man has ever attempted in successfully navigating the Spokane river, shooting more than 150 rapids in the stream, which has a fall of 1280 feet in 12 miles.

Owen seeks to prove that the Coeur d'Alene and Spokane rivers are navigable, notwithstanding the opinion of the war department to the contrary. He covered 200 miles between Wallace and Spokane in 10 days and expects to arrive at the mouth of the Columbia river August 30. Though he has been in a number of tight places, Owen has not hit a mishap so far. The small craft, however, shows the marks of many battles.

The boat carries 65 square feet of sail, has an iron center board and rudder and is fitted with stout oars. Owen served under General Roberts at the relief of Ladysmith and campaigned during the entire war in South Africa and has sailed in almost every port in the world.

BIBLE 221 YEARS OLD DISCOVERED

Texas Resident Has Volume That Was Printed With Old Wooden Type.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 26.—Among the interesting relics at the Hunt county fair this year was a bible 221 years old. The book belongs to Dr. M. Beskow, who was handed down to him from his great grandfather, who was an old sea captain.

The book is large, and is called the Martin Luther bible. It is printed in German from the old wooden type that was in use two or more centuries ago.

The book is complete just as it came from the printer more than two hundred years ago with the exception of the binding. This having been worn out by long usage, Dr. Beskow had it rebound. The volume is embellished with a number of pictures characteristic of the time when it was printed.

CATTLEMEN WILL PROBE HIGH PRICE OF MEAT

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 26.—The meeting of the cattle growers of Texas and representatives of various cities and other organizations at Fort Worth, September 12 and 13, for the purpose of investigating the high cost of meat and the great discrepancy that now exists between the price paid for live stock on foot and the meat on the block, is attracting nation-wide attention. That there will be something unusual doing at this meeting is indicated by the interest manifested.

CANADA ELECTION IS IN FULL BLAST

Heated and Bitter Campaign Over Reciprocity Being Conducted by Leaders.

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—The Canadian election, precipitated by the American reciprocity treaty, is in full blast and is one of the most heated and most bitter campaigns ever held in Canada. From the first, the campaign conservatives have largely avoided the discussion of the reciprocity agreement and its terms. Their opposition has been stated to be almost wholly upon nationalistic grounds. That position is maintained up to the present moment and it is being held persistently by even the conservative leaders. It must be seen whether it will effect against the direct appeal and the prosperity of the people embodied in the reciprocity agreement as it is interpreted by the Liberals. Most Canadians resent any imputation against their loyalty and Liberals believe the loyalty cry will react on the conservatives, particularly as the only preference given to Great Britain by Canada in fiscal matters was given by the present Liberal government.

ONTARIO CAMPAIGN.

For the last ten days Mr. Borden has been campaigning in Ontario where he hopes for success. The province is overwhelmingly British in race and sentiment, and here the appeals along his well planned line are expected to make most impression. Laurier has never yet had a majority in Ontario, though he would dearly love one. Ontario lies so closely along the American border, and the farmers of this province are so energetic that they are supposed to strongly desire the American market. Hence, the herculean appeals of both leaders, one to the farmer's pocket and the other to his sentiment.

EAGLE CONCLAVE COMES TO CLOSE

Del Carey Smith Delivers Farewell Toast at Banquet in St. Francis.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The thirteenth annual convocation of the Fraternal Order Eagles came to a close yesterday. Dr. Carey Smith delivered the farewell toast at the banquet given tonight in the St. Francis hotel, and the session of the Lodge ended in an end.

Wardens were presented postmortem tonight. Toasts were responded to by Mayor McCarthy, W. J. Brennan, J. W. Comiskey, Earl Browne, Frank Herling.

The business of the convention was officially ended yesterday afternoon, all that remained this morning being to formally declare the convention adjourned sine die.

Then the delegates hastened to the depot to catch the train for Half Moon Bay, where a gorgeous barbecue was held under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

Yesterday, after a six hours' fight on the floor of the convention, the insurgent forces compelled the adoption of state autonomy. The rebels were supported by a majority of the members of the order.

ATWOOD IN ROLE OF MESSENGER FOR CUPID

Carries Love Letters on His Aeroplane to Many Belles of Boston.

DISCUSSES INCIDENT OF LONG AIR VOYAGE

Flying Not for Women Until Machines Are Radically Changed.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—When Harry N. Atwood, the young aviator who completed the trip from St. Louis to New York, reached Boston this afternoon the long-distance flying record was not the only record he had broken.

He was the first aerial Cupid, for he brought with him a pocket full of letters addressed to young women in and about Boston, which had been entrusted to him by young men along the line of his flight and which he eventually put in the postoffice immediately upon his arrival in the city. Atwood spoke rather amusedly of his new occupation as a successful mail man.

BY HARRY ATWOOD.

"Yes, I expect I am the first man in America to carry love letters through the sky. I assumed the package of letters I picked up for Boston girls between St. Louis and New York were love letters from the appearance of the young men who entrusted them to me. Of course I mailed them intact. I do not know whether to be prouder of the fact that I beat the world's record for long-distance flight or that I had the honor to be the first American mail man."

"I can say little new of the trip. The story has been pretty well told in the papers. I think one effect of my flight will be to direct the development of work in the air along more practical lines and will make the aeroplane of greater value to humans. Virtually all the deaths among flyers have been due to the attempt to do fancy stunts in the air. There are attractions perhaps but they do comparatively little to advance the science of aeronautics and to make of the aeroplane a useful adjunct to civilization."

AEROPLANE NOT FOR WOMEN.

"I see no reason why in the course of a very short time the aeroplane should not be as safe as the automobile. There are some dangerous defects in the machine yet, but they are constantly being remedied. I notice that licenses have recently been issued to women to run flying machines. I think this is a mistake. Some time, perhaps in the near future, it may be possible for women to handle the machines without too great strain and risk, but that time is not here yet."

"The serious strain of handling a machine in the air is too much for any woman and the risk too great."

The slightest defect in the machine's failure to meet almost instantaneous shifts in air currents or the many other things which are constantly occurring might precipitate most serious results at any time. The tension is constant.

TENSION IS GREAT.

"The driver of an express locomotive or a racing automobile is under the same kind of tension with this difference: If an accident occurs to the engine or automobile driver there is still some chance for his life. With the man flying hundreds of feet above the earth the cost of accident is inevitable death. No, the aeroplane is no place for women yet. I see by the papers that Paul Beck of Washington is to take his wife on an aerial honeymoon. I fear he is taking greater chances than I would care to. On my trip I was repeatedly urged to take a woman in my machine, but invariably refused."

"Speaking of the future of the aeroplane I am convinced it will not be long before long flights across the country will be perfectly safe."

MESSE SOLENELLE IN D WILL BE RENDERED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—Sunday, September 3, at 11 a. m., being the Patronal Day, there will be a service of unusual musical interest at the Church of the Advent, Rev. C. N. Lathrop, rector, Fleet street, near Gough. The noted Messe Solenelle in D of Ambroise Thomas will be given by the choir of the church, augmented for the occasion. This is the greatest religious work of the noted French composer, and as far as can be ascertained, this rendition will be the first in this vicinity. The mass has been translated and adapted for the Anglican service by John de P. Teller, musical director and organist of the Church of the Advent. The composer's original orchestration will be used, the following instruments being represented: Flute, oboe, clarinets, bassoon, horns, trumpets, tympani, strings and organ. The mass was composed in 1852 and had its initial rendering in Paris the same year. The soloists will be Mrs. Carrie Brown Dexter, soprano; Miss Adeline Birchler, contralto; William E. Hague, tenor, and C. W. Castell, bass.

SANTA MONICA BEANS SOON READY FOR MART

VENTURA, Aug. 26.—Former Ventura county bean growers now engaged in the same business in the Santa Monica section have already commenced harvesting this year's crop. Several machines began cutting Monday morning. The acreage has been reduced by perhaps 25 per cent. In the vicinity of Beverly there is the Willoughby ranch with 1700 acres devoted to limas this season, and the cutters will begin there Monday. Barnard Bros., south of Sawtelle, have 1000 and will be cutting Monday. The Chapman's have more than 500 acres. There are numerous other ranches from 300 acres up ripening satisfactorily.

New One-Piece Dresses for Autumn Typical Capwell Values

The other day there came a flock of new One-Piece Dresses made of serge, in navy and black.

These frocks strike the note of the new season, possessing as they do, simple lines and charming individuality. Many of them are moderately priced.

They are becomingly fashioned with their short empire or straight waist lines, the closer fitting and longer kimono sleeves and the ease with which they may be donned makes them doubly attractive.

The trimming is very Frenchy in its style, on the simpler garments being piping of contrasting silk, and on the more elaborate braid, buttons and fringe so cleverly applied as to arouse your admiration. Prices range from—

Dressy and Distinctive Autumn Millinery at a Popular Price

$8.75

Our millinery chief has returned from New York bringing with her the advance guard in Dress Hats—distinctive alluring styles measuring up to the Capwell standard of individuality.

In the new showing are the pressed velvet hand-made shapes and with the fashion-worsted worsted trimmings; jaunty shapes with wing trimmings now seen on the hats of all Paris returned travelers; some trimmed high, others with a banded effect so that the wings entirely envelop the crown.

Never was there a more delightful variety in Fall Millinery. The new models show with what discrimination our buyer has chosen from the most recent productions from foreign and American style centers. Particularly fetching are the small close-fitting styles trimmed with "stick-ups" placed with the richness of Paris. Most suitable to be included in the trousseau of autumn brides.

A Choice at a Low Price

To give these smart styles a favorable introduction prior to our fall opening a group of the newest and jauntiest shapes have been marked at one low price, this despite the fact we know they are selling for a third more in New York.

HOW TOM P. WOODWARD MADE FORTUNE IN THE LOST HILLS

AN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The booster pilgrims who went to Astoria brought back with them a merry tale on old Captain Matson, head of the expedition. The Captain is a forthright sea-dog sort of fellow, and he felt to the full the importance of the expedition and his place in connection with it.

The citizens of Astoria, as part of the proceedings, had prepared a banquet for the visitors. The Captain had presided at so many events where the pilgrims were concerned that he got it into his head that he was the natural-born presiding officer of all occasions. So, when the Astoria banquet came on he promptly rapped for order and called:

"Mr. So-and-So will now tell what California thinks of her sister State, Oregon."

The speaker rose and said his say. As he sat down the Mayor of Astoria, who had been duly scheduled and commissioned to preside at the feast, got up to introduce a speaker and take charge. But Captain Matson was too quick and strenuous for him. He rapped and rapped, loudly:

"Sit down! Sit down!" he roared at the Mayor, and the Mayor sat down. Then the Captain introduced his next speaker who talked his talk. Again the Mayor got up and went as far as:

"Gentlemen of California," when Matson's gravel came down again and shut him off. Once more Matson introduced speaker who spoke; once more the Mayor made his beginning of "Gentlemen of California"; and once more Matson sat him down and went on with the program, he had laid out in his own mind.

This became a regular proceeding, and that Mayor who was to have presided at the banquet didn't get a chance, even to make his speech, until the feast was nearly over.

The Campaign Is Already On

Quietly there is a movement afoot to make Samuel M. Shortridge our United States Senator when George C. Perkins lays down the toga.

Shortridge has been a candidate before. That was some years ago, and then he was regarded as too audacious—too ambitious for a young man. At that he made a fairly good showing in the face of a persistent effort to make him seem like a joke.

Since then the gray has come into Shortridge's hair. He has been a most persistent and consistent campaigner for the Republican party, giving of his unquestioned eloquence freely and gladly and helping along with funds when occasion offered or demanded. So there is nothing audacious or funny about his present ambition, and I think you will find the old guard lining up behind him, and that a good many progressives will say he is just the man who has deserved well of his party.

One on Tim McGrath

Charley de Young passed Tim McGrath the other day and after they bowed the former said:

"Tim and I are old friends and I like to do a turn for him when I can. So he came to the office to see me. There we have cards printed with blanks, and visitors are expected to write their names and the nature of their mission, so we will not get mixed up or be bothered with cranks. So when Tim came he was passed a card to fill out. It read:

"Name _____,

"Nature of Business _____,

"Tim took his pencil and got down to work. When I got the card this is what I read:

"Name—Tim McGrath."

His Tongue in His Cheek

"That reminds me of Tom Sharkey in his fighting days," said Jimmie Swinnerton, the cartoonist. "The women used to call on him to look over a fistic hero, and they were always anxious to get his photograph. Tom was rather proud of these attentions, but when it came to writing his autograph on the photographs he made heavy weather of it."

"One day some ten women came in, and as usual, Tom and his manager were all attention. The women were much impressed and made the usual demands for photographs and autographs. Tom sat down, twisted his legs and got his tongue in cheek. The first one or two autographs he got through in fair style. Then the ink began to get on his fingers and the blots to come, till the last signatures were messes."

"Gee, I'd rather go ten rounds any time than to do that again," was Tom's wail when the women had gone."

What Have We Done to Them?

Billy Humphrey and Sam Rucker were in Pittsburgh at the time we had our little temblor of a few weeks ago. There their friends came to them with long faces and this:

"We're awful sorry, but there has been another dreadful earthquake in San Francisco. We're afraid it's pretty bad, as all the wires are dead west of Reno."

Naturally the Californians were much alarmed. The Associated Press gave them the same alarmist story. So they sent a wire here and left for New York. At the Knickerbocker Hotel there they got the answering wire: "Slight shock; no damage whatever."

But the New York papers—with the exception of the Hearst papers—were full of wild accounts of dropping cornices, falling chimneys and broken walls, and a gentleman at the hotel counter said:

"Well, your telegram is all right, but I don't like these newspaper reports. I was going to California with my family, but I'll turn around and go to Europe instead."

Now, why do they persecute us so? Are they jealous of our wondrous growth and matchless prosperity? Surely there must be some reason for exaggerating a little harmless jingle into a cataclysm and scaring people so they fear to sojourn here.

An Even Bigger Scheme of Plunder

The theft of Leonardo da Vinci's La Joconde or Mona Lisa from its place in the Louvre seems to have astonished the French authorities until they cannot fancy that such a theft was possible. But they don't know the wiles and devices of the men who live by their wits. To some of our American chevaliers d'Industrie that theft would be what they call "a pipe."

If a man should run across Alvie King that quick-witted young chap could probably tell him just how the thing was done, and he might give him some idea of whom the men were who turned the trick. For Alvie once planned and prepared all the details for an even greater and far more difficult coup.

He had arranged to carry off the Venus of Milo.

Surely that is a far more difficult task than getting away with a small picture—and the Mona Lisa is not over 2 by 3 feet. But King and his confederates had a perfect scheme for getting the greatest art treasure of them all. Then they began to wonder what they could do with it. Perhaps they read the story of the stolen white elephant and laughed themselves out of their design. In any event, they gave it up; but King could tell you that the moothing of Mona Lisa was as easy as gold-bricking the man from Yolo.

A Shift of the Face of Fortune

George A. Knight, in reminiscent mood, got to telling how Governor Jim Budd, when a boy at Brayton College school in your city, "got religion" through the exhortations of a traveling evangelist; and this called to his mind that "Tom" Woodward was in Budd's class and also "got religion" at the same time.

"And, by the way," said he, "do you know about Tom Woodward's fortune? Of course you know Tom. He was City Engineer during the Schmitz regime, and when he got out of office he was pretty well broke. In fact, he seemed glad to get a job at $125 a month to tide him along."

"But he had gotten hold of some worthless land up the San Joaquin valley and he hung onto it through thick and thin. That land was in the district called the Lost Hills. They found oil there. Then came the time when the oil magnates had to have Tom's land. They paid him $1,250,000 for it—that's all."

Where They Missed It

"Remember Jack Best, don't you?" went on Knight. "Well, Jack was one of the finest fellows in the world, and when he got into trouble I did what I could for him. At the time he came out, he came to me and I helped him get to Los Angeles. In a little while he wrote me:

"Send me $500—there's oil right here in the streets of Los Angeles."

"I thought he was a dreamer and didn't remit. The oil was there, though, and we might have made a fortune on that $500."

"Then along came a letter, 'Send me $1000. There's oil up on Kern river and we can get the land for nothing.' I asked W. W. Stow what he thought of it. He said it was a dream and that Charlie Felton had been through the whole thing and found there was nothing in it. So I didn't send the thousand—and see what a rich man I'd now be if I had taken Jack's tip instead of Stow's."

Campaign Grows Warm

The municipal campaign in San Francisco is becoming quite heated. While James Rolph appears to be in the lead at the present time, the adherents of P. H. McCarthy declare that they will "sweep the town off its feet" with their Labor Day parade on September 4th, which bids fair to exceed all similar demonstrations both in numbers in line and in the enthusiasm of those participating. The various labor organizations have, for months, been preparing for this event and they feel confident that its magnitude will be such as to convince all citizens that McCarthy's success at the primary polls is assured.

Then, too, there is the McCarthy organization, or machine, a most perfect piece of political mechanism, upon which much reliance is placed by the supporters of the incumbent mayor.

The Union Labor Party managers lay great store upon the visit of Samuel Gompers, president of the National Federation of Labor, to this city to assist in the McCarthy campaign. It is also proposed to bring some of the labor Congressmen from other States out here to take part in the McCarthy canvass.

That the McCarthy organization has the sinews of war at hand is indicated by intimations that a fund of $500,000 will be available to promote his canvass. Contributions of large sums by labor organizations in other States are suggested.

The Rolph machine or organization, while making quite a demonstration in behalf of that candidate, at this time, is not all on ball bearings. There is much friction in the Rolph camp. Much of the trouble is over money—otherwise campaign funds. The Municipal Conference, the latest reform movement to infest San Francisco, was the first organization to take up James Rolph for mayor. It was proposed by this combination to stop with this selection, but later it named a full Board of Supervisors. This latter movement has caused much discord in this civic movement and may prove its undoing.

A Bird of Passage

The framers of this movement intended it for a political bird of passage, as they added "of 1911" to its designation and the indications are that it will be put on the scrap heap with other similar schemes as soon as its private purposes shall have either been accomplished or defeated.

Much money has been collected by the Municipal Conference. The citizens have been generous in their contributions, believing that they were to be used to promote the election of Rolph to the office of mayor.

Now complaints are made that this money has been diverted to campaigns of the supervisors of this machine, which ticket, it is alleged, was selected with a view to the purchase of the plant of the Spring Valley Water Works at a figure satisfactory to that corporation.

The first collections of coin, said to have exceeded $30,000 quickly disappeared in the maw of the conference campaign. A second canvass for money is said to have run the total up to $60,000. This has been absorbed and the Municipal Conference is now out with an appeal for more money.

Where all this money has gone is not clear. Rolph opened personal headquarters that were to be financed by the Municipal Conference, but before these had been in operation two weeks, there was no money forthcoming to meet the expenses of maintaining them. It is told that Rolph was obliged to go down deep into his own pockets to pay the bills. Rolph's associates in the canvass allege that the money contributed to his campaign had been largely diverted by the Municipal Conference for the purpose of boosting the Spring Valley Board of Supervisors. On the other hand, charges are made of incompetency and extravagance in the management of the Rolph headquarters and some of those who have been in charge of that establishment are expected to "fade" very soon and make way for more experienced and less expensive managers.

The Old Vendetta

The political vendetta that made itself apparent in this city about six years ago over the proposal of the Rue Board of Supervisors to purchase for San Francisco a water supply other than that of the Spring Valley apparently has not been fought out and traces of it are to be seen in the present campaign. That the feud may take a lively turn is not improbable, notwithstanding the Bay Cities Water Company, then in the control of Will Tevis, has passed to the big $200,000 corporation—the United Properties Company.

Early in the campaign there was a split in the Rolph machine in the Thirty-fifth district, in which is the home of that candidate. Edward F. Delger, whose name is familiar in Oakland as a large property owner, sought to get the Jim Rolph Home Club to endorse the Spring Valley Board of Supervisors selected by the Municipal Conference. The Home Club refused to do so, and then Delger, who is the treasurer of the Municipal Conference, organized another club that would endorse the whole conference ticket.

The lack of harmony among the political prima donnas in charge of Rolph's canvass, particularly at the various headquarters, has reached a stage that can only be remedied by a reorganization, which will be had at an early day. These internal disturbances in the Rolph camp are no longer a family affair. Reports of the squabbles and disagreements have reached the other camps and McCarthy recently remarked with a chuckle, "Just watch them about two weeks from now." As the primary election is four weeks away there is ample opportunity for many happenings in the meantime. It is a wise man indeed who can foretell what the electors of San Francisco will do, for in the game of politics as played in this city the tides of popular sentiment come and go as do those of the ocean.

NARRATIVE OF THE MAN WHO PLANNED TO STEAL VENUS OF MILO

All Out For the Coin

The local Democratic County Committee, which endorsed Rolph, is included in the number that have been unable to secure a share of the Rolph sack collected by the Municipal Conference. But the Bourbons still have hopes that financial aid will be forthcoming.

Rolph's friends have started a canvass for financial contributions in behalf of his personal campaign, and although frequently met with statements that the merchant or other citizen applied to has already given money to the Municipal Conference for the Rolph fight, collections are reported to be coming in in a fairly satisfactory manner.

The Republican County Committee, another branch of the municipal campaign with Rolph at the head of its ticket, finding that the general Rolph sack collected by the Municipal Conference was not to be opened to this committee, went on a collecting tour of its own. The citizens were very generous to the committee and, notwithstanding the conference had combed the city three times, it soon found itself capitalized for the campaign and with more money to come. The County Committee, while quite earnest in its support of Rolph, is more deeply interested in a special canvass for Ralph Hathorn for district attorney. The latter, if elected, will have twenty places in his office that may serve as rewards to the faithful, and the County Committee is willing to distribute those jobs among "bright and able young men."

Disorganized Democrats

The State Democrats are getting ready for the National campaign. M. F. Tarpey and other representatives of W. R. Hearst were in the southern part of the State during the week just closed looking after the canvass of Hearst for President. While the Democrats of the south are badly disorganized there is no doubt but the delegates to the National Convention from that section of the State will be secured for Hearst, as will those from the north.

In Los Angeles the reform Democrats went over to the Goo Goos in the last local election and when the Good Government forces secured control of the municipal administration they proceeded with celerity to turn all Democrats that held office out. This tended to further demoralize the so-called Democratic organization in the south. The relations between the Bourbons, previously strained, reached a stage where it is said no two Democrats spoke to each other. The lack of sociability among the followers of Jefferson and Jackson and the political jobs in Los Angeles was as great as that which existed in San Francisco a few years back. Albert Norton, former chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Los Angeles and Bourbon boss of that section, has gone into eclipse.

With the field thus cleared it is believed that the representatives of Hearst will succeed in inducing more Democrats to hold converse with each other and form a new organization, with a view to sending Hearst delegates to the National Convention than will any other influence.

The Exposition Site

Notwithstanding the spirited and not infrequently acrimonious contentions had by the directors of the Panama-Pacific Exposition Corporation, that ranged over several months and were brought to temporary conclusion by a compromise report, dividing the site between Harbor View and Golden Gate Park, the exposition will be held at the former place. Golden Gate Park may get a permanent structure or two, but otherwise the surface of the big pleasure ground will remain undisturbed by the international fair. It has been suggested that the once enthusiastic proponents of the park site plant a small lemon orchard in memoriam of the lost cause.

It is believed that the War Department, by Act of Congress, will concede to the exposition directors the use of such lands as they desire at the Presidio and Fort Mason, and these properties, combined with those already secured at Harbor View, will, it is said by engineers and architects, make an ideal site for an exposition of a semi-marine character as that of 1915 will be. It is expected that Congress will act in this relation at its next session.

At the Presidio there are two hundred acres available, and the whole of the Fort Mason reservation, excepting the buildings occupied by the officers in charge, may be utilized.

Talk of the building of a railroad tunnel under Fort Mason by the Southern Pacific has been revived. Should this work be done passengers landing from transbay points at any place on the harbor front of San Francisco could be transported to the very center of the exposition grounds inside of five minutes."

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair--Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulfur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and fading hair and for making the hair grow. In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorized druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at 50 cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by the Owl Drug Company, Thirteenth and Broadway, Tenth and Washington, Sixteenth and San Pablo.

POPULAR OPERAS ON IDORA'S BILL

Impresario Lambardi Offers "Il Trovatore," "Lucia" and "Faust."

With the performance of "Traviata" last evening the first week of the Lambardi grand opera season at Idora Park was brought to a close. Impresario Lambardi and his wonderful company of song birds have scored a veritable triumph during the entire week, and Manager York of Idora has again demonstrated that he can present good grand opera at dollar prices.

Critics and opera lovers alike unite in declaring the present Lambardi company superior to any other company that has heretofore borne the name of Lambardi. When one considers that on the previous visits of Lambardi to the Pacific coast $2.50 prices were charged and that during the 1910 season at Idora Park it was well known that the theater in the big amusement park is packed at every performance. The park officials state that during the past week they have done nearly double the business of the first week last season.

OPERAS FOR WEEK.

The advance sale for the week beginning today has been particularly heavy and indicated that even larger crowds will enjoy the superb productions of the Lambardi's than during the opening week.

SCHEDULE OF OPERAS FOR THE WEEK AS FOLLOWS:

Sunday matinee—"Il Trovatore".

Monday night—"Lucia".

Tuesday night—"Lucia".

Wednesday night—"Il Trovatore".

Thursday night—"Lucia".

Friday night—"Faust".

Saturday matinee—"Lucia".

Sunday night—"Il Trovatore".

GERMAN IMMIGRATION SHOWS BIG DECREASE

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The number of emigrants leaving the German North Sea ports this year is much less than in 1910. For the first seven months of the year Hamburg reported a reduction of 26,000 in a total of 43,733. The causes assigned for the lighter outgo this year are in part the unfavorable business situation in the United States and the more rigid application of the American immigration laws. Another cause, however, is evidently the prosperous condition of the chief countries that now supply the bulk of the immigrants into the United States. This year Germany itself is feeling very keenly the shortage in the supply of Russian farm laborers, due to the fact that Russia is now enjoying unusual prosperity. Wages have been raised and the people are consequently staying at home. The shortage of Russian laborers has amounted to the proportion of a calamity for the farmers in the eastern German provinces. Fewer Galicians and Hungarian laborers, too, are coming into Germany this year, owing to more prosperous times in those countries; the same thing is true in regard to Italy.

Voyage of 'Sea Bird' Is One Of the Marvels of Navigation

The Sea Bird in the river Tiber, Rome. This tiny craft crossed the Atlantic, sailing from Providence, Rhode Island.

When Thomas Day and his associates started across the ocean in their tiny craft, the "Sea Bird," their friends and all who knew of the daring expeditions, were very dubious of their ever arriving at their destination, the Roman capital.

"They crossed in safety, however, and fulfilled their mission when they presented ed to the King of Italy letters with which they had been charged. From the beginning, the voyage was filled with danger, though no very serious incident occurred. But the privations of the journey were so great that they have arranged to ship the "Sea Bird" back to Providence and are returning to the United States on a regular ocean liner.

DISEASE RAGES AMONG CATTLE

German Herds Are Suffering Greatly From Mouth and Hoof Affections.

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The hoof and mouth disease is now making such ravages among German flocks that even the agrarian organs admit that the meat supply of the country is seriously threatened.

An official report of the imperial government, dated July 21, shows that 31,928 farms, located in 1803 different districts, are affected. One result of the spread of the disease has been a reduction in the number of cattle in the country.

According to the latest official reports the number of all live stock, except swine, brought to market this year, has been smaller than in 1910. It is claimed by the agrarian newspapers that the disease was brought into Germany in June, 1910, from Russia, and that despite the rigorous precautionary measures of the authorities, it has spread to its present proportions in the brief space of one year. Just now the meat supply is further threatened by the certainty that all sorts of animal food products will be scarce and high.

The grass crop has been greatly damaged by the protracted heat and drought of the spring and summer. The potato crop also, as is feared, will be much shorter than usual; and this means much for the meat supply, since the waste of potato alcohol distilleries is one of the principal feeding materials for fattening live stock. The oats crop has been seriously injured by adverse weather conditions.

The affair was given in honor of the forth coming grand council celebration, which is to be held in Santa Cruz, beginning next Monday. A special train will leave First and Broadway, Oakland, tomorrow morning at 7:45 a. m., and will arrive in the city of the Holy Cross shortly after 11 o'clock. The drill team of Oakland Council, No. 6, with several friends, as well as the band, consisting of their pieces, from California Council No. 24, will be aboard. They promise that there will be something doing all of the time, until the train lands the excursionists home again Sunday evening.

Jos. Kenney, Nat Bronner, Frank McGillian and Captain Hugh Leonard also addressed the gathering and their words of advice, during which they kept their hearers' interest at a high point, were well received.

"I regret," said Petri, "that Miss Dyer must be brought into this conversation, but since fate brought her into the matter through conditions over which I had no control, I promise I should talk plainly so there can be no misunderstanding."

"If am, perhaps, guilty of indiscretion, I told Miss Dyer everything she says I did, but I was misrepresenting myself to her. When I told her I was Prince Windisch-Graetz, which means windy bags, I did so as a joke."

"I first came to this country in 1907. Three or four days after landing, I enlisted under my right name, George Petri, in May, 1910. I re-enlisted for three years, and was given a three-months' leave of absence to go abroad. On the steamship back to this country, I met Miss Dyer, who had been studying music abroad. She impressed me to believe her station in life was higher than it really was. I detected this single fault instantly, and some strange humor possessed me to say I was Prince Windisch-Graetz, a prince, serving in this army as a spy. For some time I had to keep up the deception."

"Miss Dyer fell in love with me, and I fell in love with her. She told her folk she had met Prince Windisch-Graetz, and they asked the Austrian embassy for information about a nobleman of that name."

"Desiring to protect me, Miss Dyer sent one of my pictures to the embassy, requesting that they sent it to Paris and to Faust Totten. Realizing that some opportunity for the orphan to enjoy ice cream at the expense of the manager of the fair."

EFFIGY HANGERS TO FACE CHARGES TO ENTER PROTEST

U. S. District Attorney in Seattle Plans to Prosecute Alleged Conspirators.

SEATTLE, Aug. 26.—United States District Attorney Elmer E. Todd announced today that he would cause the arrest of the men who instigated the hanging in effigy of United States Judge Cornelius H. Hanford last night and who made incendiary speeches attacking the federal court because of the issuance of an injunction in the fight between the people of Edmonds Valley and the Seattle, Renton and Southern Railway.

Warrants charging the men with conspiracy to defeat justice in the United States court are being prepared.

Todd said that warrants would be issued for the arrest of Leroy Sanders, editor and E. C. Canfield, publisher of the Seattle Star, and evening news editor John H. Perry Saunders, attorney; Oliver Tarekon, member of the Seattle city council; who presided at the mass meeting; former Mayor A. V. Fayett of Tacoma; William Atkinson; Hugo Kelly, former game warden of King county; Paul K. Mohr and Thomas Horner, an attorney.

The law under which the prosecution will be brought provides a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

POOL THEIR INTERESTS IN CARLOAD OF HONEY

CORONA, Aug. 26.—D. J. Dawson, L. H. Dawson, W. Darst, L. L. Andrews, T. G. Andrews, Perle Glass and L. C. Thomas, bee men of this locality, have pooled their interests in a carload of fine white honey which is being loaded at the station for shipment to Germany. There are 250 cases in the lot, which represent about the last of the grade for the season. There is yet, however, about another carload of buckwheat honey.

The team received 17 cents per pound for the product which is to go to Hamburg.

FREE GRAPE SHIPMENT.

KERMAN, August 26.—The first Malaga grapes ever shipped green from local vineyards left the Kerman depot Thursday. Malagas are reported as the only grape which has withstood the recent break in the Eastern market and they continue to bring good prices.

BOURBON LEADER DIES.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 26.—William B. Kirk, former mayor of Syracuse, and for many years the recognized leader of the Democratic party in this city, died this morning of pneumonia.

RAILS TOO LIGHT FOR NEW HEAVY TRAINS

Rolling Stock's Weight Is Increased Beyond Proportion of Track.

EXPERT GIVES VIEWS ON RECENT WRECKS

Operating Officials Are Dismayed by Accidents and Heavy Death Toll.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The wreck of the Lehigh Valley express train with its death toll of 33 and 69 injured, and the fact that within the last six weeks three other express trains running at high speed have been wrecked in virtually the same manner with an aggregate casualty list of 83 and 107 injured, has filled the operating officials for the great eastern railroads with dismay.

In each of the four wrecks the roadbeds were in perfect condition and every known precaution for the prevention of such accidents has been taken. It became known today as a result of the Lehigh Valley wreck that the railroads are making a thorough investigation of these wrecks and already the investigators have come to some rather startling conclusions.

Raymond J. Pachal, a well known railroad builder, said today:

"The whole trouble is that the rolling stock is becoming too heavy for the standard rails now in use. The weight of locomotives and of steel passenger coaches has enormously increased of late years and still is increasing. Then in the fast train the practice of putting two locomotives to a heavy train is becoming more common."

"With the present rails this enormous weight when traveling at a higher rate of speed than 35 or 40 miles an hour, tends to spread the rails and a wreck follows. There is only one remedy: Heavier rails must be used for the fast trains."

"Some of the schedules between here and Chicago call for sixty or seventy miles an hour. With present weight of rolling stock nothing short of 120 pound rails can be depended upon to stand the enormous pressure."

PRINCE SPY SAYS HE FOOLDED GIRL

Says Titled Name He Gave Her Simply Means "Windy Bags."

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Private George Petri, the United States attorney, has broken the silence he maintained since Miss Anita Dyer of Indianapolis accused him of being a spy employed by Austria, and told his story. Petri admits that he is an Austrian, but denies he is a spy. He declares he is not afraid of the investigation undertaken by the war department on the strength of Miss Dyer's affidavit.

"I regret," said Petri, "that Miss Dyer must be brought into this conversation, but since fate brought her into the matter through conditions over which I had no control, I promise I should talk plainly so there can be no misunderstanding."

"I am, perhaps, guilty of indiscretion. I told Miss Dyer everything she says I did, but I was misrepresenting myself to her. When I told her I was Prince Windisch-Graetz, which means windy bags, I did so as a joke."

"I first came to this country in 1907. Three or four days after landing, I enlisted under my right name, George Petri, in May, 1910. I re-enlisted for three years, and was given a three-months' leave of absence to go abroad. On the steamship back to this country, I met Miss Dyer, who had been studying music abroad. She impressed me to believe her station in life was higher than it really was. I detected this single fault instantly, and some strange humor possessed me to say I was Prince Windisch-Graetz, a prince, serving in this army as a spy. For some time I had to keep up the deception."

"Miss Dyer fell in love with me, and I fell in love with her. She told her folk she had met Prince Windisch-Graetz, and they asked the Austrian embassy for information about a nobleman of that name."

"Desiring to protect me, Miss Dyer sent one of my pictures to the embassy, requesting that they sent it to Paris and to Faust Totten. Realizing that some serious might result, I confessed that the spy story was a fabrication and that I was not a prince, at the same time apologizing for deceiving her and offering never to try to see her again."

The committee that has the matter under advisement, and is handling the proposition for the protestants consists of W. J. Keating, secretary; H. K. Zelmer, C. Jurgens, D. B. Huntley, T. W. Corder, Frank Miller, P. J. Nichols and J. C. Rohan.

YANKEE GIRL MAKES HAZARDOUS JOURNEY

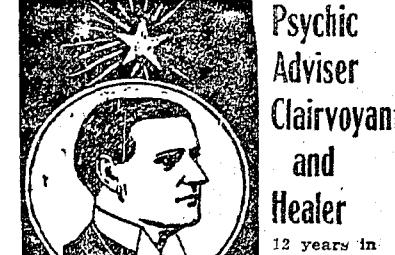

PEKING, Aug. 26.—Miss Elizabeth Kendall, professor of history at Wellesley College, is just completing a year of travel around the railways of many eastern countries with a companion of her own race and color.

Beginning on the Dalmatian coast she then went to Turkey and India, falling to obtain a passport from the Chinese government, permitting her to enter China from Burma. She went by sea to Canton, where she picked up an ownerless Irish terrier, a strange dog to this country, who followed her across China to the borders of Tibet. She came thence down the Yangtze River to the railroad at Hankow, making the journey by Chinese boat, pony, native cart and sedan chair, according to the nature of the country and the facilities.

NOON MEAL FOR RURAL SCHOLARS

University of Minnesota Backs Project to Do Away With Cold Lunch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 26.—Instead of the old-fashioned dinner pail with its consignment of cold lunch there will be a hot meal served at noon to every rural school house in the state. Miss Mary L. Bull, domestic science expert of the extension corps, University of Minnesota, sees her hope fulfilled.

After studying commissary departments of the schools in several counties, Miss Bull has returned to the university determined to end the dinner carrying habit. She wrote a bulletin giving simple recipes suitable to noonday lunches in rural schools.

The children are expected to brew their own tea, boil their own potatoes and cook their own meat on the stove in the room. Soup is expected to head the bill of fare and dessert to end it—and all furnished by the children's parents.

The campaign is backed by the domestic science department at the university.

ANOTHER REBEL PLOT IN MEXICO

Enriquez Arrested as Leader, But Refuses to Disclose His Associates.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 26.—Local authorities have discovered evidence of a plot for another revolution formed by Andres Molina Enriquez, who in his "plan de Texcoco" named as co-workers Emilio Vasquez Gomez, former minister of the interior; Manuel Bonilla, minister of the department of communications; Pascual Orozco and Guillermo Zapata. The four were condemned.

Enriquez declares he has the support of many former Maderistas, but will not name them because he prefers to be the only "martyr" in the event of failure.

ALLEGED WHITE SLAVE DEALER IS ARRAIGNED

SANTA CRUZ, Aug. 26.—Harry de Lorme, charged by Helen Whitsen, a 17-year-old girl of San Francisco, was brought to Santa Cruz from Stockton and arraigned before Justice C. M. Gardner. De Lorme said his true name is Journeay Motte. In default of $2000 bail he was remanded to jail. His hearing was set for September 1.

DISFIGURED WITH SCALES AND CRUSTS

Eczema from Top of Head to Waist. Suffered Untold Agony and Pain. Doctors Said It Could Not Be Cured. Set of Cuticura Remedies Successful When All Else Had Failed.

"Some time ago I was taken with eczema from the top of my head to my waist. It began with scales on my body. I suffered until itching and burning, and could not sleep. I was greatly disfigured with scales and crusts. My ears looked as if they had been most cut off with a razor, and my neck was perfectly raw. I suffered untold agony and pain. I tried two doctors who said I had eczema in its full stage, and that it could not be cured. I tried to get other remedies to avoid it. At last, I tried a set of the genuine Cuticura Remedies, which cured me. Cuticura Remedies cured me of eczema when all else had failed, therefore I cannot praise them too highly."

"I suffered with eczema about ten months, but am now entirely cured, and I believe Cuticura Remedies are the best skin cure there is." (Signed) Miss Mattie J. Shaffer, R. F. D. 1, Box 8, Dancy, Miss., Oct. 27, 1910.

"I had suffered from eczema about four years when I got better to my waist. It started with scales on my body. It started with different parts of my body. It started with a large red rash. My back was affected first, when it also spread over my face. The itching was almost unbearable at times. I tried different soaps and salves, but nothing seemed to help me until I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One box of them cured me entirely. I recommended them to my sister for her baby, who was troubled with eczema, and they completely cured her baby." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Marberger, Dieherville, Pa., Sept. 6, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 22-page booklet on the skin and hair, will be sent, post-free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 4B, Boston.

'GREEN KNIGHT' PLAYED IN CONCERT AND SCORES HITBohemia Jinks Piece Gets Approval of Public

CHARLES KEELER, the Berkeley poet, who, with Miss Mabel Riegelman, gave a farewell program last night.

THE Bohemian Club concert was the event of the week in the music circles of the towns about the bay. The Central Theater was crowded on Friday afternoon when an orchestra of sixty players, a chorus of male voices of equal number and Miss Anna Miller Wood, H. L. Perry and G. Severti, as soloists, gave a splendid presentation of the Bohemian Grove music. The program was delightful, selections from "The Green Knight" by that talented young Oakland man, Edward G. Stricklen, were received with enthusiastic applause.

The orchestra interpretation was remarkably good, and the various local composers conducted with decided skill.

Marshall Darrach read the libretto of the work accompanied in places by Stricklen's music. The rendition on the whole was remarkably fine and musicians from all the big cities united in praising it highly. The entire program was as follows:

PART I.

"Tarantella"..... Herman Perlet Conducted by Wallace A. Sabin.
(a) "Andante Cantabile"..... Theodore Vogt
Aria, "Truhenlied Bohemian"..... E. P. Schneider Miss Anna Miller Wood.
"Dance of the Saplings"..... E. P. Schneider Conducted by the composer.
Love duet, "The Cave Man" W. J. McCoy Miss Wood and H. L. Perry
"Death of Meledon and Triumphal March" ("Hamadryads")..... William J. McCoy Bohemian club chorus and orchestra. Conducted by the composer. Intermission.

PART II.

Selections from "The Green Knight" Orchestral numbers directed by E. G. Stricklen; dramatic recital by Marshall Darrach.
1. Solo's welcome to the Bohemians.
2. Orchestral prelude to "The Green Knight."
3. Melodrama, "The Elk King Episode."
4. Orchestral, "Dance of the Moon-beams, Elvins and Goblins."
5. Dramatic recital, "The Black Knight Episode."
6. Orchestral entry of captives of care Intermezzo and entrance music of "The Green Knight."
7. Melodrama, "Black Knight's Defiance and Green Knight's Speech to the Captives."
8. Orchestral, "The King's March."
9. Melodrama, Green Knight's apostrophe to Beauty, and finale.

Miss Mabel Riegelman's concert in San Francisco is scheduled for the 17th of next month and is of keen interest to many. She will sing a number of operatic arias and many songs by classic German composers.

KEELER RECITES HIS POEMS.

A thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent last night by local music and literary lovers who gathered at Century Club hall in San Francisco to hear Charles Keeler of Berkeley, and Miss Mabel Riegelman, of whom Oaklanders are justly proud.

The evening was given under the auspices of the local Impresarios, Brodgen and Ver Mehr, who have undertaken to give local talent a chance to show what it can do, and exploited Mr. Keeler in readings of his own poems, while Miss Riegelman sang the songs of Mrs. R. W. Simonds of Berkeley.

The post will leave soon for the Orient, and last night was a farewell affair, where friends and admirers gathered. The poems, especially of early California days, are well adapted to recitation and are full of local color.

Reading from the "Elfin Songs of Sunland," "Wildwood Songs" and a number of others were greeted by the audience, with enthusiastic applause.

Miss Riegelman, who is a pupil of Louis Crepany, sang with rare feeling and beauty the songs by the talented Berkeley composer, who has received much praise from competent Eastern critics.

The evening was a decided success and other like affairs by local talent will be given during the coming week.

Mr. Keeler will repeat last night's program at the Hillside club tomorrow.

COLLEGE BOY WINS FAME.

Another local musician to win fame away is H. Warner Sherwood, a junior at the University of California, and one of the Glee Club members, who toured Europe this summer.

The only one of this club who did not return home, young Sherwood will remain abroad for a year, during which time he will study with Herr Sevcik, head of the conservatory of Vienna, pupil of the great Joachim, and one of the most foremost violinists of the world.

Young Sherwood, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sherwood of 121 Hillcrest road, Berkeley, has been known for many years in musical circles about the bay. As a boy he was famous as a soloist in the vested choir of Christ Church, Alameda, where his family lived at that time. He later took up the study of the violin, and became equally proficient on that instrument. He has a sister, Miss Mary Sherwood, who has also been prominent musically through the sympathetic accompaniments which she has given her brother on many musical programs.

As for Sevcik, Sherwood's new teacher, he ranks as the foremost instructor of Austria-Hungary. He became head of the Vienna conservatory on the death of the great Joachim. It is his custom to gather around him a few pupils whose talents give promise of fame, and Sherwood is one of the chosen few.

Another musician of note with whom Sherwood became intimate on the Glee Club tour was Arthur Wershinger, a German composer who joined the tourists on the steamer at New York. On the voyage to Berlin he composed for them a song, "Aus Goldener Zeit," which is translated as "From the Golden Days." With Sherwood playing a violin accompanist, the Glee Club boys scored successes with this piece in their European performances. Wershinger instructed them in the melody.

"I suffered with eczema about ten months, but am now entirely cured, and I believe Cuticura Remedies are the best skin cure there is." (Signed) Miss Mattie J. Shaffer, R. F. D. 1, Box 8, Dancy, Miss., Oct. 27, 1910.

"I had suffered from eczema about four years when I got better to my waist. It started with scales on my body. I suffered until it also spread over my face. The itching was almost unbearable at times. I tried different soaps and salves, but nothing seemed to help me until I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One box of them cured me entirely. I recommended them to my sister for her baby, who was troubled with eczema, and they completely cured her baby." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Marberger, Dieherville, Pa., Sept. 6, 1910.

Mrs. Blake-Alverson gave a reception during the week for two former pupils that have made a success in the musical world. William H. Keith, now of New York, where he is teaching vocal culture in the Molenheuer conservatory, and Lee Tung Foo, a Chinese vaudeville singer.

Seven Hundred Men Try to Subdue Flames in Oregon Timber.

PORLTAND, Ore., Aug. 26.—Pedestrians in the vicinity of Third and Market streets got a touch of real Western color the other day. There was a hurried gathering of skirts and some fast pedaling when Emile Agraz of San Jose pulled out a big automatic pistol, reached into another pocket for something which the onlookers thought might be shells and started hammering tacks into the fence about a building under construction with the butt of the weapon.

Emile Agraz is a deputy sheriff of Santa Clara county. Apparently he is assisting that the promoters of a conjunction automobile race meeting to be held at San Jose September 3 with the advertising of the event. He went to San Francisco to serve a warrant on an autoist who had eluded him while going better than 60 miles an hour on the road between Palo Alto and San Jose and had with him a couple of posters announcing the races. Seeing favored spot on the temporary fence he decided to put up a few of the announced. He had no hammer, and so used the next best thing—the "gat" with which he sometimes emphasizes his commands to speeding automobile drivers.

ARMY MAY USE PART OF INDIAN RESERVATION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Brigadier General Marion P. Maus, commanding the Department of Columbia, who has just completed an inspection tour of the Warm Springs Indian reservation of Oregon, has advised the War Department that the reservation contains an ideal spot for a permanent army maneuver camp and recommended that a portion be reserved for military purposes. The reservation soon will be opened to settlement.

Lee Tung Foo, whose real name is Henry Lee, is visiting his family in this city.

Mrs. Alverson is a delightful singer and is much beloved in both musical and social circles.

HILLSIDE CLUB RECEPTION.

Miss Mary Andrews, the talented young violinist, and Frederick Maurer Jr., the pianist, were made the guests of honor at the Hillside club during the week.

The club gave a Wagner recital and discussion and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

A large number of guests gathered at the artistic club house in North Berkeley.

Mrs. Oscar Maurer gave some interesting reminiscences of the Bayreuth festival and another feature of the evening was the address on "Some Legends of the Wagner Operas" by Mrs. Frederick W. Serby.

MOVEMENTS OF MUSICIANS.

Miss Evangeline Sale will give a musical recital on Saturday evening, September 2, when a large number of music lovers will assemble for an hour of song.

Miss Grace Ewing, the concert contralto, who has been visiting in this city and San Francisco, has returned to New York, where she will continue her musical work and will later go to Europe. She expects to return here for another visit in 1916.

The University and the New Tax Law.

State Controller Nye places President Wheeler of the State University in the Ananias class. He gives the lie circumstantially and circumspectly, but none the less precisely. Moreover, he courteously charges Dr. Wheeler with purposely or ignorantly misrepresenting the amount of money the State University will receive under the new tax law.

Recently President Wheeler complained that the university's revenue would be decreased under the new law. Controller Nye emphatically denies the statement, and gives figures to prove that he is right and Dr. Wheeler wrong. According to his computation, the State University will receive this year (under the new tax arrangement) about $50,000 more than it received last year from the ad valorem property tax, and he computes that by the year 1914-15 the university's revenue from this source will have increased 81 per cent. He also submits a comparative table showing that California makes a more liberal provision for her university than does any other State.

The question at issue, of course, is not the correctness of the respective opinions of President Wheeler and Controller Nye, but of adequate provision for the maintenance of the State University. Naturally Dr. Wheeler wants all the money he can get, but as Mr. Nye says the university is only one of the State's many charges and that "the tax money must be spent with a due regard for the absolute needs of each institution" if it is to go round. He says the university should not be stinted, but that it should not make unreasonable or extravagant demands.

The position taken by the State Controller is unquestionably correct. His computations may be erroneous, but we see no reason to doubt their accuracy. Assuming that they are accurate, even approximately, it must be conceded that the State University will be a gainer and not a sufferer under the new tax arrangement, and is as liberally provided for in the matter of running expenses as circumstances warrant. This is quite apart, however, from extraordinary needs in the shape of new buildings. These will have to be provided by private beneficence or special appropriation by the Legislature.

Unless Controller Nye is in error the University of California has a larger income per capita of its student body of any State University in the country, and is as well endowed as any. But the point to be kept in mind is the proportion of the State's revenue that can be judiciously expended on the university. According to the Controller the university receives annually $1,060,125 from the State, and has an additional revenue from endowment and other sources of $1,748,717, making a total of $2,808,717. This does not look as if the State University is being starved.

Every citizen should take a proper pride in the State University, but there is reason in all things, and solicitude for the welfare of that institution should not obscure the needs of other public institutions nor go further than the demands of the occasion warrant. This is not a question of local favor or of personal bias, but one affecting the general welfare and the interests of every section and every State institution. President Wheeler's loyalty and interest are centered in the State University, which is natural, but the Controller represents the taxpayers of the whole State, and incidentally it is his duty to bear in mind the interests of every State institution that the burdens of taxation may not be made too heavy and the public revenues be not inequitably distributed or extravagantly expended.

Ordinarily THE TRIBUNE would like to see the university given all the money that can be wisely expended, but it is neither fair nor wise to give it more than its just proportion or be favored at the expense of other institutions. As President Wheeler appears to be wrong in his estimate of the effect of the new tax law on the university's revenue there is no occasion to sound a note of alarm or to complain that the university is not adequately provided for.

Meyer Lissner's organ, the California Outlook, advises the voters of San Francisco to elect Ralph L. Hathorn District Attorney. A good many people will regard this advice as an excellent reason for voting against Mr. Hathorn. Mr. Lissner's desire to elect Hathorn is prompted chiefly by a wish to punish Charles M. Fickert for defeating Francis J. Heney two years ago.

A Suggestion for the Churches.

It occurs to us that the churches could popularize religious activities with the young and do a great deal toward making social life in the cities more wholesome and cleanly by providing gymnasiums and playgrounds for children and young people.

Many of the churches now provide reading rooms and lecture rooms, neither of which is devoted to sacerdotal uses. These adjuncts furnish instruction and recreation in a moral atmosphere and amid surroundings which inculcate religious sentiment. Why not add gymnasiums and playgrounds to them—places in which athletic training and exercise can be had in an atmosphere as morally as it is physically wholesome and playgrounds where children can disport themselves amid associations which inculcate purity of thought and conduct? Such agencies would enlist the ardent sympathies of the young and bring to the churches the aid of a powerful force which would work for the religious and moral welfare of the community.

Of course such things cost money and require organized effort, as well as administrative capacity. But is not the work well worth doing? Municipalities and the public schools find it well worth doing—find that it not only contributes to the moral and physical health of a community, but aids in building character and the growth of an elevated civic spirit. The lecture hall and reading room supply mental cravings and cultivate a taste for clean literature and sound thinking.

Why not carry the scheme further, and train the body and the taste for sport and recreation? It would help the churches immensely to retain their hold on the masses. It would make each one a center of loyalty and sympathy for the young, and insensibly this loyalty and sympathy would extend to the purely activities of the church. The young people attached to a church by such bonds would take a personal interest in the success of all its undertakings, and in the general effort to promote religious thought and feeling and assist in teaching the lessons of reverence, sobriety, continence and clean living in accordance with the word of God.

Is it not a good idea? Is not the scheme worth trying? Does it not promise to bring back to the fold the straying sympathies of the younger generation and restore to the churches the old power and influence they once enjoyed, and which by common consent are departing?

Bring the young people together in the shadow of the church and under the benign auspices of religion, and we are confident the devotional in their nature will respond to the effort to gratify within proper bounds their craving for amusement, recreation and exercise. It is worth a trial at all events.

Laurier's Turn to Exercise the PactA Sample of Cockney Socialism.

Austin Lewis, the Cockney Socialist, is like Marks in Uncle Tom's Cabin, a lawyer. At least, he says he is, and we are willing to let it go at that. However, he has at different times appeared before the public as a self-constituted champion of free speech. He has made himself notorious by his vehement and vituperative denunciation of public men and newspapers with whom he happened to disagree, but he has been deeply affronted because the Berkeley Gazette referred to him in a news item as an "atheist and a near-anarchist." He has accordingly had Friend W. Richardson, editor of the Gazette, arrested for criminal libel.

Lewis is a resident of Oakland and went to Berkeley to call the Mayor of that city to account for failing to perform his official duties to the satisfaction of Lewis and William D. Haywood, who achieved a dubious notoriety in connection with dynamite outrages in Colorado and Idaho. He is the same Haywood who figured as a defendant in the sensational trial in Idaho growing out of the murder of former Governor Frank Steunenburg. Haywood resides in Oakland, but went to Berkeley to denounce Mayor Wilson for refusing to run his office in accordance with the wishes of Socialist agitators like Lewis and Haywood.

Whether Lewis is an atheist or not we do not know, but we do know that he had no business in Berkeley trying to interfere in the domestic affairs of that city. He and Haywood were intruders and disturbers. They injected themselves into the administration of public affairs in Berkeley without justification and did so in a violent and offensive manner. Their conduct deserved the severest reprobation, but was in fact treated very mildly by the Berkeley newspapers.

Lewis is now trying to revenge himself on the Gazette for approving the official course of Mayor Wilson, and is endeavoring to use the machinery of the law to suppress the free speech, which he professes to hold in such high regard. He is in favor of the kind of free speech that violates decency and the rules of public order, but is opposed to the kind that rebukes demagogic agitators and disturbers who are striving to pull down the social fabric and destroy the fundamentals of orderly civilization. The uses for which Marks employed the law is known to every reader of Uncle Tom's Cabin. Lewis looks at the law in the same light that Marks did.

His methods have made him a pest in the courts of this county and his persistent attempts to stir up disorder and provoke demonstrations against ordinances designed to preserve order and prevent disturbance have caused him to be regarded by the mass of people as a chronic nuisance. He pretends to think the law should send the editor of the Berkeley Gazette to prison for calling him an atheist.

If the rule he has the hardihood to invoke were applied against himself he would languish in jail for the remainder of his days. Had he kept out of Berkeley and minded his business he would not have had his Whitechapel sensibilities wounded. His errand in Berkeley was an impudent one and his company malodorous. Yet he cries for justice. Give it to him with a boot, a pickhandle or anything that comes handy. Comparisons in his case would be both odorous and odious. Besides we have no wish to do Marks, the lawyer, an injustice. Even Marks would resent being classed with Austin Lewis.

Secretary of State Jordan should understand that everything a reform Legislature does is constitutional whether in conformity with the constitution or not. What's the constitution betwixt reformers, anyway?

The Los Angeles Express says Judge Cole has granted a change of venue to "Oakland county" in the damage suit of Gertrude Lucky vs. the Southern Pacific Railroad. Where is Oakland county, please, in what State, township and meridian? Has the editor of the Express created a new county in this State without letting the people know anything about it?

Anti-Semitic outrages are something new in modern England, but the recent outrages on Jews in Wales prove that bigotry and intolerance still have a strong hold in the British Isles. As usual, bigotry and intolerance take the form of mob outrage. Still we have no right to complain so long as American mobs continue to burn negroes.

AMERICAN GENIUS

There is a peculiar fitness in the fact that patent No. 1,000,000, which will be issued next week to an Ohio man, is for an improved rubber tire contributing to the efficiency of the automobile.

It was with the means of transportation that the first numbered patent was issued, when the patent office was reorganized, seventy-five years ago—a steam engine designed to run on an inclined plane being the first patent—and it is in the perfecting of more modern methods of transportation and communication that the genius of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries has most signalized itself.

The electric telegraph had long been a commonplace when the telephone began to assume its present position of importance in the social life and commerce of the world. With its many successive improvements it, too, had ceased to excite special wonder when the possibilities of wireless began to make "communities of principalities and neighborhoods of nations."

Concurrent in development was the automobile. Each of these great inventions and discoveries has been carried forward year by year, and it is at least an interesting coincidence that the millionth patent should be concerned with one of them.

But the most notable of all transportation devices, perhaps, is that by which the conquest of the air has been accomplished. It has the subtlety of simplicity about it.

The desire, if not the effort, to emulate the birds seems to have been implanted in the human heart since the days which gave birth to the myth of Daedalus.

It was one of the things which, by very reason of their apparent impossibility, were ever before us, and, if some recluse could suddenly come forth from a Rip Van Winkle sleep and survey all the inventions of today he would probably marvel most at the flying machine.

It comes as the climax of 121 years of ingenious activity among the most fertile minded of the people of the earth. The results have been accumulating in geometrical progression.

During the forty-six years from the first patents granted, but not numbered, in 1790, to the official establishment of the patent office in 1836, when the numbering began, approximately 10,000 patents were granted.

In the succeeding seventy-five years there have been a million—Philadelphia Times.

UNCLE SAM'S CROP YIELD

Through Uncle Sam's glasses, the crops of the country indicate a yield far below the average for the last five years.

This is distressing news, of course, when it is considered that the enormous yield of the fields and prairies in recent years has never meant overproduction.

But the situation as presented by the government, while not intentionally exaggerated, is, nevertheless, viewed at its worst—it may be materially improved in consequence of the rainfall and the moderation of temperature of the last week.

A government crop report, like a railroad time-table, is always subject to change.

Reliable reports from everywhere, particularly from the fertile lands of Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, indicate the extent to which the long periods of drought and intense heat have interfered with the productivity of the soil.

In order, however, to determine the general effect of a heavy decrease in the crop yield, it is necessary to measure the grain and other products after they are actually harvested.

It will teach the value of taking care of the fields and of providing means which, in future, may be employed to check the losing effects of drought and heat.

It will aid intensive, scientific farming and make the country more independent of natural conditions, as they may be from year to year.

In the case of the government's crop report, there is no present reason to think things are as bad as they seem—Philadelphia Times.

OVER IN KANSAS

They are going to shave the cats over in Kansas.

Why?

Oh, because it's Kansas.

Yes, they are going to shave the cats over in Kansas, and we suppose they'll grow long wool on the dogs and teach the sheep to bark and the horses to mow and the cattle to bleat. No doubt, too, they will paint the hens green and insist on their buttermilk being sweet and their eggs antique.

Why?

Well, you see, it's Kansas.

They say over there that the cats have microbes or germs or something. No doubt that's what makes the funny noise inside. We used to wonder what it was, but never cared to have the cat shaved in order to stop the gentle music, which we could almost feel by putting an ear down to Pussy's side. We used to squeeze her pretty tight in those days, but it never stopped the hummin inside. We couldn't understand why, then, but now we realize that the only way to get rid of a microbe or a germ was to shave the cat.

Wonder if shaving will rid a man of the same pestiferous visitor? We doubt it, for they have shaved occasionally over in Kansas, since Populism lost its hold on the state, and yet the germ of insanity seems to be working as great havoc there as ever.—Springfield (Mo.) Republican.

'CONTINUOUS' IN HAITI

Haytian history has been enriched by another "triumphant" revolution. Simon, protesting and breathing defiance to the very end, has abdicated. Which of the rebellious generals is entitled to succeed him?

God made the night and the winter that vegetation might come into contact with the forces of reinvigoration; and in soul life there must be some way whereby man can come into contact with the spiritual power, life and instruction necessary for the conservation of the energies put forth in service.

SOURCES OF LIFE.

Activity can never out-run life, and life can only be maintained by constant contact with the sources of that life.

Prayer and meditation are the appointed means for the retention, assimilation and development of the energies necessary for man's spiritual growth.

The largeness of the work and the greatness of the responsibilities does not diminish, but does increase, the demand for more prolonged communion with God—the source of power.

Joshua First and Eighth and the First Psalm confirm our assurance that communion with God and the great truths of His word is the means of soul culture, the evidence of righteousness and the assurance of success, as well as the source of the most pleasing experiences:

Happy the heart that keeps its twilight hour,

And in the depths of heavenly peace reclined,

Longs to commune with thoughts of mighty power,

Thoughts that ascend like angels beautiful,

A shining Jacob's-ladder of the mind.

Such meditation on the physiological side disciplines the mind to think on holy things and opens the "brain paths" to the recurrence of holy thoughts. It is then that comes the vision beautiful, the thoughts that breathe and the words that burn, the very inflowing of that rich red, spiritual blood that makes life's best possible.

Such meditation appropriates material that in its turn demands more material, and by communion with thoughts of the revealed word we behold as in a mirror and are transformed into the image of that of which we think until the age-old story of the Stone Face is again realized.

"For, as a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

When a man is a particularly insufferable bore, it's a sign it's about how he takes his exercise.

The chronic kicker doesn't do it altogether for exercise.

Meanwhile, what has become of the dirigible balloon? It does not seem to be making progress as fast as the aeroplanes. But perhaps the ideal air craft of the future will combine the stability of the improved gas bag with the speed and dirigibility of the aeroplane. One thing is certain: The fundamentals of navigating the air have been mastered. The aeroplane has come to stay and to be improved. No one who has seen the exhibitions already held at the Chicago aviation meet can doubt this. Flying for useful purposes as well as for sport is the next step in the swift development.

20 YEARS AGO IN OAKLAND

The police authorities decline to take any stock in the Dutton robbery, the details of which were given in last night's TRIBUNE. They say that to them it appears that the robbery, as related by Dutton, is an impossibility. Dutton said that the money was the result of his savings during the time that he was employed in the office of the state printer in Sacramento.

Among those who attended a pleasant ride given E. P. Vandercoft Monday evening were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Will Melvin, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Vandercoft, Mrs. Frank Swasey, George Mason, Miss Madge Williams, Miss May Hawley, Ernest Hough, Miss Grace Adams, Judge Melvin and George Hawley.

The engagement of Amos Vergin and Miss Ella Caldwell is announced. The wedding will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, 76 Oak street, on the night of September 1. Only the immediate relatives will be in attendance.

Thomas Francis Agnew and Miss Mary Elizabeth Garvin were married Wednesday morning at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

FROM MILLINERY TO MUSIC

Marvelous Changes Effected by Local Concern in Short Time.

From harmony of color to harmony of sound—that's what has happened at the Bacon block. Where once the Laymance millinery reigned supreme, the well-known music house of Kohler & Chase is now enthroned, and in the enthrone much extra area has been annexed and transformed into a veritable palace of music.

An eminent statistician once remarked: "A sure sign of a community's prosperity is the remodeling and refurbishing of its stores—for it means that the existing facilities are failing and have to do with existing business." That being so, Oakland must be in a prosperous condition indeed, for, in addition to the new and palatial stores that are being built on every side, many existing and, comparatively speaking, modern stores are being or have just been remodeled and refurbished. The latest example in Kohler & Chase's progressive way in the way they have remodeled and refurbished their new location in the Bacon building—it is a splendid sample what a modern music store should be and speaks volumes for their faith in Oakland's prosperity.

The world is full of paradoxes! On all sides the motor-driven vehicles are displacing the horse drawn, yet there are more horses in the world today than ever there were; in fact, the necessity for horses is such that the demand is greater than the supply. A few years ago pessimists proclaimed that concrete would soon entirely displace wood in building. The day of concrete is here, and yet, strange contradiction, more wood is being used in building today than at any time during human history. The very advent of concrete has increased the necessity for wood. The only difference is that, whilst in former years it was used as an actual part of the structure, today it has come into widespread use as a very handsome furnishing and finish. Our immediate forefathers were content with lath and plaster. We demand the addition of beautiful woods as an interior finish. This is strikingly illustrated by the rich woods used in the interior finish of Kohler & Chase's new music store in the Bacon block.

Few realize how rapidly modern conveniences and comforts have advanced. A few years ago four walls, a roof and a few showcases completed the equipment of the fittings for a piano store. Today paneled walls, polished floors, ornate rugs and private, comfortably furnished, sumptuous sitting rooms are a necessity; at least, that is true. Kohler & Chase have provided for the music loving public in their new store, situated in the Bacon block, to which central position they have just re-

FARMING TAUGHT IN GERMAN ARMY

Experiment Designed to Help Soldiers to Land After Service.

BERLIN. Aug. 26.—Far-reaching experiments are being made in the German army in teaching the soldiers both practical and theoretical farming during their service in the ranks. Many of the soldiers, even those from the cities, become so interested that when they have finished their term they take advantage of a law passed some years ago, by which they are enabled to purchase small plots of land by the payment in ready money of a quarter of its value. In this way it is hoped to stem the rush of people from the agricultural districts to the cities, which has caused so much anxiety to the authorities of recent years.

The Prussian State itself sells much of its reclaimed monastic lands in this manner, plots ranging from half an acre to twenty-five acres. It charges interest at the rate of only 3½ percent on three-quarters of the purchase money, and also advances money for the erection of houses and barns. The tenant may pay off as much as he likes every year, and after a certain number of years the property becomes his own. In some instances larger plots of land are acquired from private owners by the State and laid out in contiguous small farms, which are sold in similar manner to farmers. Thus, by a system of co-operative working, they are enabled to cultivate their land at a much cheaper rate than if they were working alone. The idea of the gradual purchase system is spreading rapidly through the government's efforts, and many rural districts, hitherto sparsely populated and poorly cultivated, are becoming thriving agricultural centers. The government has appointed 150 commissioners to assist in the purchase of real estate by ex-soldiers and thrifty workers.

$3.50 Recipe Free For Weak Men

Send Name and Address Today
You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth. I have cured many worn-out nervous men right in their own homes without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is a curative combination far above any concoction of deficient manhood and vigor I have ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow men to send them a copy of this recipe, that any man who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, what I believe to be the pick-a-boo action of the building. SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop a line to me, care of "The American Dyeing and Cleaning Works," 1254 Broadway, New York, N. Y., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain ordinary envelope free of charge to $3.50 or merely writing out a pre-

'AS YOU SMILED YOU WERE KNIFING ME IN THE BACK'

So Writes Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan to Governor Johnson, and He Comments on Amendments

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 26.—The letter addressed by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan "To the Veterans of California," to my friends especially and to Hon. Hiram W. Johnson, Governor of California, particularly, has excited much interest in political circles. The letter in full is given herewith:

I am aware of the dignity and consequences of the office of Governor and that it is for the best interest of the State for all officials to work in harmony. I also appreciate the importance of the great offices I hold and by a better title than does the present Governor of the State, his. An office, the business of which is vastly greater in volume and detail and much of it more important than that of the Governor's office. I entered upon the discharge of the duties of that office, moved to the heart, grateful to the voters of my native State, determined to make good. I was not chosen by any political faction nor by the aid of any organized or corporate interests. I won out in an independent fight.

I went to you, Governor, in all frankness and manliness, told you that I desired to have your assistance, and to assist you in every way to make your administration most creditable. Not once did I go, but thrice, and each time resolved from you assurances of friendship and a desire to co-operate, but Governor, while you smiled in my face you were knifing me in the back—pretending that you had no interest in matters of legislation affecting my office, you were sending to Senators and Assemblymen, my friends, and holding them up to assist you in your schemes of injustice and wrong. Giving your favorites all the assistance they asked for, you forced the clipping of my office. Senators and Assemblymen, not one but many of them came to me and told me how sorry they were to have to vote against my interests and my office and gave the reasons why and showed that you were using the powers of your office wrongfully.

MAKES VIGOROUS COMPLAINT.

Since the adjournment of the Legislature, on every possible occasion you and your henchmen and a subservient press have endeavored to misrepresent and injure me. When I called the attention of the Attorney-General to the difficulty I was experiencing in preparing the amendments for submission you designated it as "all rot." You know now that the condition these amendments are in is ROTEN. Instead of assisting me as you should in a matter so important, you, whenever opportunity offered, have been quick to say that which would put me in a wrong light. Instead of looking into the matter, coming yourself, or sending a representative to see what the situation really was, you stood aloof and talked up "Jobbery" and "or the rights of the people in jeopardy." In the Los Angeles Tribune of recent date you were credited with saying, "Today I received my first intimation of the matter (the effort to prevent the amendment going on the ballot). I think there is a job on foot to prevent the direct legislation amendment being submitted. Immediately on my arrival in Sacramento Sunday I will take the matter up." How cowardly and unfair, Governor. You knew when you said this that you had nothing to back up such an assertion or intimation.

I want now to say to my friends that my position here at the Capitol is most trying and undeserved so, but that I will continue to do my duty and not permit any man, no matter how high his office, to insinuate that I am blocking the way of progress or attempting to hinder in any way that which would advance the best interests of the State I love.

STUNG BY INFERENCE.

On Monday last, you, Governor, upon your return to the Capitol, after an absence of many days, in an interview concerning the submission of the constitutional amendments, said, "The time has gone by in the State of California when any officer could jockey official documents and thwart the will of the people." Stung to the quick by the inference, which was plain, and which placed me in an unjust light before the people, on Tuesday I gave to the press this statement: "The Governor of this State is reported to have said concerning the submission of the constitutional amendments to the people that the time has gone by in the State of California when any officer could jockey official documents and thwart the will of the people." The inference is plain and is resented by me. He should have added, in justice to this office, that such jockeying with public documents, however, cannot be done as far as the office of the Secretary of State is concerned and that fact is well known in the executive office. This is the third instance of my having been subjected to this treatment, and it is about time that contemptuous and belittling remarks concerning the efforts of a brother official endeavoring along the lines of official duty to correctly perform such duty should cease." And you are reported as having laughed heartily. Maybe if you had read between the lines carefully you would not have been so mirthful.

AMENDMENTS IDENTICAL.

In an evening paper of this city Tuesday night appeared this statement, by you:

"I am concerned only with the constitutional amendments and the special election of October 10. For two weeks I have been reading in the press that there would be no special election and that no constitutional amendments would be submitted to the people, because the exact phrasology of those amendments could not be ascertained. Here in front of me are the statutes of 1911, printed by the State of California. This volume is the official volume for the courts and the people of the State, and contained in it are those very constitutional amendments set forth in detail and printed exactly word for word and comma for comma."

"Secretary of the Senate Parrish says he certified them. The statutes have been in the hands of the bench and bar for more than a month past, and in order that this official volume might be printed, somebody had to know officially what the constitutional amendments were, and here they are, officially set forth."

"Sunday night on my arrival I found that it was asserted that the amendments were inextricably confused and could not be printed. This morning, I am pleased to say, the amendments will be printed, unless some other obstacle shall be created (and of course the people cannot obtain direct legislation without all sorts of opposition) the printing of the amendments will go forward as the law requires. The incident is closed and the great sensation of the past two weeks regarding the constitutional amendments is exploded."

The time has now arrived when my friends all over California should be given to understand how you, elected by those who boast of living up to the precepts of the Golden Rule, are acting and learn more particularly concerning this amendment difficult.

You say, "I am concerned only with the constitutional amendments and the special election of October 10." I, too, have been mighty deeply concerned. Basically you say, "Here are the statutes of 1911—this volume is the official volume of the courts and of the people of the State—and in it are embodied these very constitutional amendments set forth in detail, and printed exactly word for word and comma for comma as Secretary of the Senate Parrish says he certified them."

You know that these amendments, as set out in the statutes you referred to are here, because certified by the officials of the Legislature to you, as being the final action of each branch of the Legislature and your office officially notified the State Printer regarding each and directed their full publication.

"BLUNDERED AWFULLY."

You, and they, did not think that I would find the journals in such chaotic condition. Governor, on that last night you said, "No such record has ever been presented by any Legislature," that so didn't they blunder awfully? You did not think that I would find five important amendments spread on the journals of but one of the houses, and when you and your adherents heard of it, did you not again scour for decisions that would put you on the track again? Your ablest advisors said that your Legislature had erred miserably and that the failure to enter on the journals of both houses was fatal, and that Rule 24 of the Senate was not there to be disregarded. It meant just what Section 1 of Art. XVIII of the Constitution meant, should have been obeyed and these amendments printed in full. If these official directions are not to be followed, would it not be well to change the Constitution to say "entered" means only by title. Though I had been told that I must obtain "the exact language which received the approval of the requisite number of the members of the Legislature,"

"I thought, though, my attention had been called to Section 1 of Article 18 of the Constitution, requiring that all amendments "shall be entered in the journals of each branch of the Legislature, with the year and name taken thereon," thus making a sharp distinction as to the evidence that should be prescribed in the journals of each house when such evidence applied to the constitutional amendments. Did you, of your friends not succeed in having me again advised that "entries in journals which identify the constitutional amendments under consideration are a sufficient compliance with the provisions of Section 1 of Article 18 of the Constitution?"

How, in the name of Heaven, if they were not entered in full in both houses of the Legislature could I possibly ascertain the exact language which received the approval of the requisite number of the members of both houses?"

WANTS AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED.

A word more. I will say to your voters of California that I want these amendments submitted, as you do, Governor. I want the people to get at them. I, too, am in favor of the Initiative and Referendum, of the divided session, of nearly all the amendments, except, however, the recall amendment, not because of that in it which provides for the recall of officials generally, but because it endangers the independence of the judiciary. If the voters of this State will turn and read great veto message of President Taft, printed in the newspapers this State on August 19, read through completely, fully, with which he has finished it if they are not inspired with a greater love of the Legislature as shown by the journals," that "In the performance of this duty you should disregard any document certified to you by the officers of either branch of that body which is not in accordance with the facts of the official journals of that body."

I did, and what a mess I found! A pot of recklessness with inattention to duty, inefficiency, which, boiling over, ran even in the portal of the "Holy of Holies" of our State, where you, the "High Priest," sat, and in blissful ignorance of what was set before you wrote too much and too often, as the edicts of the Legislature show, and as the records sent to my office have too frequently shown the defects, in which, if not discovered by me and corrections made, would in the end have endangered the State's interests.

It was on the night of your arrival near the scenes, you didn't put in an appearance though that, despairing of getting from the story of that session what the journals actually showed, I turned again to the Attorney-General and asked for further advice, and he, with new light, directed me to go back to the beaten path while my predecessors had followed, proposed as they had proceeded, and, in doing so, I arrived at the same spot where I stood on the 11th of August, and was able to give the word on Tuesday to the State Printer, which I could have given on the 11th of August had it not been for the failure of the officials to properly attend to their duties.

HOLDS GOVERNOR RESPONSIBLE.

And right here I charge you and your adherents, because it is notorious that they do nothing without consulting you, with being responsible for the delay in the printing of these constitutional amendments, and with having "looked over" with these public documents. It is a fact that when my letter of August 11 was before the Attorney-General the opinion was first held that I must take my copy from the enrolled bills and in doing so must submit to Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 18 as enrolled and certified and chaptered by you to me, and ignore the enrolled copies of Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 5 and Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 2, certified to me after the Legislature had adjourned. Did not you and your friends, Governor, find yourselves in a dilemma; that to grasp one horn would be to have to go to the people and tell them not to vote for Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 18 because it had not received the approval of the Assembly and not to vote for Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 5 and Assembly Constitutional Amendment No. 2, because it had been made by the officers of the Legislature. In certifying and enrolling and filing with me, prepared either by you or under your direction or approved by you, after the Legislature adjourned, were not worth the paper they were printed on; that my duty was not to do as my predecessors had done—had been the practice in the past, to take my copy from the enrolled amendments, the most solemn declaration of the Legislature—but to go to the journals and therefrom obtain "the exact language that received the approval of the requisite num-

FAIR IN A DAY FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night; You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends ask her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it, it did all this in a night! It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which you can make at your own home, is as follows: Go to any drug store and buy an empty two-ounce bottle and also a one-ounce bottle of Kukux Compound. Pour one ounce of Kukux into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will furnish you with a most brilliant transparent lotion which removes all discolorations such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It is particularly wonderful on the neck and shoulders. If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, the prescription will immediately relieve that condition. It is equally good on the face, the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription, with just the same results that I have had."

Large Representation.

A special train conducted by Ignatian Council No. 35 left Third and Market streets at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, and upon its arrival in Santa Cruz was serenaded by the people of the city of the Holy Cross.

The largest crowds will journey to Santa Cruz this morning on the San Francisco excursion, which will leave Market and Townsend streets at 7:45 o'clock, and the Oakland excursion leaving First and Broadway at the same time. These trains, with the specials from Sacramento, Stockton and San Jose, will arrive in Santa Cruz in the neighborhood of 10:30 a. m., when a procession will be formed and march from the depot to the plaza in front of Holy Cross church, where a low mass will be celebrated, a feature of which will be the singing of the "Dirge" by the vast congregation, accompanied by a musical band of thirty pieces from California Council No. 24, Alameda.

NOVEL BASEBALL

At 2 p. m. a novel game of baseball will be played on the beach. Teams representing Ignatian Council No. 35 and California Council No. 24, attired in swimming suits, will strive for the championship of the aquatic league. During the afternoon, various council of the institute will hold a reception in the Casino ball room, a feature of which will be the respective headquarters. Ignatian Council will hold a reception in the Casino ball room, a feature of which will be the California Council No. 1, Young Ladies' Institute, and No. 7, Young Ladies' Institute, and No. 1, Young Men's Club of Dolores Institute.

Golden Gate Council No. 34, will have headquarters at the Sea Breeze hotel, and Valley Council No. 13, Mission Council No. 3, and Washington Council No. 11, will be at the St. George hotel.

Retiring members of St. Francis will leave at 6:45 and 7:30 o'clock p. m. Sunday. The Ignatian special will leave at 8:10 p. m.

MORE ARRESTS COMING.

The arrests were made after Korschak had made a statement implicating several businessmen in the alleged arson conspiracy. It is expected that other arrests will be made.

Dubostein is said to have induced Korschak to set fire to his place of business November 29, 1910, causing a loss of $15,000. The building was heavily insured.

The police also are said to be looking for Daniel Perry, brother-in-law and business partner of Bloom.

Korschak was charged with having set fire to the plant of Leopard and Lazard Dreyfus, which plant was damaged to the extent of $40,000. Lazard Dreyfus made a statement implicating Korschak and then committed suicide. Lazard Dreyfus was booked for conspiracy and the charge against him is still pending.

Korschak told the police that 75 per cent of all the fires which have occurred in Chicago in the last five years were of incendiary origin and were either the work of the proprietors of the buildings or of professional "fire-bugs." He says there are more than 100 men in Chicago who make a good living by setting fire to buildings to enable the owners to collect large sums of insurance.

8,896,000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT TOTALLY LOST

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 26.—Farmers of the United States needless to mention, threw away 8,896,000 bushels of winter wheat this year, not to mention enormous loss in other farm products, simply because they failed to prepare against the weather by taking steps to keep moisture in the soil. This is the declaration of Secretary John T. Burns of the International Dry-Farming Congress, who is now preparing to conduct the Sixth Congress, which meets in this city next October.

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 23.—State Printers announced today that the presses in the state printing office started today upon the printing of the proposed constitutional amendments.

The first press copy of the text of the proposed amendment was forwarded to the State Board of Control for comparison.

The State printer reiterated that the amendments and arguments would be turned out on time. As the copies come off the press they will be shipped to the county clerks, beginning with those of the more distant counties.

Shannon has made arrangements to run the presses continuously on three eight-hour shifts so as to get this work out on time.

OAKLAND NEWEST APARTMENT HOUSE

Many New Ideas Carried Out in Construction of Beautiful Building.

In this day and age it is seldom that people find anything new in the way of apartment construction that will cause them to stop and look. The perfectly wretched castle apartments that was opened to the public yesterday the unexpected has happened. People generally admit that nowhere in the world have there ever been erected an apartment house with so many special features included as has been installed in this new building.

The castle apartments are located at the corner of Piedmont and Eleventh Street, one of the most sought after parts of the Piedmont district, almost directly across the street from the pretty Key Route station, and on the two electric car lines, making it possible for the tenants to make the most of the shopping centers, Oakland and San Francisco, shopping centers, besides having stores of every description at a very convenient distance.

UNIQUE TELEPHONE SYSTEM.

On entering the building itself it is necessary for the visitor to read and follow the directions of a unique telephone system that connects with each apartment. After announcing who is at the door, the tenant, if he desires of having the caller enter, presses a button on her telephone and the door opens wide to let the guest enter. But if it is desired to have anyone come guest all that is necessary is to hang up the receiver, pay so far as the telephone bill, and the door remains closed and locked.

Once inside the visitor finds himself walking on rich velvet carpets of a Persian design and the general appearance of the lobby and furnishings gives the impress of elegance and refinement to the extreme. The halls are very light, having a constant stream of sunshine pouring in from some one of the many French windows, which are used freely for the purpose of hiding from view the garbage receivers, etc.

FUNCTION ARRANGEMENT.

The general arrangement of these apartments in a general way are the same in each case. In some cases they have been furnished, and like the halls, show elegance, taste and arrangement. The furniture being of Chinese pattern and finished in leather. Great care has also been shown in judgment in the choosing of the gas and electric fixtures. Another feature of great importance is that coming with each apartment there is a sleeping porch of fine proportions, it being possible for the tenant to let down the new Marshall Sterns portal beds either into the living room or by slight motion in a single step be turned about and can be let down into the sleeping porch. The castle apartment is the only apartment house in Oakland where the feature is found.

This writer suggests that for people who wish to live in an apartment house where the beauties and conveniences are indescribable that no better selection could be made than by selecting one of these beautiful apartments for a permanent home.

SAYS MISS FORCE FACES HARD FATE

Friend of Astor's Fiancee Commands Clergyman's Attack.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—The Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, rector of St. John's P. E. Church, who has publicly demanded from his pulpit that no minister perform the marriage ceremony uniting Col. John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeleine Talmage Force, has received hundreds of letters from all over the country, the great majority of which praise him. Five anonymous communications condemn the minister for the stand he has taken.

These letters come from persons in all walks of life. Miss Jennie Irwin Martin of New York, who has a summer home at Summer Beach, Conn., writes:

"Thank God there is one voice in our Episcopal pulpit raised in protest against this flagrant affair, which has become the topic of talk. Continue; cease not. You will do more moral and soul house-breaking than any other person in this church." These ambitious mothers are destroying the flowers of girlhood, and our young men are no longer shocked by girls in good society who act as chorus and variety girls do.

KNOWS MRS. FORCE.

The mother of Miss Force I have known since girlhood. I know the girl herself, and let me plead with you to keep up the good work and save this young girl from a awful fate."

Mrs. Martin was former president of the College Woman's Club of New York, and is a medical graduate of the City College. She is well known in New York social circles and has been a mission worker.

Mr. Richmond is proud of the sentiments expressed by the Rev. Patrick A. Ludden for twenty-two years Roman Catholic Bishop of Syracuse. Bishop Ludden says:

"Mr. Richmond had the courage of his convictions. The world set to work to shame him, and Mr. Force, his son-in-law, belongs, is without shame. There are no people in the world more depraved than the members of the '400.'

"Since Mr. Richmond left Syracuse he has kept up his great fight. When he was at my home in Randolph, N. J., Bishop Ludden said he was a little hard to manage, but an eminently able man. He still seems hard to control, but I don't think a little enthusiasm does any harm."

C. A. Wipper of 747 Fifty-third street, Brooklyn, a member of St. Martin's Church, begs of Dr. Richmond that he keep up the good work.

There are several hundred letters of similar purpose.

With regard to these letters Dr. Richmond remarked that "they made him tired."

"There are a lot of men," said Dr. Richmond, "who wish to see a good fight, but are afraid to take part in it themselves. They are like some of our 'pushy-footed' clergymen who are afraid to speak of the Astor-Force wedding from the pulpit. Commendation from such a source is of no value."

BISHOP WOULD BE RID OF HIM.

Dr. Richmond today made the charge that owing to his plain speaking Bishop Mackay-Smith has been endeavoring for some months to get him out of the diocese. He charged that Bishop Mackay-Smith sent for the accounting warden of St. John's Church, and informed the warden that "he had to get rid of Richmond."

"Richmond has opposed me," the Bishop is quoted as saying, "and I want him out of the church." The warden was informed the Bishop that the parish was in splendid shape and that Dr. Richmond was liked in the church.

Shortly after this Bishop Mackay-Smith wrote several letters to Dr. Richmond in which nothing but statements naturally came from the Bishop.

Some of these statements stigmatized Dr. Richmond as "crazy," a "hunch-nature," and he also said, "I shall do everything in my power to impede your power in the ministry. You are a man of great ability, but don't want you in my diocese. I am afraid of you."

Professor Edison has been engaged as the leader of the singing and will also render special solos. All men are invited to attend.

DIVORCEE 'ROASTS' MATINEE IDOL AS SELFISH

"He Always Thought $1 for Me and $25 for Himself
Was Liberal."

MRS. WESNER WRITES
HER OWN AFFIDAVIT

Says Living on Alimony at $25
a Week Is Difficult Proceedings.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—"Deponent desire to suggest that as Mr. Wesner thinks $25 a month is sufficient for anyone to live on, let him do it himself."

So wrote Mrs. Anna Wesner, former wife of A. Burton Wesner, character actor at the Alcazar theater, in an affidavit received by Judge John J. Van Nostrand today from Erie, N. Y.

That suggestion, together with many other interesting statements, is in the handwriting of Mrs. Wesner, written on the back of typewritten sheets in formal lawyers' language which purport to present a reply to the affidavit filed by Weller in his effort to have the alimony he must pay reduced from $25 a week to $20 a month. Apparently Mrs. Wesner was not satisfied with the colorless phraseology of her attorney, and insisted upon expressing her own human thoughts and feelings with pen and ink.

SAYS HUSBAND IS "CLOSE."

"Mr. Wesner's affidavit is characteristically selfish," she wrote. "He has always seemed to think that $1 for deponent to $25 for himself was a liberal allowance. According to Mr. Wesner's own statement, he is unable to get along on $25 a week and keep out of debt, yet he seems to be shocked that I should not be quite satisfied with $25 a month."

Referring to Burton Wesner's statement in his affidavit, that she was a dancing teacher when he married her, and is well able to support herself by her profession, Anna Wesner replies:

"The pursuit of health is expensive, and it had been only by denying myself some of the common necessities of life that I have been able to keep my expenditures within $25 a week."

Her health was failing, she declares, by the strain of the divorce proceedings following the ill treatment which impelled her to seek separation from her husband.

"Mr. Richmond had the courage of his convictions. The world set to work to shame him, and Mr. Force, his son-in-law, belongs, is without shame. There are no people in the world more depraved than the members of the '400.'

"Since Mr. Richmond left Syracuse he has kept up his great fight. When he was at my home in Randolph, N. J., Bishop Ludden said he was a little hard to manage, but an eminently able man. He still seems hard to control, but I don't think a little enthusiasm does any harm."

There are several hundred letters of similar purpose.

With regard to these letters Dr. Richmond remarked that "they made him tired."

"There are a lot of men," said Dr. Richmond, "who wish to see a good fight, but are afraid to take part in it themselves. They are like some of our 'pushy-footed' clergymen who are afraid to speak of the Astor-Force wedding from the pulpit. Commendation from such a source is of no value."

BISHOP WOULD BE RID OF HIM.

Dr. Richmond today made the charge that owing to his plain speaking Bishop Mackay-Smith has been endeavoring for some months to get him out of the diocese. He charged that Bishop Mackay-Smith sent for the accounting warden of St. John's Church, and informed the warden that "he had to get rid of Richmond."

"Richmond has opposed me," the Bishop is quoted as saying, "and I want him out of the church." The warden was informed the Bishop that the parish was in splendid shape and that Dr. Richmond was liked in the church.

Shortly after this Bishop Mackay-Smith wrote several letters to Dr. Richmond in which nothing but statements naturally came from the Bishop.

Some of these statements stigmatized Dr. Richmond as "crazy," a "hunch-nature," and he also said, "I shall do everything in my power to impede your power in the ministry. You are a man of great ability, but don't want you in my diocese. I am afraid of you."

STAYED AT HOTEL.

Wesner told of a letter received from Mrs. Wesner by a former friend of hers in San Francisco, who told him of it, in which the writer stated that she was staying at the Hotel Astor, and expected to get some money to enable her to remain there.

Judge Van Nostrand took the question of modifying the alimony order under advisement, promising an early decision in regard to whether Wesner will have to continue the payment of $25 a week, with the alternative of punishment for contempt of court if he should fail.

COATESVILLE, Pa., Aug. 26.—Mrs. Annie Rice, widow of the policeman who was shot by Zach Walker, the negro who was taken from the Coatesville Hospital and burned to death while still shackled to the hospital cot, in speaking about the tragic death of her husband, and of the lynching, said:

"Oh that they had only permitted me to accompany them to the stake. I wanted to apply the match. I wanted to see him burn. He killed my husband. He took the life of the best man and the kindest father who ever lived. It is terrible for me to say, that I am glad Walker is dead, but I must speak as I feel."

"I knew nothing of the lynching until I heard the crowd pass my house. It sounded like a great roar, and then I knew that trouble was brewing. I did not recognize any one, but they held me in the house and would not permit me to join them. I begged to be allowed to go along, but they said, 'No, Mrs. Rice, you stay here.'

"I heard the noise as the crowd took

BOY TELLS HORRORS OF BURNING OF NEGRO LYNCHERS WAIT TRIAL FOR MURDER

Two Youths Turn State's Evidence and Divulge Revolting Details of Crime.

While Victim Writhe in Agony His Captors Hold Him on Flames.

WESTCHESTER, Pa., Aug. 26.—The inside story of the lynching of Zach Walker, the negro who was burned alive at Coatsville on Sunday night, August 13, was revealed in all its horrors today. During the hearings of the eight boys and men who were arrested as participants in the outrage held before S. M. Paxson, justice of the peace at Westchester, two of the defendants took the stand and laid bare the secrets of the lynching. They were Norman Price, 20 years old of Thorndale, Pa., and Chester Bostick, 19 years of age, whose parents reside in Marietta, Pa. They have turned state's evidence and they assert under oath that they do not expect to have any clemency shown them.

CLERGYMAN AMONG LYNNERS.

All of the defendants were remanded back to the county jail, on a charge of murder to await the action of the grand jury which will consider the cases the latter part of next week.

Those who are now branded as having been among the men who burned Walker alive are: Price, Bostwick, Oscar Lamping, a former clergyman, fireman and policeman of Coatsville; William Gilbert, Captain Albert Berry, an itinerant aeronaut who made his home recently in Coatsville; Joseph Schwartz of Coatsville, George Stahl, 16 years old of Marietta, Pa., and Joseph Schofield of Parkersburg.

Bostick related the details of the lynching in a matter-of-fact way, but this recital thrilled the crowd that was in the office of Squire Paxson to hear the testimony.

HORRORS OF BURNING.

"I tried to get close to the fire while Walker was being burned alive. There were only one or two in front of me and I could see what was going on. I walked around the fire and saw the expression on the face of the negro. He stretched out his neck and moaned. His face was down in the fire and all of a sudden he jumped out and tried to get away. He crawled toward the fence of the Newlin farm and tried to jump over it."

"They hit him with fence rails and pushed him back into the fire. No, I do not know who hit him. He crawled out again and then they put a rope around him and stretched him out until he was dead. They kept his face in the fire. Then I got sick and left."

More Indian Land Soon to Be Sold

Unallotted Tracts Will Net Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes Over $20,000,000.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Aug. 26.—When on three different dates between now and the first of February, 1912, the United States Government will sell 2,378,000 acres of land belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, the last of the unallotted lands of these tribes, together with over a million acres originally intended as a forest reserve, will have passed from the control of the war department and gone to their white brothers. Over $20,000,000 will be realized for the members of these tribes from the sale.

Terrible Destroyer For Canal Defense

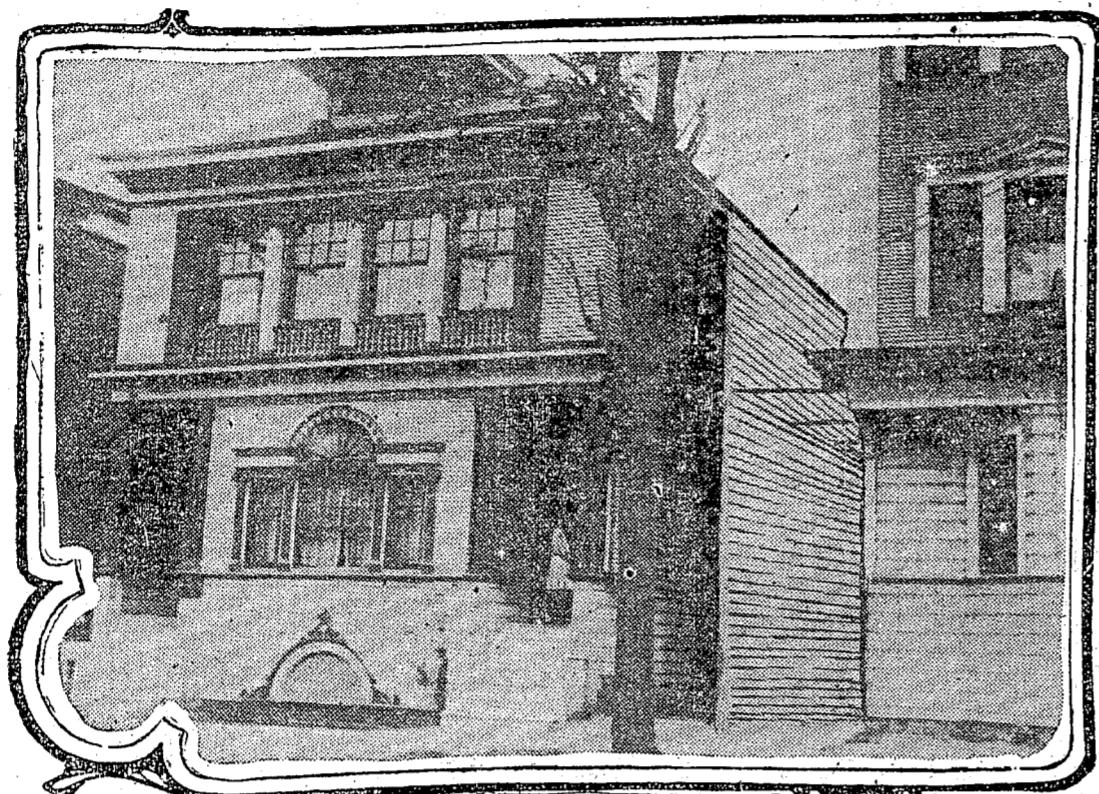

Most Powerful Piece of Ordnance in World May Man Fortifications.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Aug. 26.—The big 16-inch gun on the coast defenses here may be taken away by the war department to become a part of the defenses of the Panama canal, according to advices received by army officers. The gun has been shown by official tests to be the most powerful piece of ordnance in the world. At its extreme it will send a 2400-pound projectile through the thickest armor known to naval construction and then explode a charge equal to 140 pounds of the highest explosive.

TO HONEYMOON AMONG THE STARS

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beck Will Go Aeroplane High Up in the Air.

Bride Gets Aviation Fever and Urges Wedding Trip in Cloudland.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Honey-moon by aeroplane is the plan of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beck who left this city today for Conneaut Lake, Pa. It is not a theatrical aviation, according to which they are starting out before the end of the week their biplane will be assembled and they will be sailing in the upper altitudes, skirting clouds and dodging stars until their gasoline gives out and they will have to volplane to earth only to start again when the fuel has been replenished.

Mrs. Beck has still to make her initial flight but her husband is declared to be one of the most skillful and daring of all aviators in the country and it was the young woman's idea that aviation be included in their honeymoon.

CALLS HIS PROMISE.

Mrs. Beck was not enthusiastic when the young man to whom she was engaged first took up aviation, but seeing him take several successful flights she, too, became the victim of the flying fever and begged to be taken for a trip. Beck refused, saying he did not like to take the risk, so they compromised, the young woman promising not to ask to be taken as a passenger until after their marriage. They were married last Wednesday and Mrs. Beck at once reminded her husband of his promise. Beck is under contract with a Washington firm which has made millions of contracts for him to make flights during the next few months in the south.

The bride will accompany him on his trip and he has promised that she shall be a passenger on one of his trips.

FRIENDLY SUIT BY SUTRO HEIRS

Court to Be Asked to Interpret Clauses of Will Left by Pioneer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—A friendly suit was filed today by heirs of the late Adolph Sutro to get a court determination that will enable the executrix to roll out the wishes of the pioneer. Joseph E. M. B. and Neptali B. Greenfeld, the complainants, are nephews of Adolph Sutro and demand $500 each, with interest, from August, 1898.

The clause in the will on which a court interpretation is asked bequeathes a sum to each of the children shown on the family tree that was compiled before Sutro's death. Mrs. Emma Merritt, the executrix, pleads that she cannot identify the document referred to as the family tree, and requests a judicial determination to authorize her to pay the bequests asked.

Tenant Refuses to Vacate House Shut Out From Rays of Sun

Dr. J. S. Green who occupies the premises owned by John D. Frederickson at 907 Grove street declared last night that he would remain on them in spite of the "spite fence" which was built several days ago by M. Goldstein, the owner of adjoining property. Goldstein, who lives at 831 Castro street, purchased the lot and house next to that of Frederickson some time ago and erected the fence it is reported to prevent the tenants of Frederickson from receiving sunlight in their rooms. Dr. Green says that rather than see Goldstein profit from the building of the fence he will remain where he is as Frederickson's tenant, light or no light.

Goldstein on his part claims that Frederickson's building sets upon his land to a small extent and that upon a refusal to move it he erected the fence, which rises to a height of 24 feet.

"I do not intend to recede from the stand I have taken," Goldstein said last night, "and if anything I will build the fence higher." There is supposed to be an alleyway of 2 feet and 6 inches between the two houses and this Frederickson has violated, so the fence will remain.

This matter went along all right until Goldstein got hold of the property about a year ago," said Doctor Green, "and then trouble commenced. For the present I have arranged to get light from other sources and will be little effected by the fence."

At any rate the fence is there and whatever the complications, it is likely to remain for some time.

WANT CONVENTION ON COAST IN 1915

Oakland Delegates to National Banking Institute Will Start East Tuesday.

Frank M. Cerini, delegate at large, and A. E. Caldwell, delegate for Oakland Council of the American Institute of Banking, will leave Tuesday for Rochester to attend the national convention of the organization September 6 to 10, inclusive.

Cerini, who is a member of the national council, will, before his return, visit chapters at Salt Lake, Denver, Chicago, Detroit and Rochester.

Both Cerini and Caldwell will use every endeavor to have the convention meet in San Francisco in 1915.

The Oakland chapter will elect officers tomorrow evening. The nominating committee has presented a ticket which includes president, Lester H. Heacock; secretary, George W. Lalloway; treasurer, J. Ernest Smith; board of governors, Robert D. Corbett, J. J. Flynn, Theodore Jenkins and C. N. Walters.

An amendment to the constitution will be voted upon at the election providing for the abolishing of the clause stating that bank officers who are members of the Oakland chapter are not eligible to hold office in the chapter, but any member occupying an office in the chapter who shall become a bank officer during his incumbency shall retain his office for the remainder of his unexpired term.

The clause in the will on which a court interpretation is asked bequeathes a sum to each of the children shown on the family tree that was compiled before Sutro's death. Mrs. Emma Merritt, the executrix, pleads that she cannot identify the document referred to as the family tree, and requests a judicial determination to authorize her to pay the bequests asked.

TAFT BEGINS RE-ELECTION FIGHT

Insurgents and Democrats Are Scored for Jockeying With the Tariff Question.

Unparalleled Ignorance of Effects of Vicious Legislation Displayed.

HAMILTON, Mass., Aug. 26.—President Taft, fired his first political gun in behalf of his own re-election in 1912 and the Massachusetts state republican candidates in the next November election, here today, at a rally of the Essex County Republican Club at Sagamore, Representative Gardner's home. Among those present were Senators Lodge, Former Senator Warner of Missouri, and Lieut. Governor Frothingham of Massachusetts, and John Hays Hammond. About 800 republicans attended.

President Taft made a strictly republican speech. Discussing the record of the late special session of congress, he attacked the democratic majority in the house and the democratic-insurgent republican majority in the senate for what he termed "playing politics." His own language:

"TARIFF FOR POLITICS ONLY."

"The tariff bills bear internal evidence that they rested on a basis of not 'tariff for revenue only,' but 'tariff for politics only.'

"The democrats and insurgent republicans did 'play politics' of the most irresponsible character in respect to those tariff bills.

"The entry in the history of the government, you will find, has been dealt with in such a light-hearted way, with such absolute ignorance of the effect of legislation and with such willingness to sacrifice business interests to political exigencies as in the present legislation, which has just been defeated."

WOMAN BADLY HURT IN FALL FROM CAR

While alighting from a San Pablo avenue car at Standford avenue last evening, Mrs. M. J. Easter, 802 Turk street, San Francisco, fell in such a manner that she suffered severe internal injuries. She was removed to the Receiving Hospital for temporary treatment and later to her home. She claimed that the car started before she stepped to the pavement. The car was in charge of Motorman D. F. Card and Conductor S. G. Thomas.

BAD ACCIDENT MARS TAHOE AUTO TOUR

Three Oakland Women Narrowly Escape Death When Car Skids and Overturns.

Sixteen of Eighteen Contestants Run With Perfect Scores First Day.

(By J. A. HOULIHAN.)

COLFAX, Calif., Aug. 26.—When the end of the first day's run on the annual Take Tahoe tour with eighteen entries as starters from Oakland checked in this evening at Colfax and Auburn, one-half of the party were forced, because of inadequate accommodations at Auburn, to continue on to Colfax, where they are registered for the night. A number of exciting incidents served to make the initial day's run one to be long remembered by the participants. Late tonight on the last lap run from Oakland to Colfax, a large touring car driven by Mr. Surdar, a Seattle motorist touring from the Puget Sound city to Baltimore and accompanied by his wife with Mrs. A. S. Rhoades, wife of A. S. Rhoades of the Diamond Rubber Co., and Mrs. J. A. Houlihan of Oakland as the other occupants, skidded on a wet portion of the Auburn-Colfax road. The steering knuckle broke and the car overturned throwing the three women clear of it and pinning the driver, Surdar, to his seat. Fortunately for all the car was traveling at a slow clip at the time. This alone averted possible fatalities. Other than a severe shaking up all 16 escaped unharmed and tomorrow will continue the remainder of the journey. The car is wrecked beyond immediate repair.

NOBLEMAN TO COME WEST TO LEARN AMERICA

TIME RAVAGES RANKS OF G. A. R.

Last Parade That Will Probably Ever Be Held Feature of Annual Session.

Women of West Are Strength of Auxiliaries and Are Appointed to Office.

(By MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Probably the last parade of the G. A. R. was held in this city this week. Each year there is a sad thinning of the ranks of the men who saved the country half a century ago and those who marched this week showed practically the ravages of time.

Aside from this the most striking feature of the recent encampment to me was the splendid women sent by the West to take part in the various auxiliaries of the G. A. R. They have the energy, the executive ability and the will to give powerful aid in carrying out the aims of the Grand Army.

In recognition of this an Oregon woman, Mrs. Cora A. Davis, of Union, Oregon, was chosen to head the National Woman's Relief Corps and a Colorado woman was elected national president of the Ladies of the G. A. R. She is Mrs. Catherine Ross of Denver. Mrs. Rose E. Houghton was chosen junior vice-president and Mrs. India Ward of Colorado secretary.

STRENGTH OF WEST.

Finer selections could not have been made. They bring the strength and freshness of the West to their work and these splendid organizations can not but flourish under their administration.

The younger women of the West also are doing their share. There was no abler delegate in Rochester this week than Miss Anna Myrtle Kelly of Pueblo, Colo., who is visiting the national president of the Daughters of Veterans. I do not recall any organization in which the work of the women is more heartily recognized and more highly appreciated than the G. A. R. From the first the old soldiers have recognized the fact that the wives and mothers bore the brunt of the great war to fully as great a degree as the men in the field and a woman has always been a power in the work of the G. A. R. These fine women from the West have fully measured up to the standard.

Miss Whitney to Wed Straight in September

Daughter of Late Former Secretary of Navy Plans Quiet Family Affair.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 26.—Miss Dorothy Whitney, youngest child of the late William C. Whitney of New York, and Willard D. Straight, will be married in the American church September 7. There will probably be a civil marriage performed by Francis K. Keen, the American consul here.

The wedding will be very quiet, almost entirely a family affair. According to present plans there will be no boudoirs or a best man. The entire wedding party, including Mrs. Alice E. Pegeat and Harry Payne Whitney will arrive there on September 4th. Two floors in the hotel will be reserved for them. Miss Whitney personally made all the arrangements. She even entered the wedding feast for twenty. The whole party will leave here on the night of September 2, but it is not decided yet where they will go. When the engagement was announced Harry Payne Whitney said it was certain that the wedding would be in September. Mr. Straight must hasten back to China.

Negro's Pockets Are Lined With Gold Coin

Police Chief Suspicious of His Story That Money Complicates Farm Wages.

ALEXANDRIA, W. Va., Aug. 26.—Edward Johnson, a negro, who was arrested by Chief of Police Good, following the discovery that his pockets were a veritable gold mine, has been commanded to jail to remain there until an investigation of Johnson's story can be made. The negro who is $200 in gold, asserted that it was a portion of wages he had received while working on a ranch at Bakersfield, Cal., from which place he was returning to his home in Culpepper county, Va. The chief, who was not inclined to believe the man's story, locked him up. A telegram was sent to the California ranch has not yet been replied to.

Torpedo Boats Back From Astoria Trip

VALLEJO, Cal., August 26.—Several torpedo boats of the Pacific fleet arrived at the Mare Island navy yard today from Astoria where they took part in the Centennial celebration. The boats will receive minor repairs at the yard and take on supplies preparatory to sailing with the Pacific fleet to Honolulu on September 15. On returning from the Hawaiian Islands the flotilla goes to San Diego for target practice, which begins on November 1.

SUFFRAGE TALKED AT HAYWARD CLUB

Mrs. S. C. Borland of Oakland Pleads for Adoption of Amendment No. 8.

HAYWARD, Aug. 26.—Mrs. S. C. Borland, secretary of the Oakland Suffrage Amendment League, addressed the Fairview Club this evening on the equal suffrage issue, pleading for the ballot for women if politics were to be cleansed. The speaker dwelt upon the influence mothers would have in public education questions. "As a rule, women can see more clearly than men," said Mrs. Borland.

Thomas Nissen, president of the club, presided. Among those present were Mrs. H. S. Walker, an officer of the organization, H. E. Heckman and Herman G. Mattern.

Before the address by Mrs. Borland, the officers of the club disposed of considerable routine business, it being the regular monthly gathering.

PASTORS DISCUSS EQUAL SUFFRAGE

Series of Addresses to Be Delivered Before Richmond Organizations.

RICHMOND, Aug. 26.—The subject of woman's suffrage was presented before the members of the Ministers' Union at their regular meeting yesterday by John S. Cato, following which the issue was discussed by the ministers present.

In addition, Cato spoke to the women of the First Methodist Episcopal church in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Garrard, and in the evening to the members of the local Teamsters' Union, Acantha Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at A. O. U. W. hall and the local Red Men in Bank hall.

The addresses are being made before these various gatherings under the auspices of the Suffrage League of this city, which is affiliated with the Clubwomen's Franchise League of San Francisco. Cato will, during the coming week, make an effort to speak during the noon hour to the employees of the various factories and shops here.

MARTINEZ TAX RATE TO BE FIXED AT 75¢

MARTINEZ, Aug. 26.—The local trustees, who have been in session for the last two weeks as a Board of Equalization, will conclude their labors Monday evening, and on Tuesday evening will fix the tax rate for the coming year. While there has been no authoritative announcement made by the board, individual members have stated that the rate will be fixed at 75 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, the same as last year.

CHANGING THE ROUTE OF ELECTRICAL LINE

PLEASANTON, Aug. 26.—Extensive power line of the Spring Valley Water Company at San Pleasanton water plant are under way. The company is changing the poles to a point directly north of the pump house on the road and running direct to the station from there.

BRENTWOOD PERSONALS

BRENTWOOD, Aug. 26.—Miss Ruth Pemberton is visiting in San Francisco. Miss Allen is taking a vacation on the coast.

Mrs. Guy Galenbeck and stepson returned from San Francisco Monday.

Mrs. H. T. McNamara and daughter, Genevieve, returned from a month's visit in Santa Cruz last week.

The election of the officers of the student body of the Liberty Union High school was held Friday afternoon of last week. The successful candidates were: President, Miss Esther Dainty; vice-president, Ray Goodwin; secretary, Miss Jessie Johnson; treasurer, Miss Myra Pearce; student member of the executive committee, Harold Collins; faculty member of executive committee, Miss Utt.

DeWitt Bily, bartender, after holding a week's services in the Methodist Church, returned to his home in San Jose on Monday. Six children joined the church on probation during the services.

Mrs. Bock of San Francisco is visiting Mrs. P. Olson.

Mrs. Pemberton and daughter, Miss Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Richardson and DeWitt Richardson spent a week or ten days in Santa Clara county on a hunting trip. Nine deer rewarded the efforts of the party.

Mrs. F. R. Green has been suffering severely from an abscess on her upper jaw for about a week, but is improving. Miss Utte spent Sunday at her home in Berkeley.

Mr. Bargerter of Los Angeles has arrived and will take charge of the department of the engineering course lately started in the High school.

Mrs. A. Burness and Christine and Howard Burness were in San Jose Tuesday, where Miss Christine will attend the College Park Academy.

A hunting party, including the families of Archie and Ray Bonnickson and Miss Eva Bonnickson left for the Santa Cruz mountains last week.

Miss Margaret White went to Stockton Tuesday to make her home there and attend Head's Business College.

Miss Taylor returned to Stockton to visit over Sunday.

Miss Elaine Wallace gave an informal embroidery party last Saturday afternoon.

Willie Morgans returned to the College of the Pacific last Saturday.

Mrs. Helm has been ill for more than a week.

George Nunn spent the week end in Oakland with his wife, who is visiting relatives there.

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD DANCE

HAYWARD, Aug. 26.—The social dance given by Hayward Lodge, Fraternal Brotherhood, last night was huge success, and many visitors from neighboring towns were present. It was held in the Bank of Hayward hall. Those on the arrangements committee were: Frank Jade Jr., chairman; William Clark, Mads Madsen, Edward Dale, John Ravano and E. M. Johnson.

PREDICTS BIG FUTURE FOR RICHMOND MAYOR TELLS OF DEVELOPMENT PLANS

MAYOR JAMES C. OWENS of Richmond, who predicts a great future for the oil metropolis.

New Harbor Improvements Will Be Undertaken at Once at Estimated Cost of Nearly $1,000,000

RICHMOND, Aug. 26.—"Richmond is destined to be one of the foremost cities on the Pacific coast." This is the belief of Mayor James C. Owens, this city's recently chosen chairman of the city council, who is one of the most consistent boosters which Richmond has and who has for a number of years been one of the leaders in every activity which has made for the betterment of this city and this vicinity.

"We feel we have a place of wonderful possibilities here, with a great natural harbor and unrivaled sites for manufacturers, and believe, with the get-together spirit which we now have, that there is nothing we cannot hope for. There was a time when we were hardly conscious of our possibilities and failed to make the most of opportunities. That time is past. We are wide awake and on the job every minute when it comes working for civic development. Any one not convinced of this has only to come here and see where we stand in comparison with where we were even five years ago."

"Just at present we are working in several different directions, on the project of our inner harbor, for parks and playgrounds throughout the city, and on our streets. The first matter looms up most prominently in the eyes of the world, naturally, for that has to do with our relations with the outside world, but the other activities are equally important in their way."

WONDERFUL HARBOR SCHEME.

"As for our harbor scheme, we feel we have a wonderful thing there. We possess a naturally deep inner harbor, which only needs to be put into perfect condition. Look at the vicinity of the Santa Fe mole; there is not a bit of dredging had to be done to allow deep water vessels to land; all they had to do was to build their wharf out into the bay a few feet. In our new project we plan to spend anywhere between $700,000 and $1,000,000 as a result of which we will have one of the finest harbors to be found anywhere, with a depth of twenty feet for the present, and thirty feet at some not very remote date."

"The project also includes the development of a large section of waterfront which will be available for wharfing and factory sites. We plan to pay for these improvements in large part ourselves by a bond issue, which will probably be for $500,000. Then we expect to ask the federal government for the balance, and feel that we should secure its help, for spite of the fact that we have a port which ships the second largest amount of freight of any port on the coast, second only to San Francisco, we have never received any government aid for our waterfront. And we believe we will get it."

KNOWLAND TO HELP.

"We have already enlisted the aid of Congressman Knowland, have prepared and forwarded data as to our shipping to Colonel Goethals in Washington, and have taken up the matter with Colonel Thomas Rees, who is now in charge of our harbor improvement on the coast, and feel confident that we have secured his co-operation. Colonel Rees went over the land with some of us only the other day, and is to come over again, probably next week, when he will make a further extended survey of our resources upon which we rely in large part for the aid of the government. That aid will not amount, in all probability, to more than an appropriation of $350,000, which we fully believe we are entitled to have and will get."

WANT PORT OF ENTRY.

"We expect to have this harbor in perfect condition by 1915, and in the meantime one of the first things we are going to do is to work to make Richmond a port of entry. At the same time we are working to bring steamship companies here for terminals and to get as many manufacturing plants as we can. As to the first proposition, representa-

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR WATER MAINS

Upper Fruitvale Progressives Celebrate Dawn of Better Fire Protection.

UPPER FRUITVALE, Aug. 25.—A meeting of the Hopkins Street Improvement club was held this evening in the Henry Thompson hall in celebration of the breaking ground on Upper Fruitvale avenue for the laying of eight-inch water mains to Peralta avenue by the People's Water company. Officials of the organization were informed that on Monday a large gang of workmen would commence the digging of the trenches. This morning ground was broken by surveyors to mark where the work should commence.

With the laying of a six-inch main on Peralta avenue to School street, by the Union Water company, there now only remains the northern end of School street to be piped to make it possible, with the installation of sufficient fire hydrants, for this section of the annexed district to have sufficient water supply for ample fire protection. Fire Chief Ball today promised a delegation from the club that when the water mains are completed the necessary hydrants will be installed.

The water committee and the fire hydrant committee of the Hopkins Street Improvement club will make a canvass of the property owners along the northern portion of School street as a preliminary step to having the water company lay mains. Following is the former committee: E. Bardelein, M. Carlson, A. S. Watson, and C. S. King. The fire hydrant committee consists of F. W. S. Brookes, J. R. Mulrooney, E. C. Drewes and Albert Rhoda.

With the completion of the water system in this section it is confidently believed that the insurance rate will be materially lowered and that in certain territory where insurance of any kind has been refused, the insurance companies will acquiesce to the demands of the property owners.

BAY POINT NOTES

BAY POINT, Aug. 26.—Ed. Crunkhite has been confined to his bed several days this week.

Miss Margaret Siemon is preparing to go to the San Jose Normal and will probably leave on September 15.

The steamer Nann Smith came to her berth at the dock Monday with 16,000,000 feet of lumber from Oregon. Superintendent Erickson discharged the steamer in thirteen hours. Redondo brought a big cargo from the north. Both cargoes later left for the north.

C. A. Smith of the C. A. Smith Lumber Company, who resided at Minneapolis, has moved with his family to Berkeley. This permits him to be nearer his business in Bay Point and Marshfield, Ore.

Mr. Smeathin, general manager of C. A. Smith Lumber Company of Bay Point and Marshfield, Ore., has moved from the latter place to Berkeley.

The band concert given by the Bay Point brass band was greatly enjoyed Sunday afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Maloney of Warren, Mass., who have been visiting Mrs. W. B. McGuire on Hadem street, left yesterday for Los Angeles. Dr. Maloney was instructor in physiology and of clinics for a number of years at the Universal Chiropractic College at Davenport, Iowa.

The Glee Club will entertain the people of Bay Point in the First Congregational church on Wednesday, August 30.

The entertainment is musical and will be in charge of Mr. Berglund, superintendent of the C. A. Smith Lumber Company. The program is to begin at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Margaret and Anna Siemon spent Sunday autoing around the bay cities.

Mrs. Cook, wife of the Santa Fe operator, has left for a two months' sojourn in Los Angeles.

Mr. Hale spent several days the past week in San Francisco.

The O. and A. railway is moving the track from the present location north towards the Santa Fe main line about 100 feet, which does away with the present bad curve.

Some people, up and down the state, have made a lot of fuss about the importance of the place, and yet it is a fact which I have authoritatively that the construction of the whole place will not cost as much as the repairs to the plant here, of which almost no mention has been made.

SANTA FE IMPROVEMENTS.

"The Santa Fe, too, has in prospect improvements to its yards here which will mean the expenditure of a large amount of money and the employment of many men. This is not to mention the car shops at Fullman, which is not now a part of Richmond, but is likely to be, and which will add another big plant to the many Richmond boasts."

"We are constantly preparing for all this growth, not alone in the bonding scheme for our harbor, but in plans for the improvement and beautification of our city which we believe its future demands. At the last meeting of our city council plans were discussed for a bond issue of $150,000 for the purchase of land for parks, playgrounds, and in all probability that body will act favorably upon the scheme at its next meeting and steps will be taken to put the proposition up to the people for a bond election.

NO BONDED INDEBTEDNESS.

"Up to the present time this city has had no bonded indebtedness, which is a remarkable thing for a place of the sort, and which enables us to contemplate these many improvements. We have already done much, for we have already spent in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 upon street improvements alone, but, to me, more to do more, and to spend at least that much again within a short time, in fact, most of it within the next year.

"It may seem to some who do not understand conditions here that we are proceeding too rapidly, doing too much, counting too much on what the future will bring forth. I do not believe so. The truth of the matter is I believe we have not the faintest conception of what the future means to us here, with the opening of the Panama canal."

"I believe the completion of that piece of work will mean for us more than our fondest dreams ever thought of, and will bring to the communities about the bay opportunities which, if seized, will revolutionize the entire Western Pacific country and make it one of the richest sections on the face of the globe."

WANT PORT OF ENTRY.

"We expect to have this harbor in perfect condition by 1915, and in the meantime one of the first things we are going to do is to work to make Richmond a port of entry. At the same time we are working to bring steamship companies here for terminals and to get as many manufacturing plants as we can. As to the first proposition, representa-

200 NAMES ARE ON PETITION

San Leandro Campaign for Closed Postoffice Sunday Is Ended.

SAN LEANDRO, Aug. 26.—The campaign which has been carried on by the Presbyterian and Methodist church circles in this place to get signatures on a petition requesting the postal authorities to authorize local Sunday closing is over and the efforts of Rev. Monroe Drew, of the Presbyterian Church, who has been one of the most ardent workers in the cause, will be concentrated first in Hayward and later in San Lorenzo and Elmhurst.

Nearly 200 names are appended to the local petition, the names being mostly those of business men. A meeting will be called in Hayward sometime next week to raise interest in the movement and later a house-to-house canvass for signatures will be made. No definite plans for activities in San Lorenzo have as yet been adopted.

When sufficient names have been appended to the petitions they will be forwarded to the postal officials at Washington.

LIVERMORE NOTES

LIVERMORE, Aug. 26.—Thomas Camel is spending a few days in Oakland and San Francisco.

Charles A. McClain left Wednesday for a two months' stay in the East via the Western Pacific to Ohio, where he will visit at his old home, then on to New York.

The Newell family are entertaining Wright Lynn of Hollister.

Alfred and Otto Olsen of San Francisco are enroute a visit with their uncle, Harry Meyer of James Galway and wife of Aberdeen, Wash., are enjoying a visit with the former's parents, John and Mrs. Galway.

Mr. J. B. Bell and children are enjoying a week in San Francisco the guests of relatives.

Dr. and Mrs. S. L. Savage are entertaining Mrs. Frederick Cook and little son Boston Lee.

Mrs. Dorothy Stanley is home again after a very pleasant visit with friends in San Francisco.

Miss Gertrude Thomas has as her guest for several weeks Mrs. Joseph Phillips of San Francisco.

Miss May Kelly is staying for three weeks.

Mrs. Leander Stanley is in Indiana visiting her parents.

Miss Dorothy Stanley has as her guest for three months.

John E. Moran has left for Maricopa after a very pleasant visit with her friend, Mrs. Frank Glass.

Services will be held every Saturday with Charles Pope of Vallejo.

Postmaster Frank L. Glass left this morning for a two days' business trip to Alamo and San Ramon.

Charles Pope of Vallejo is spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hauser.

P. H. Soto, postmaster of Concord, was a visitor in Martinez Monday, accompanied by Joseph Williams, Jr.

Dr. W. L. Moore of Antioch spent Sunday at Martinez.

P. H. Soto, postmaster of Concord, was a visitor in Martinez Monday, accompanied by Joseph Williams, Jr.

Frank Milliff is spending the day at Concord.

Frank Milliff is spending the day in San Francisco.

Henry T. Jones was here this morning from Oakland.

John Merle went to Pittsburg this morning to visit with relatives.

Supervisor Vince Hook was a visitor at the county seat Wednesday.

ABLES SHOWS GREAT SKILL AND FANS THIRTEEN ANGELS

Oaks Field and Bat in Magnificent Style and Win Ninth Straight Engagement

FIGHTING OAKS AGAIN DEFEAT ANGELS IN GREAT GAME

Wolverton, Coy, Tiedemann and Mitze Win With Timely Hitting.

By BERT LOWRY.

Oakland won her ninth game in a row yesterday when Wolverton's bunch walked off the field with their fifth straight game of the series from the Angels. It was a real live-wire ball game that the Oaks and Angels put up, and it was a grand exhibition of pitching that Harry Ables and Jack Halla presented to the fans. One Harry Wolverton might be called the star of that game, and so might it be for "easy" Hoffmann, Clyde Wares, George Cutshaw, Ett Coy, John Tiedemann and Carlo Mitze. Every man on the Oaks' line up tried might and main to beat the mighty Jack Halla and because the fighting, dashing, trying all the time spirit was there is why they won.

As for Henry Berry's outfit, it is said that they too played bang up ball and while they made two bobbles neither of those bobbles had a bit to do with the game. Every run the Oaks made was earned, earned good and right for the hitting that sent them to the plate was clean and hard and no man can say Ables had luck or that Halla had luck or ill luck.

The big Angel weakened a wee bit in the ninth inning and then he weakened again in the thirteenth. That's why he lost.

OAKS MAKE A GRAND RALLY.

Like a couple of Killkenny Cats fought the two teams. Oakland all the more valiant, for their work was harder. Those pesky Angels were shamming. Ables good and plain, excellent support was needed to keep him out of a hole. He got that excellent support and chipped in occasionally himself with a fine flash of the pill shooting art.

In the sixth inning Ables faltered and Los Angeles sent a runner scurrying to the plate. Heitmann had faced the big fellow and gone back to the bench because he failed to meet the ball at all.

Bert Delmas, always a dangerous hitter, next to the box went and skinned one past Tiedemann that netted him the middle sack. Following Bertie was Akin, never much of a hitter, but whang! he slammed that ball and the pellet smashed up against the right field fence with force enough to send Delmas to the plate. That was the first tally of the game and with Halla pitching the best of ball it looked good.

All was serene for the Dillonites until that ninth and then came one of those famous rallies.

BERT COY THE BIG HERO.

Bert Coy was the hope of the Oaks and the followers and Bert made good. With a healthy swing he started the ball to center and safely he was anchored at first base. Next comes Elmer Zasher and he comes one to center that netted him a dot in the hit column.

Right behind Elmer was the captain and the captain only gathered five hits out of six trips to the bat and this was one of the six that he slammed toward third.

That populated the bases and it was up to Tiedemann to be a hero.

Big John took a swing at the ball and hit it far enough to left to allow Coy to romp home with the run that tied it up.

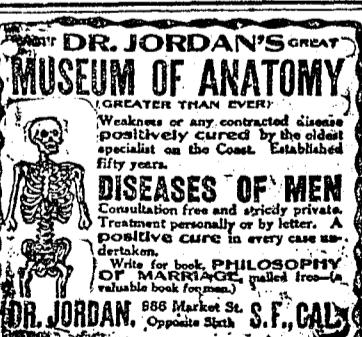

Mitze then popped to Howard, putting two in the hole. Up comes Ables and it was the intention of Pearce to bat for Harry. Harry said nay, so he polled one to center that Daley got after a long, hard run. That ended the inning, but the score was knotted.

NOW COMES THE BATTLE.

With the score knotted Halla and Ables settled back to fight it out and Harry won. But two hits did the Angels gather off the big Turk while the Oaks gathered seven from Halla. Thrills and nerve rackers filled in for those next four rounds and then came the heart breaking finish for the Angels.

Coy started the round and made a gallant try, but Pete Daley, whose fielding was all star for the day, ran back to the fence and put his mitts on the ball. One down. Patterson the recruit took a swing at the ball and sent it swiftly to the ground.

Up came the foxy skipper of the Oaks and wangled went the ball and bat together. Then there was another whamwhen the ball hit the rightfield fence. The next was big John and never more let it be said that John don't try, for the pokey he gave that ball almost took it out of the lot and sent Capt'n Harry over to third base.

Here was Mitze. Four times before Oakland had a man at third ready to come home, but the hit was not forthcoming. This time though it was different and when the ball sailed to the rightfield fence far and away over Heitmann's head everybody that was for Oakland gave a cheer and went homeward for the captain was over the part with the winning run of one of the best ball games ever played at Recreation park.

COLE 30-40-1912
IS ANNOUNCED

Pacific Motor Car Company,
Cole Agents, Make Public
Plans for Coming Year.

The Cole 30-40 for 1912 will, as heretofore, announce Colonel Bradbury of the Pacific Motor Car Co., be constructed on one chassis, using the same unit power plant that has characterized its success in previous years. The Timken full floating rear axle and Timken roller bearings had been added. The wheel base of the machine has been increased from 118 to 122 inches and the tire equipment from 34x4 to 36x4 inches.

Seven style bodies will be constructed on the Cole 30-40, as follows: Five-passenger touring car, four-passenger toy tonneau, roadster, speedster, coupe, limousine and London limousine. In addition to the last three models, states Colonel Bradbury, "President J. Cole of the Cole Motor Car Company, has gone into a market in which it is claimed considerable fall trade will develop. A noticeable change in the appearance of the Cole 30-40 cars is evidenced in the Queen Anne style of body panels and doors. All door latches are placed inside. These features resulted after a conference with several of the most prominent carriage builders in the country, friends and former co-workers of Mr. Cole. These gentlemen who set the standard of carriage building are firmly convinced that Mr. Cole has arrived at what the aristocratic public will require."

The Cole 1912 line will have nickel trimmings. All metal parts will either be nickel-plated or black-enamored. This combination with an ultra marine blue body finish, it is claimed, will give the car a distinctive, dignified appearance. An insignificant, but important feature, is the addition of a gasoline sight gauge that will save unpleasant incidents because of low gasoline.

The unit power plant that is used by the Cole has a true three-point suspension with a tilt to the motor of 2½ degrees that gives it a straight line drive, delivering all power to the rear wheels.

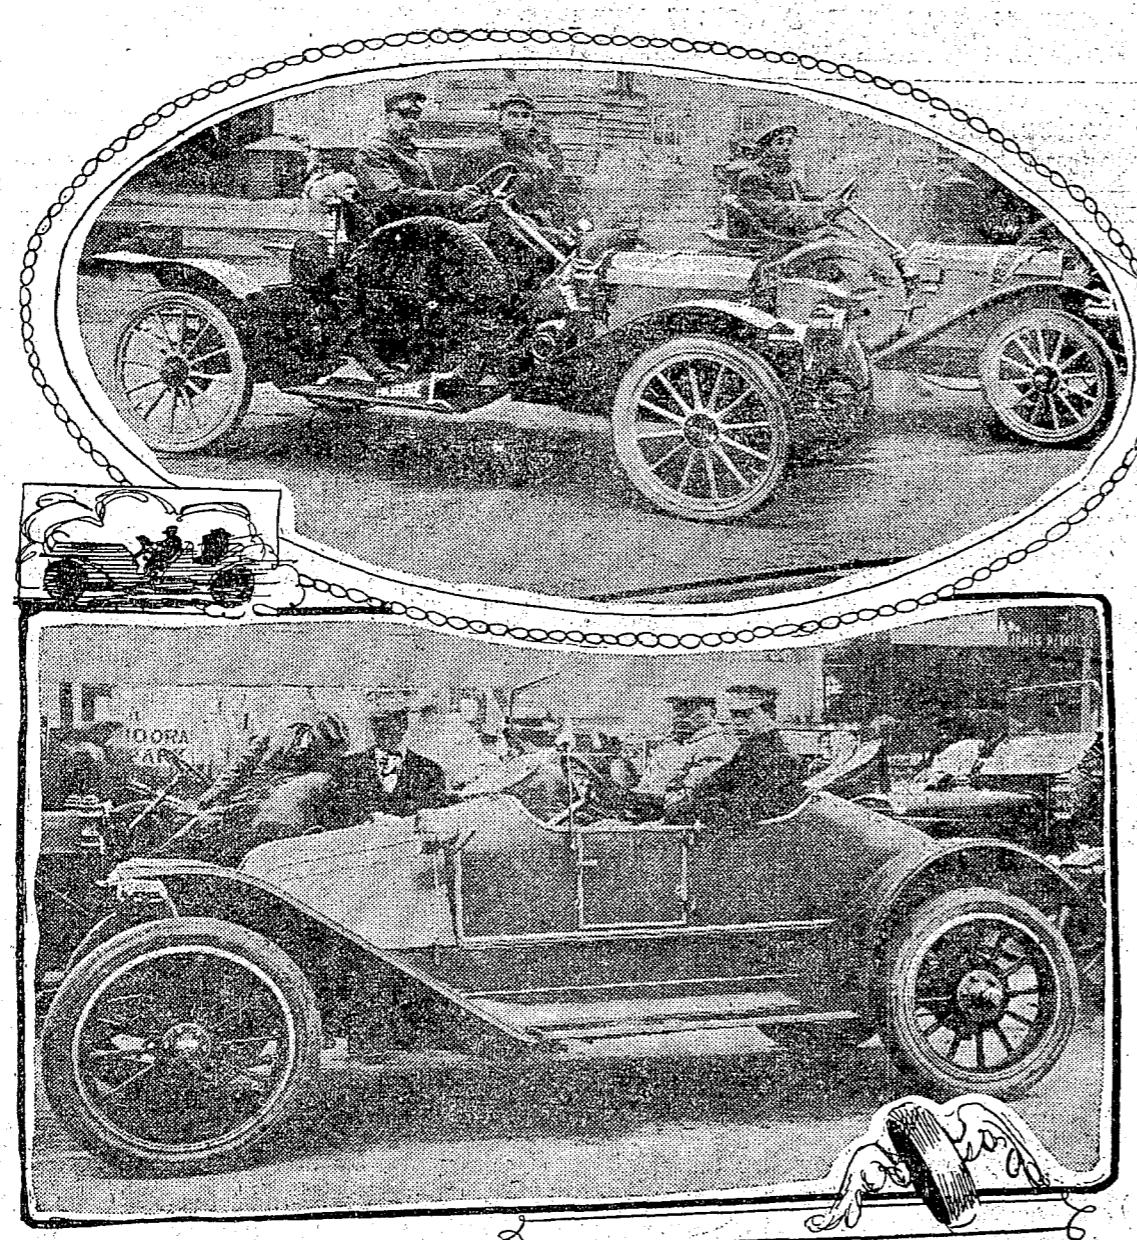

The new Cole 30-40 is destined that will sustain for the Cole 30-40 its reputation for quietness and protection from grit-sifting into the working parts and causing damaging friction. All moving parts are enclosed.

The control levers are placed inside on the five-passenger car, but on the outside of the toy tonneau and roadster. All bodies are interchangeable.

With the location already arranged, the ground purchased, and plans under way for a new factory, the product for the Cole Company for 1912, it is claimed, will continue to give this machine the prestige that it now holds in the automobile world.

Big Claims for "Speedo"

Two Studebaker Flanders Roadsters which left this morning on the Lake Tahoe Endurance run. At the wheel of the first machine is Stanley Jonas, while C. Smith is at the wheel of the other.

The Franklin Roadster which left this morning on Lake Tahoe run and is serving as THE TRIBUNE press car. John R. Taylor at the wheel and James Houlihan.

FRANKLIN COVERS ROUGH COUNTRY

Salt Lake Owner Covers Route Seldom Traversed By Motorists.

Touring over routes which frequently take them from fifty to one hundred miles from the nearest railroad station and traveling over roads which to Eastern motorists would appear to be unbrokeen country, are tests to which automobileists in the Western states frequently put their cars.

On a trip which had as a secondary purpose the investigation of agricultural conditions in Utah, George T. Odell of Salt Lake City recently drove a Franklin touring car 870 miles through Salt Lake valley, Bear Lake valley and that section of Utah where irrigation projects have been more recently developed.

On the trip Mr. Odell carried six passengers and the total distance was accomplished on ninety gallons of gasoline despite the rough, mountainous country traversed.

Mr. Odell says: "The beneficial effect of the government irrigation projects has increased the available acreage in Utah from 20 per cent to 33 1/3 per cent. Crop conditions this year are phenomenal, and there is an increase in production of anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent in most of the localities."

"Too much cannot be said about the roads, and I advocate a trip similar to the one I took to anyone and particularly to those who own an air-cooled machine. It would probably be difficult for water-cooled cars to cover the same country. I covered, not because there is not plenty of water to be had, but because it would be necessary to carry the water over the hills to their cars... The hills which they would have to climb would boil the water out before they reached the top. This has been my observation. My Franklin covered the entire trip without any effort."

NEW '36 CHALMERS TO SHOW HERE

Latest Creation in Automobiles
Will Be on Exhibition
Next Monday.

It is with great pleasure the Pioneer Automobile Company, 281 Twelfth street, Oakland, announce to the public, those who own cars and those who contemplate purchasing cars, that the latest creation in automobiles, the Chalmers "Thirty-six," with all its new features, self-starter, four-speed transmission, demountable rims, tire pump, long stroke motor, ventilated foredoors, equipment never heard of before at the price, will be at their salesroom, Monday, August 28. Open evenings, giving everybody the opportunity of seeing what progress has been made in automobile construction and refinement for the season of 1912. This car was shipped to the coast by express from the factory to satisfy the many persons waiting to place their orders. The demand has been beyond the most sanguine expectations of the Pioneer Automobile company, and we will advise those wanting early deliveries to place their orders now as they are being booked in rotation.

The self-starter and the compressed air to inflate tires are two features that will appeal to elderly people and ladies because it eliminates the cranking and hard labor connected with pumping up tires.

Spitdorff Gives Good Service on "Bulldog"

"The fact that the same magneto which was put on the 1910 Abbott-Detroit "Bull Dog" when it left the factory at Detroit nearly two years ago is still doing service in spite of its 31,000 miles of traveling around the borders of the United States and into forty-five states is a great source of pride to the house of Spitdorff," said P. E. Kempton, acting manager of the local Spitdorff branch, yesterday.

"When one considers that this magneto has been delivering ignition sparks at the rate of several thousand a minute for this marvelous journey of a year under every kind of road conditions to be met with on a trip like this it is something wonderful. Winter and summer, snow and desert heat, the car has never failed to move, and all this time while ploughing through snow and fording rivers,

COAST HIGHWAY GROWING LONGER

Mileage Is Being Extended Northward Through British Columbia.

Convention sites for the next four years have been definitely decided upon by the officials of the Pacific Highway Association. The announcement of these sites is made at the present time, so that persons intending to make the convention tours can lay their plans in ample time.

Next year's convention will be held at Shasta Springs; in 1913 at some city of southern California; in 1914 at Hazelton or Fort George, northern British Columbia; and in 1915 at San Francisco. With these rendezvous, which allow the tourist to successive meetings to cover practically all the territory along the route from Mexico to the distant north, one may become thoroughly acquainted with the highway itself from actual experience and observation.

During the past month a large number of inquiries have been made to members of the association, regarding the condition of the Pacific highway to British Columbia, and especially, in the northern part between Fort George and Hazelton. Little seems to be definitely known about this stretch at present. In response to the requests for information, the association is making every effort to collect data on the Fort George-Hazelton section, particularly as to whether or not it is at present passable.

Some time ago, when improvement work was being begun, two motorcyclists made the trip, finding it necessary to ship their machine only a small fraction of the way. Since then the road has been considerably improved and large sums spent by the provincial government. The association hopes that it will be possible to make a report on this important northern link of the international chain in a short time.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

"FRANK CHANCE SWEEPSTAKES."

Frank Chance, the "Peerless Leader" of the Chicago "Cubs," is not only a motorcycle rooster, but he has had the honor of naming the motorcycle race "named" for him and starting it.

It all happened at the Riverview Motordrome, Chicago—said to be the fastest motorcycle track in the world. Chance and all the members of his team were put up night and day with the women of honor in the Motordrome boxes, the race feature of the car, being the "Frank Chance Sweepstakes."

Chance, the motorcycle rooster, that started the riders and then danced up and down in his excitement when the riders streaked for "home."

"Slide, Graves, slide!" shouted Chance as his favorite came thundering to the tape at about 100 miles per hour.

Chance said it was "the fastest base-running" he had ever seen. Arthur Mitchell of New Orleans won the "Chance Sweepstakes."

MOTORCYCLE APOLOGIES

A motorcycle almost prevented a possible reconciliation between Ethel Barrymore and her husband, Russell Griswold Colt, after whom she had instituted proceedings for divorce. "Colt" was overtaken by a motorcycle policeman and charged with "reckless driving" after he had just passed the height of the automobile. "Colt" was navigating. When he was finally rounded up by Motorcycle Policeman Otto W. Payas at Washington, L. B. Losier in the big contest with the motorcycle policeman was hurrying to New York to catch a train for Canada, whether he has been summoned by Miss Barrymore, his wife. He begged to be allowed to proceed with his delay and the authorities, with a mental picture of the domestic bliss reigning in the "Colt" household, made things easy for the impatient husband and started him rejoicing to New York, where he caught a train for Montreal.

MOTORCYCLE AVIATORS. Two of the aviators who thrilled the highway was formally opened this month, F. J. McKenzie, M. P. P.—Government Agent Fletcher, and Alderman Hanson of New Westminster being the first persons to travel in an automobile over the new section, a nineteen-mile stretch along the old Yale road. Great difficulties were overcome which may be realized from the fact that four tons of powder were used to clear two miles of road. The Pacific Highway association cannot but feel greatly encouraged by the progressive measures the provincial government is taking in developing its share of the route.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES.

The Federation of American Motorcyclists has now more than 10,000 members, the 10,000th membership card going to R. P. Molitor of Santa Cruz, Cal. There were 655 new members in July, bringing the total membership to 11,000.

Sanctions have been issued as follows by J. P. Thornley, competition chairman of the Federation of American Motorcyclists: "Provisional," R. T. motorcycle club, ride meet, September 4; race meet, Santa Ana, Cal., September 4; New Jersey Motorcycle Club, road event, Newark to Atlantic City and return, September 4, and race meet at Troy, N. Y., August 19.

The Lima, O., Motorcycle Club will build a $2500 club house.

Harold Mulford and Archie Sparks of Pasadena, Cal., have just completed a tour of 1000 miles at a total expense of $3. Per mile the cost was about three-tenths of a cent, the distance being 1000 miles.

The Atlantic district of the Federation of American Motorcyclists will meet at Worcester, N. H., August 19. Dr. C. W. La Salle is vice-president of the Federation of American Motorcyclists for this district and will preside.

TWO MILLION APPLES UNDER A SINGLE ROOF

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 26.—Twenty thousand dollars in cash premiums, in addition to gold and silver trophies, will be awarded in competitions, free and open to all, at the fourth national apple show and harvest festival in Spokane, the last week in November. Plans have been completed to exhibit more than 2,000,000 of the highest grade commercial apples grown in the United States and Canada. In a temporary structure covering four and a half acres of ground, the features being 15 or more full carload displays.

STRENUOUS TEST FOR KRIT CARS

RAILROAD CROSSING

One of the delights of the friends who test motor cars is to originate some new stunt through which to put their cars while on the road testing them out. A tester who can take his car back to the factory and report to the superintendent that he has found a punishment for his car which it will stand without showing any damage is in line for promotion, for it is the weak spots that the Krit builders are looking for. Such tests bring out any defects which might probably lie in any of the parts in the car and these faults, if any, must be found before they leave the factory. Henry Johnson, one of the Krit testers at the big Detroit factory, originated a stunt the other day with testing out of the cars on the country roads just outside of town which beats anything ever tried in the way of a sensational test for an automobile.

WILL COMPETE FOR MOSS BEACH TROPHY

Oakland Lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood held its weekly meeting in Pythian Castle, Friday evening, and decided to send the drill team to Moss Beach to drill for the loving cup presented by Supreme President J. A. Foshay for the best team of Northern California.

TO SECURE DATA ON SUPPLY OF WELL WATER

Citizens of Oakland and Berkeley to Be Asked to Give Information.

MATERIAL SECURED TO BE GIVEN GOVERNMENT

J. H. Dockweiler and Corps of Experts to Make Report to Secretary.

Citizens of Oakland who own private wells were asked by the city authorities through Ben F. Woolner, city attorney, to aid in the collection of data as to the available water supply in the City of Oakland, to be presented to the Secretary of the Interior in November. This may be done by furnishing to a corps of experts, who are going about the city, any material as to flow, etc., which they may request. The data is being collected in connection with the proposed use of the Hatch-Hetchy valley as a reservoir site.

As a guarantee that these collectors of material are bona fide Attorney Woolner has issued the following letter to be presented by the men in the work:

August 15, 1911.

To whom it may concern:
Mr. J. H. Dockweiler has been designated by the cities of Berkeley and Oakland to prepare data desired by the Honorable, the Secretary of the Interior, in the showing to be made by the cities of San Francisco, Berkeley and Oakland, with regard to the use of the Hatch-Hetchy Valley as a Reservoir site.

The bearer is employed by Mr. Dockweiler to collect well data to be presented in the above matter. It is requested that the information he seeks in regard to wells be furnished by the parties having wells upon their premises. Respectfully,
(Signed) BEN F. WOOLNER,
City Attorney.

HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVASS.

Dockweiler, whose name appears at the head of the communication, has been hired by the city to carry on the work, with the aid of the corps of men. The importance of the collection of this data is that it will ascertain definitely the available supply of water for the future growth of the section. The experts already are acquainted with the supply of the local water companies, the Peoples and Spring Valley, but the records are not complete until the supply from private wells is included, which data can only be gotten by a house-to-house canvass among the owners of wells.

This data, when compiled, will be presented to the Secretary of the Interior, and is intended to show to that official that the maximum supply of water is not sufficient to the needs of the future, even twenty years hence, and that the Hatch-Hetchy reservoir project must be carried through. It is asserted that even if the local water companies develop their water reserves to their fullest capacity, that the supply will not be sufficient. The presentation of this data will be made by a corps of engineers of the State, headed by John R. Freeman, and including G. E. Grunsky, J. H. Dockweiler, and assisted by Percy Long, city attorney of San Francisco.

'FREE' NEWSPAPER PROVES FAILURE

Two Dailies in Capital of Oklahoma Decide to Give Up Fight.

OKLAHOMA CITY, August 26.—A test of the "free newspaper" ended here today when the Pointer and the Free Press, which for many months have made a stubborn fight for existence, were sold to C. B. Edgar, publisher of the Times.

The change of ownership marks the end of a newspaper war that has been waged here for the last three years. The free paper which had been given away by the thousands, had proved a heavy financial loss to their owners, it was said.

The Pointer probably was one of the first free papers of any magnitude ever started in this country. It established a complete plant and entered the field as vigorously as any paid paper ever did, maintaining a full staff of printers and editors and a telephone news service. Later the Free Press was launched to oppose it. As a result Oklahoma City had five papers and at times its streets were literally filled with free copies that had been thrust into the faces of pedestrians. Mr. Edgar, owner of the Times, only recently purchased that paper. He came to Oklahoma shortly after having made a success in the newspaper field at St. Joseph, Mo., and at other points.

EXPLODES BOMBS FOR SON'S ADVENT

Indianapolis Board of Public Safety Gives Greek Permission to Celebrate.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 26.—Predicting that on an approaching visit the stork to his home he would be blessed with a son, Agamemnon Caftouros, a Greek, obtained permission from the board of public safety a week ago to explode twenty-one bombs in honor of the event and Thursday night he let loose his fire works, for a ten-pound boy arrived.

The bombs, which cost Caftouros $100, were fired from the roof of his restaurant, to the great delight of the proprietor and members of the Greek colony.

Caftouros explained that when the Turks ruled Greece, it was the custom for the Greeks to fire guns when a male child was born, because it was believed he would be manhood fit his country's oppressors.

AUSTRIAN PRISONER PLUNGES TO DEATH

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 26.—With his wife and babe on their way from Austria to join him, John J. Jederowski, aged 34, an Austrian federal prisoner in the county jail, held on the charge of stealing $1,000 worth of his family's passage here, committed suicide by leaping from the second floor corridor. His brain was dashed out on the cement pavement of the Greek colony.

PLANS FOR GREAT PORT MATURING

This photograph gives an excellent idea of the work now being done by the City of Oakland in building the sea wall at the West End. The sign informs the thousands of persons who daily travel the Oakland Mole what Oakland is doing with this tract of land which is under control of the municipality. When this undertaking is accomplished an unrivaled harbor frontage will place Oakland in the very front rank of the great industrial cities.

CITY HIVE OF INDUSTRY FROM TIDELINE TO HILLS

Building Activity Continues and Flood of Home-Seekers Keep Local Real Estate Men Very Busy

Improvement in transportation facilities on this side of the bay and the ease with which residents from the outlying territory may reach the heart of Oakland has attracted the attention of numerous realty investors and during the last week sales of importance have been made in many instances to total strangers in the city who have sized up at a glance, as it were, the situation as one of promise and wonderful possibility for any person who has a small amount, or a large one, to invest in property.

From the bay shore to the hills there is something doing all the time in Oakland and the work going on is of such a character as to make a most elaborate showing to the casual observer, while to one familiar with the situation it speaks opportunity and a future for the city that may well make rivals sit up and take notice. Scarcely a day passes but what it is rumored that some new enterprise is contemplated locating here, and while many have materialized, there are more to come, and at this time there are pending a number of big deals in downtown property of considerable magnitude. Within the next few days, according to a well known operator, there will be several transactions that are now pending closed and they will be of sufficient importance to attract attention to the rise in values throughout the downtown district.

WORK ON QUAY WALL.

Among the undertakings that speak for advancement is the work now going on along the estuary where the quay wall being constructed by the city under bond issue is rapidly taking shape. When it has been completed it will make possible sites for many factories together with shipping facilities unparalleled. It is along the quay wall that the municipal belt line railroad will operate, taking in the western waterfront and docks as well as the inland towns, and districts, including Fruitvale, Elmhurst and the territory lying back of East Fourteenth street to the hills where large tracts are consistently being settled upon and where cottages of the wage-earner may be erected under favorable conditions. Farther along towards the city line and San Leandro there is also considerable building going on and it is a well known fact that as a healthful vicinity the district is second to no place on this side of the bay. There also the advantages of country life combine with that of the city and again the new rapid service which has been installed by the traction company makes it possible for the residents to reach the heart of Oakland within a very few minutes.

INLAND IS FAVORED.

Considerable activity in real estate has been noticed of late as centering in the Sacramento fair engrossed the attention of the Oakland Real Estate Association at the last meeting. The members unanimously voted their support to the special train, which is to be run on the Southern Pacific, from Oakland to Sacramento on August 30. L. W. Jefferson, the assistant secretary, was instructed to mail letters to every realty dealer in Oakland, requesting them to join the excursion.

The Oakland Real Estate Association is to have a special exhibit at the fair, and is co-operating with the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Exchange in the running of the special train. One fair is to be allowed by the company for the round trip, and there will be a dinner and observation car on the train. The tickets are to be good for seven days, but the special train will leave the Sixteenth street station at 7:30 a. m., August 30, and will leave upon return at 8:30 p. m. the same day.

The Oakland boosters are to be met with automobiles and will be royally entertained at Sacramento. Col. Theodore Gier, Frank Leish Jr., and Walter Walker of the Merchants' Exchange are the commissioners to the state fair for Alameda county, while Secretary A. A. Denison of the Chamber of Commerce, the Progress and Prosperity Committee, and the Oakland Real Estate Association are co-operating in the handling of the excursion.

The Oakland Real Estate Association at the quarters, which will be in charge of L. W. Jefferson, will have literature for distribution regarding Oakland properties and will exhibit attractive paintings and large framed photographs of the city.

which include two new theaters and many schools. Several new churches will soon be under way, all of them costing in the neighborhood of $100,000. For all of this work there will be required laborers, and where there is plenty of employment to be found there is bound to be prosperity.

PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT.

Never before in the history of the city have prospects been so bright for Oakland in every conceivable way. With the development of her harbor, the rearing of magnificent structures, the extension of transportation facilities, her prestige is continually on the climb with the result that every month sees numbers added to her population and all to the city's commercial benefit. Eastern bankers and manufacturers are rapidly coming to realize that this is an important field for their varied interests on the continental side of San Francisco bay, and with this fact in view they are taking time by the forelock and establishing themselves here.

With keen foresight, the public service corporations are preparing for future years and all improvements of a permanent nature are being made with the conviction that at no distant date their present facilities will be inadequate to the needs of the community. Builders are also taking this into consideration, and this is shown particularly in the large number of apartment houses that have been erected in the last twelve months in various parts of the city while still others are planned. Palatial homes continue to rise in the hillside district from where one of the most magnificent panoramas in the world is readily accessible by automobile and street car.

WILL REPRESENT RUSSIA.
KANSAS CITY, Aug. 26.—N. Krishanpofovich, agricultural commissioner of the Russian government, will represent Russia at the meeting of the national conservation congress in this city next month, according to a letter received today at headquarters. The first agricultural college to announce its delegates to the congress is that of Massachusetts at Amherst.

WILL HOLD CARD PARTY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—A card party will be held by the Christian Mothers' Society for the benefit of the building fund of the New Mission Dolores Church, in the Colonial room of the St. Francis Hotel, on Friday evening, September 15.

There are twenty-five valuable prizes to be given. The committee in charge is working strenuously to make this affair a success.

The active committee is as follows:

Mrs. Gorham, Mrs. M. Casey, Mrs. Rogerson, Mrs. Waters and Mrs.

Lynch.

NEW PARK SOON TO GO ON MARKET

Berkeley's Growth Northward
Demands Increase in High-Class Residence Section.

BERKELEY, Aug. 26.—Improvement work in the North Berkeley tracts and a steady sale of lots in that section, continues to be a feature of local real estate activity.

It was announced today that the new Berkeley Park subdivision of forty-five acres, adjoining Thousand Oaks, will be placed on the market within two weeks. This tract is in a desirable location, and within easy walking distance of the new electric lines. The Northbrae car line is to be extended to Thousand Oaks.

In an interview today L. M. VerMeer of the Dodge-VerMeer Company, reported that Arlington road in the Arlington Heights tract, is now completely graded and will be macadamized within a few months. The street work in the main tract is progressing rapidly; sidewalks being laid and curbs and gutters constructed. Lots in the subdivision are selling division are selling rapidly, according to VerMeer.

The Byron Jackson Iron Works has decided to dispose of a large number of residence lots adjoining the manufacturing center of West Berkeley, at Carlton. The property in question, together with a large tract, reserved for factory sites, was purchased three days ago, the San Francisco fire of 1906, and since that time a number of concerns have begun operations. It is announced that the Southern Pacific intends erecting a modern station in mission style in the center of the Carlton residence subdivision for the benefit of passengers using the double track electric belt line, which runs through the subdivision.

Building permits have been issued during the week as follows:

Two-story 7-room dwelling, Parker and Piedmont ave. for B. B. McGinnis; $1450.

One-story shop, Center street and Mission, for Wittich & Wagner; $250.

One-story 4-room dwelling, Curtis near Hopkins street, for Floyd Bushy; $1000.

One-story 4-room dwelling, Delaware and California street, for Joe Barnettler; $1000.

One-story 5-room cottage, Fairview near California street, for Ollie T. Evans; $1000.

One-story 3-room cottage, Derby near Grove street, for G. L. Goin; $800.

Two-story 4-room addition, 2225 Hearst avenue, for John B. Metcalfe; $2600.

Two-story 16-room dwelling, Bancroft way near Bancroft, for Phi Gamma Delta Alumni Association; $15,000.

One and half-story 5-room dwelling, Fulton near Derby street, for G. Johnson; $2100.

One-story 5-room dwelling, Ellsworth street near Stuart, for S. T. Dodson; $1800.

One-story 3-room addition, Channing way and Bowditch, for Miss Wilson; $1000.

Merchants of Berkeley, as well as the real estate brokers, are jubilant today over the favorable attitude of the government engineers who visited this city Thursday toward the proposed extension of the bulkhead line bayward on the Berkeley waterfront, the reclaiming of many acres of land. The creation of factory sites here in conjunction with the improvement of the waterfront by Oakland and Richmond would add greatly to the volume of manufacturing on the east side of the bay.

The Southern Pacific and Key Route companies are showing increased activity in the completion of their local electric lines, and it is predicted by real estate men that both systems will be in operation before the end of the year, perhaps in November. Work is being rushed on the Shattuck, Avenue, California, and Ninth street lines of the Southern Pacific and the Sacramento street line of the Key Route.

C. C. Young, of the Mason-McDuffie Company, declares that the market, as he now sees it, is entirely pleasing and that a prosperous autumn for the real estate dealers is promised.

"Business during the past three months has been twice as good on an average as during the corresponding period last year, and for several weeks this summer was three times as good," declared Young.

Come, Farm Along Our Railroad

We have just completed the CENTRAL CALIFORNIA TRACTION line, an electric interurban railway running between Sacramento and Stockton, at a cost of over THREE MILLION dollars.

Before construction work began, several thousand acres of high-class land, through which our road has been built, were purchased at low prices.

There are four distinct reasons why this land was purchased:

First—Settlers were needed who will till the soil and produce freight and passenger traffic.

Second—Speculators might buy up these lands and would hold them for big profits, and thereby the railroad would have to wait for its shipping.

Third—Special inducements could not then be offered to farmers if the owners of the land were not interested in the railroad.

Fourth—Producers along the railroad were more desirable than profits from the sale of land, therefore the land must be sold at much lower prices.

WE WANT SETTLERS IMMEDIATELY

The sooner they begin to produce the sooner the revenue for the railroad will begin. If you will come and cultivate a small farm along our electric line, we will offer every encouragement and opportunity to make a farm a success. The time is past when the advice of agriculturists, horticulturists and soil experts is needed; if you desire you can have your house and improvements built for you; your land fenced and your pump installed and can pay for same on easy payments; in fact, every co-operation will be given to get you started. Any effort on your part will spell success.

The land is located between SACRAMENTO, STOCKTON and SAN FRANCISCO, giving a farmer first call from either of these three large market cities, which represent a populous district of over ONE and a HALF MILLION people.

The owners of this land, not being in the real estate business, have appointed Stine & Kendrick as their exclusive selling agents.

We advise you to act IMMEDIATELY.

CONSIDERING THE HIGH PRICES

at which most unimproved property is held, on this side of the bay, it is almost impossible for a person who has priced residence lots in any of the many tracts that are offered for sale from time to time, to believe that it is possible to purchase lots suitable for residence or business purposes at prices ranging from $125 to $500 in a restricted district within the city limits of Oakland, thirty minutes from Twelfth and Broadway and forty-five minutes from San Francisco. Streets are graded, macadamized and sewered. Electricity and city water on the property. Ten per cent down and $5.00 a month will secure one of these lots.

If you will call at our office we will be pleased to take you out to see the property. Office open Sunday until 10:30 a.m.

NORTHWEST INDIANS TO ASK UNCLE SAM TO PAY

SPOKANE, Aug. 26.—Richard Adams, a half-breed Delaware Indian, who represented the Choctaw tribe in a similar action and secured $12,000, has been retained by the Nez Perce Indians of northern Idaho to ask Uncle Sam to pay him $15,000,000 from the United States.

Danish Crown Prince Will Visit America This Fall

CROWN PRINCE and CROWN PRINCESS of Denmark, who will visit the United States.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The Crown Prince of Denmark will be a distinguished visitor to the United States this fall and will probably visit President Taft at his summer home in Massachusetts. Crown Prince Christian of Denmark is starting on a tour of the Danish West Indies and after visiting the Islands he will come to New York. He will undoubtedly be the guest of the United States government and will visit Washington, Annapolis and West Point. Then he will go on to Canada. He will travel on a warship which will have for escort a cruiser and a gunboat.

It is not definitely known whether Princess Alexandrine, his wife, will accompany him, but it is understood that he comes alone.

Prince Christian is the son of King Frederick, who succeeded to the throne five and a half years ago. The king was 68 years old in June, so the Crown Prince has possibly only a few years to wait before he succeeds to the throne; but he comes of a long lived family. His grandfather held the throne for 43 years.

The crown of Denmark, according to the Statesman's Year Book, was elective from the earliest times. It did not become hereditary until the year 1660. But it was held by the House of Oldenburg from 1448 to 1863. When King Frederick VII died the powers of Europe turned the sovereignty over to the House of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, in which it has remained since.

Prince Christian, who will be 41 in September, is married to Princess Alexandrine of Mecklenburg. They have two children aged 12 and 11 respectively.

Increase of 8799 Tons Is Order Record for Month of June.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—A remarkable increase of stocks of news print paper during June is shown in statistics issued by the American Paper and Pulp Association, and filed with the Commissioner of Corporations, Herbert Knox Smith. The increase amounted to 8799 tons, due to a decrease in shipments and a revision of mill inventories at the close of the half year.

The highest daily output ever reported was made during the month, 4246 tons. The normal production, as reported for the month, was 110,890 tons; total shipments 102,983 tons and the total stocks on hand at the end of the month 43,710 tons. These returns are for fifty companies. The stocks on hand at the close of June 1, 1910, for forty-five companies, were 24,710 tons.

The movement of other grades was irregular. There were sharp decreases in the production and shipments of book and wrapping paper and a moderate decrease in stocks.

For all grades combined, the production shows a decrease from 304,350 tons in May to 301,945 tons in June and shipments, a decrease of from 296,964 tons to 289,851 tons, while stocks on hand increased from 150,002 tons to 161,221 tons.

BURGLARS PACK LOOT; ARE FRIGHTENED AWAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The home of Mrs. Constance Bolomey, of 818 Arkansas street, was entered by burglars, who overturned a good deal of the furniture and had packed up a lot of clothing when they were frightened away by the sudden appearance of the owner. There were two men engaged in the business and each fled in a different direction. The woman was unable to follow or to give an accurate description of them to the police.

DRUM CORPS BALL

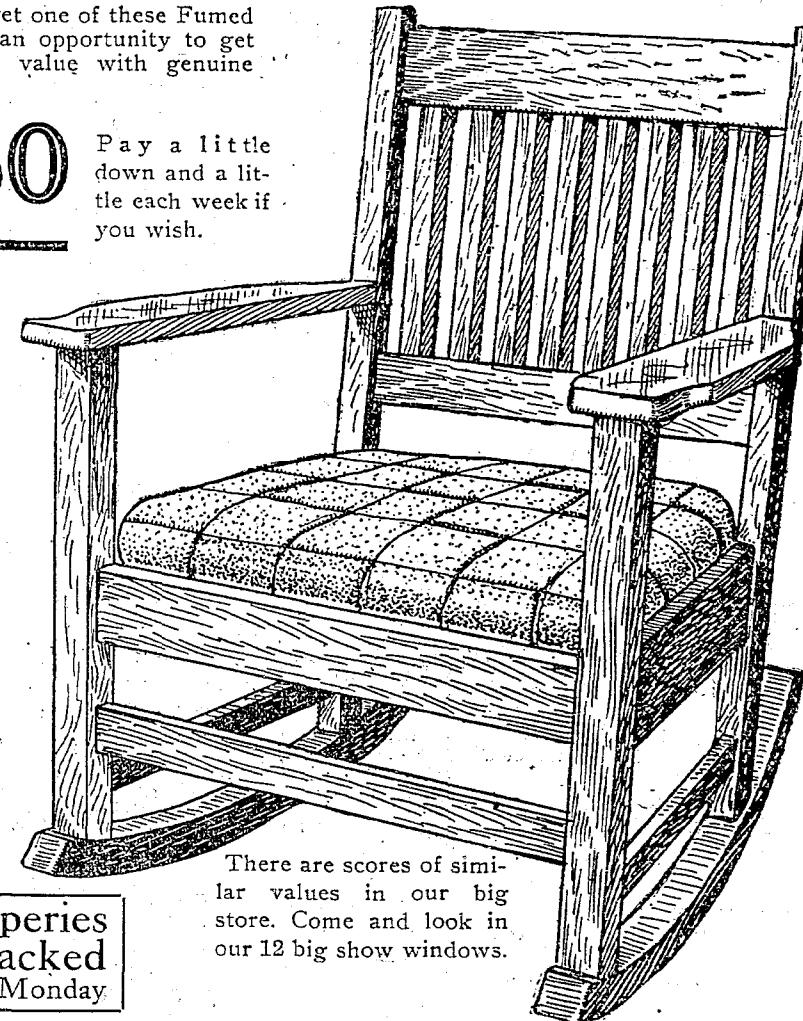

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The Girls' Drum Corps, assisted by the Green Valley Improvement Club, will give a grand ball at Guadalupe hall, 4561 Mission street, this evening. Mayor McCarthy and the rest of the union labor party candidates have promised to attend.
